Life 100,000 Years Ago.

Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of bears, who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was in constant danger from wild beasts. To day the danger, as shown by A. W. Brown of Alexander, Me., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Lungs, Colds, Stubborn Coughs, and incipient Pneumonia, its the best medicine on earth. 50c and $1 00. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. Trial bottle free.

Local News.

—J. L. Crane has a new ad. this week.

—Dr. L. M. Kanagy, of Atwood, was in town Tuesday.

—Rev. Dr. Rhodes, of St. Louis, Mo., will preach in the Methodist church Sunday morning at 10:30.

—Bert Burnett leaves this week for Waverly, Iowa, to accept the position of chief chemist in a sugar factory, where he was assistant two years ago.

—Agent Gonser, of the Pere Marquette, tell us that the ticket sales for July 1909 exceeded those of July 1908 by $2,441.80. How like sixty look option did hurt Charlevoix!

—The lighthouse tender, Sumac was in port Friday. On board with Commander Edgar, U. S. N., lighthouse inspector, was Capt. Kossuth Niles, U. S. N., member of the lighthouse board.

—Capt. Roy Marshall, of the Salvation Army, spent several days last week with his parents, in this city. Capt. Marshall is at present conducting a camp-meeting near Grand Rapids, at the close of which he has been ordered to take charge of the work at Owosso.

—We notice that some of the Grand Rapids dailies are publishing correspondence from Duxbury and Boyne City reciting the doings at Boy City. It will now be in order for some enterprising Charlevoix correspondent to send in something about Hoy View and White & Co.'s new saw mill.

—The first railroad wreck to occur within the corporation of Charlevoix took place in the yard yesterday (Wednesday). The south bound 9:05 express, in taking the siding, dumped the tender on its side, derailing the front trucks of the baggage car. A few passengers were shaken up and the train taken out, minus the baggage, with only about an hour's delay. Nobody hurt.

—An early morning stroll along Bridge street will be very interesting to those who desire to obtain knowledge of the trade feature of the resort business. From 6:30 to 7:30 the sidewalks at the groceries and fish markets resemble South Water street, Chicago. From that time until nine o'clock the deliveries are to cottages, but many go to hotels and boarding houses.

—"The Tiger and the Lamb" which was first produced last Spring by Eugene Moore's latest effort. Mr. Moore has given to the public a clean, healthy, absorbing play. He has left the bright white lights of the City, avoided the problem and graft questions of the day, and gone to the pure fresh air of the mountains of Eastern Tennessee. His characters live and breathe in the big out doors of that picturesque "Skyland." It is a healthy change from the "reek of the rotten fens" of many of the present day dramas. "The Tiger and the Lamb" will be at Charlevoix Theatre Monday Aug. 9th.

—Hon. W. J. Pearson, of Boyne Falls, was in the city yesterday.

—Antoine Richasia, formerly of this city, but now of Traverse City, was in town Sunday.

—A truly great attraction—"The Tiger and the Lamb," at Charlevoix Theatre Friday evening of this week.

—Col. Murphy's steam yacht Nesita, of Detroit, was in port Friday. She is one of the finest yachts on the lakes, costing $75,000.

—Among the passengers on the Manitou Sunday for the Chicago-Mackinac round trip, were Gen. H. A. Wheeler and family. Miss Florence Smith joined them here for the Mackinac trip.

—Both fire companies got out in lively time Saturday morning to put out a fire that started in the Taylor bake shop, on Bridge street. Two lines of hose were ready for business in ten minutes from the alarm, but one did the business before much damage was done.

—The lighthouse engineer's tender Hyacinth was in port Thursday and Friday of last week, with Col. Bromwell, engineer, on board. Mrs. Bromwell has been a summer sojourner here for several years, and occupies a cottage with her mother, Mrs. M. T. Scott, who is the national president of the Society of the daughters of the American Revolution.

—The librarian of the public library has the following report to offer for the month of July: Number fiction given out, 410; juvenile fiction, 165; religion, 1; sociology, 3; natural science, 9; fine arts, 11; literature, 35; history, 13; travel 5; biography, 19; total number, 670; daily average, 23; number of new patrons enrolled during the month, 27; total number of patrons, 853; fines collected $2.06. "The Two Young Inventors," the gift of Master Fred Kittle, of Chicago, has been added to the library.

—Traverse City Record: The Northern Michigan asylum in a short time will receive almost a ton of salt whitefish, the result of Deputy Game Warden Smith's seizure of 22 packages of fish at Manistee Friday. The fish were disguised by having their heads cut off but were identified as small whitefish by C. K. Hoyt of Grand Haven, deputy game warden, and a member of Manistee fish commission. The shipment was made by James McCann of St. James island and was consigned to Wolf Attenaweay, 4501 Prairie avenue Chicago, McCann being a sort of a jobber. The shipment was billed as suckers and Menominees but by the color and markings the fish were identified as whitefish. They will be held as evidence and then turned over to the local asylum.

—Col. M. J. Waring's production of "The Tiger and the Lamb" does not carry a menagerie, it is not an animal show in any respect, but a very strange, intense drama. The Tiger is a lazy, easy going, church-going sort of a man who ought to be in a cage. The Lamb is a sweet innocent girl whom the Tiger expects to marry, but she, loving and being loved by his greatest enemy, naturally the Tiger doesn't get her. The play has been called a poem. The dialogue is clean cut, terse and to the point—no time is spent in explanations—the situations are startling and speak for themselves—surprise after surprise is presented to the audience in astonishing rapidity—there is not a dull moment in the prosecution, the comedy vein which runs all through the play is clean, healthy and humorous. "The Tiger and the Lamb" is one of the real good plays and will be at Charlevoix Theatre, Monday Aug. 9.

—Mr. Joner McCrorey, of Greenville, N. C., joined his wife here yesterday at the F. G. Hines home on Park avenue.

—The fire department was called out Monday evening to the music of the fire alarm, and found it to be only a bonfire on Antrim street.

—D. S. Dayton will leave Friday for Baldwin to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the West Michigan Development Bureau.

—Postmaster James Hoehley, J. Earl Brackett, W. F. Searl and editor Churchill, all of Petoskey, came over in an auto Wednesday and paid the SENTINEL editor a visit.

—General Superintendent Cook, of Chicago, and district superintendent Fitzpatrick, both of the Western Union Telegraph Co., were in the city Tuesday. They made a side trip to Boyne City, where an office will be installed some time in August or early in September.

—Manager Fischer, of the swimming pool, announces that some time about the middle of the month there will be an aquatic carnival at the pool, embracing all sorts of swimming and diving competitions and other features. Those desiring to enter for any event of the carnival should notify Mr. Fischer as early as possible.

—E. C. Ware, one of the best known merchants and cottage owners of the Charlevoix Summer Home Association, died suddenly in his Chicago office one day last week. He was found lying on a couch dead, and it is supposed that his death was due to the extreme heat. He had but just given instructions to prepare his Charlevoix cottage for occupancy.

—Robert A. Miller, of this city, has sold his home here, and has removed to Traverse City where he will live with his son Archie, who is employed in the asylum. Mr. Miller is one of the old timers whose going away will be deeply regretted by a host of warm friends. "Bob" came to this section about fifty years ago from Germany, and has lived in or near Charlevoix more than forty years. In all these years no one ever heard of his doing anything unbecoming a good man and a good citizen. The departure of such a man is a distinct loss to the community. May his years yet be many and peaceful.

—Twenty-two packages of salted menominees and suckers shipped to Chicago by a Northern Michigan Transportation Co. boat by James McCann, of St. James, this week were seized by the game wardens at Manistee as illegally caught whitefish. McCann will fight the matter in the courts. Doubtless the warden called in Manistee fishermen to identify the whitefish. It is well known that menominees are never caught in those waters. No one can make us believe that James McCann has knowingly shipped illegally caught fish. There is not a fisherman on the lakes who more scrupulously observes the law than he. Firm in the conclusiveness of this fact, he will demonstrate it in court, and we wish him success. It is quite evident that the wardens have run up against a proposition that will develop a lively scrap.

BOY CITY GOVERNMENT

The election was in progress at Hoy City as we went to press last week, putting on between "hay and grass" with respect to that important event. Of course there was never an election in which there was not an issue on which the voters shape their policies and conducted their campaign. The one fundamental doctrine on which there was non-partisan harmony was that embraced in the Hoy City motto—"Play Square."

The "Land Party" and the "Water Party" each fought for supremacy, and the former won by the narrow margin of 28 votes on mayor. The two "platforms" were built upon the question as to whether lands sports or water sports were best calculated to promote the welfare of the community. The Australian ballot was used—the form of ticket being identical with that used at all elections in Michigan. Thus the boys have had impressed upon their minds a lesson that will prove of value to them hereafter. It was a very close contest until 75 boys came down from the Beulah Home and threw their influence and votes in favor of the land party.

Following are the officers elected. Mayor, Edward Crumpacker, of Hammond, Ind.; Clerk, Raymond Wright; chairman board public works, Kenneth Teasdale; board of public works, King Trimble and James Goldthwaite. Mayor Crumpacker is a son of Judge Crumpacker, of Hammond, Ind., and is a level-headed, capable young gentleman, who doubtless will govern with a firm but kindly hand.

The "administration" was duly inaugurated Wednesday evening in the big tent, and it was a dignified and interesting function. The governor of Ohio, Hon. Judson Harmon, who is the most prominent candidate of the "sane" democracy for president, was present and gave the boys a good talk. Judge Mayne, of Charlevoix and Judge Jewell, of Grand Rapids, followed with appropriate remarks and the Boy City government was in full force. The attendance of visitors was large.

Sunday was a "big day" again, and the program was interesting. The attendance was not as large as was desired, but it was doubtless due to the threatening weather that kept many at home for fear of getting wet. It is understood that the City will be continued through the month of August, and it is expected that the citizenship will be largely increased this week and next. The best Chautauqua days are yet to come.

The fare from Charlevoix on all land and water conveyances has been reduced to ½ cents the round trip. The experience of the management thus far makes it certain that Boy City is a permanent fixture. In this initatory venture it has been an experiment with the parents and the general public, but as the purpose and benefits of the enterprise are widely known and generally approved it is expected that next year the citizenship and strength of the project will be greatly augmented.

The Antrim County Fruit growers association met at Alden on Saturday, members attending from Elk Rapids, Central Lake, Bellaire and Mancelona. Prof. L. H. Taft of the Michigan Agricultural college gave the principal lecture. The attendance was smaller than very enthusiastic and many new orchard will be planted there next year.

Traverse City Record: C. W. H. Smith, assistant United States engineer, arrived in Traverse City Saturday to confer with the officers of the board of trade relative to the requirements in Traverse City for a breakwater. It will be remembered that in the senate rivers and harbors bill the expense of the preliminary examination of the harbor with a view of definite survey was authorized. Mr. Smith is here to secure the necessary data.

CONCERNING TARVIA

There Seems to Be a Question About That Substance Being Useful.

Inasmuch as the Charlevoix common council has adopted the Tarvia composition for use in the future street macadam, the following from the Traverse City Eagle: may be of interest:

"The work on the Fifth street pavement has been discontinued until it can be determined what is the reason that the tarvia compound will not work satisfactorily. A portion of the paving was laid under the instruction of an expert who was sent here by the Barrett company, makers of the compound, but up to the present time it has failed to harden according to the specifications and as it was properly put down City Engineer Martin considered it best not to proceed with the work until the pavement that has been laid has been looked over by the tarvia people.

"In the meeting of the board of public works on Friday night the matter of the Fifth street pavement was thoroughly considered, the members of the board and the city engineer going into all the details of the same. It has been announced that the work of the pavement had been halted because of the improper condition of the tarvia compound, and so far it has been impossible to ascertain the real cause for the trouble. The part of the street covered by the stuff was directed by the company's expert, but that does not make the matter satisfactory. Mayor Germaine has visited Muskegon and found that even after several weeks trial the stuff is acting badly.

"When the street was ordered paved with tarvia it was known that no one here knew anything of the process, hence Engineer Martin has been trying to find someone who does know, but has failed to find that person up to this time. He recommended to the council, at that time that the street work might better be let by contract with a bond from the builders as to the materials and finished condition of the street and now that recommendation is to be repeated, with the additional suggestion that a committee be sent to other cities where the tarvia streets are in use in order to get complete information regarding it.

"There has been considerable talk going around about the tarvia used in the preparation for the tarvia being insulted therefor, but that is not believed by some of the officials with whom the Eagle talked, but they favor a complete understanding before the work is to be continued. This will cause delay, but it is down in the line of the conservative policy of the officials to save additional expense and trouble."

Just Casual Observations

Laid away in the old village archive is the record of a franchise granted to a syndicate for the construction of a street railway from the Belvedere to the railway station. Its present status is a reminder of blasted hopes or the memory of a joke—it matters little which.

Isn't it about time for that time-honored ignis fatuus—the Traverse City and Petoskey electric shore road to sparkle again? When fake promoters are killed off and reputable people get hold of the project we believe it can be made to assume a form and shape that can give encouragement.

The big red autos are very much in evidence on the streets of Charlevoix these fine mornings an hour and up. And there are others.

This is the banner year. The orchards are groaning under their burden of ripening fruit, the fields are ablaze with growing crops, and the farmer smokes his evening pipe in contentment. The sugar factory people are housing and the potato buyers are looking northward for the fall digging with big wads of greenbacks for the diggers. The cord-stacks already spell fat hogs for killing time, and we are already whetting our appetites for home-smoked ham and sausage.

CHAPTER XXI.

The night wind of the calm blew cold in their faces as they stepped out upon the Great River platform. There was a bluff of snow in the air and Hardin felt swiftly unclothed. The colors of the train and the blood of the Hardins, long gone by, for long years dwelt monumental in his imagination, flashed from the great figure muffled in a long sister coat down the platform toward the vestibule from which the train had disembarked.

"Hello, Hardin!" he cried, his jewelry "there's only one like that. Tired mean big, Hardin?"

"Good morning, gentlemen," said Hardin politely, turning from the girl and walking porter took his bags from him. "Has the boy been found yet?"

"No, sir."

"I should have gone on home to night if I had known this. But what are you doing here?"

"Looking for the boy in a few words. They were following a slight clue, and I was going next to the old homestead place, in the hope of finding Great Porter there. Saxton was holding a colloquy with the driver of the station hack who had come to send passengers on and he turned off with the man to get a backboard.

The porter was certain that his injuries go deeply and the engine steamed off with a doleful cry of the whistle. The porter had gathered up the bishop's things and waited his orders to step aboard.

"Never mind," the bishop said to him; "I won't go to-night. The train will be ready soon and the bishop turned on his heel and left the porter to wonder what comes of Hardin. "We won't need our boys. We can leave them with the station agent."

Whenton surged forward eagerly, glad to have something to do, he had not slept and was grateful for the sense of darkness which after him out from the shelter.

When Whenton came into the station, the agent rose from curiously as he looked up from his telegraphic key and spoke promptly to cure for the bags. He recognized Saxton and Whenton and supposed that they were going to Founderer's on church business. Saxton drew up to the platform with the he shouted.

"All ready!" he said and the three men climbed in, the bishop and Whenton in the back seat and Hardin by Saxton, who drove.

The road proved to be in better condition than Hardin had expected, and he kept the pinions at their work with his whip. The horses, fresh from the stable, shot the men's voices, and they crossed trying to talk. The bishop was silent, but Hardin felt his breast, sobered, he had forgotten the trick of talking sleep when and where he could.

Whenton felt the smoothing of his hands and feel in the cold air, and he had resumed the discomfort, as a man long used to a particular sensation of pain, or cause a new one that uneven a continuing. Hardin was made the greatness on which he might have excused himself from taking the bishop's place. The good could be more absent than this situation on a retreat which might well have twitter have been left to professional objectives. But it seemed a for any lack in his desk at the bank, and to the tasks he really enjoyed. In a few hours the daily routine would be in progress. The familiar scenes of the open country before him—the clerks taking their stations, the busy clicking of the big books upon the desks as they were brought from the vault; the jingle of coin in the cages as the cashiers counted and made ready for the day's business. He saw himself at his desk, the responsive officer of the most substantial institution in Clarkton. He felt the pressure of his book's pledge, his position and dignity and authority.

But he was on William Porter's errand, he assumed himself walking from the bank from a fruitless quest, but one which would attract attention in Clarkton. If they found the boy and released him safely, he would share the thanks and the praise which would be the reward of the morning's party. He had no idea that Great Porter would be captured; and he even planned to help him escape if he could do so.

They wear forward slowly. The clouds were same completely shattered now and the stars were fewer. Suddenly Saxton brought the mules to a halt and pointed to a dark pile that loomed ahead of them. The Folletown home stood forth sombre in the thin starlight.

Saxton gave the reins to Hardin and jumped off. "You stay here and I'll reconnoiter a bit," he said. He walked swiftly toward the great barn which lay between the house and the road. The men sat in the place. He crept on as high as he could from the ground and felt the brightness of his top rail. He had brought with him a key to a rear door, and he crept around to the back of the house and he hurried off the house was not occupied.

At the corner nearest the river, glass suddenly crumbled under his foot. The windows were deeply embrasured all over the house, and he could not determine where the glass had fallen from. Some windows were all intact when he left, he was sure, for the moon had risen high enough to shine upon panes. Ran his fingers over the smooth glass, and he instantly touched a broken edge. As he was feeling the frame to see if he could fix the opening, the low whinny of a horse came distinct from behind the barn.

He stood perfectly quiet listening, and he was amazed to hear the stamp of a hoof on the wooden floor of the hall. He backed off toward the door, and he was swept around in front of the house, and waited, but all remained quiet. He ran back through the barn and hitched the mules to the corral to the other men, who were talking about the blackbird pudding.

"There's something or somebody in the house," he said. He told them of the broken window and of the sounds he had heard. "Whoever's there has no business there and we may as well turn and out."

The door opened easily and John stepped into the lower hall. The place was pitch dark. He remembered the position of the strides of furniture as he had left them so his last visit, and started across the hall toward the stairway, using his lantern warily. When half way, he heard the whinny of a horse which he could not see. A moment later an animal shook away from him in the darkness and was still again. Then another horse whinnied in the stable, and a broken glass he had found on the outside. There were, then, two horses from which he argued that there were at least two persons in the house. He felt the door and felt the bolts at several heights, and drew the bolts at top and bottom. At the doors swung open slowly Hardin ran up to see if anything was wanted.

"All right," said Saxton in a low conspirative mighty quiet. If they're here, but there's no doubt about the horses. You stay where you are and I'll explore a little."

The horses stamped fretfully as he went toward the stairway, but all was quiet about. He felt his way slowly up the stairs, and, whose heavy dust stuck to his fingers. Having reached the upper hall he paused to take food, bracing the his memory brought back gradually the image of the rooms. In putting out his hand he touched a door, and pushed it slowly on its wire and grated harshly against the crack jamb of the door. At the same instant he heard a noise directly in front of him as if some one moving about in the room at the end of the stairs. The knob of a door he touched was turned, the door slowly waited, crouched down, and drew his revolver from the side pocket of his coat. The door stuck in the frame, but being pushed hard, yielded to John's force. The person who had opened the door stepped back into the room and retreated a step.

Saxton crept softly across the hall, leaving the revolver into his hand ready for use. A man could be heard muttering.

"Hurry up, boy, it's time we were out of this."

The owner of the voice now emerged at the door and Saxton was ready to be pushing some one in front of him. The man was slightly taller than John, and knew that he had found Great Porter, for the boy was in his grasp. Saxton had got the boy whether he caught his adversary or not.

The man was carrying the lantern in his right hand and Saxton felt for it with his left, as he came well out of the door. Saxton had the boy kicked the lantern from the man's hand. At the same moment a pistol in the hand of the other drew blue lard and slapped in front of him. The lantern crashed against the wall and went rolling down the stairs, the pistol fell from the man's hand, and the two men had his own lantern and the hall was in a blaze.

"Stop where you are, Sander," said Saxton, "I'll shoot. Do you know you know you remember me." He spoke in a low, tense voice.

The lantern, rolling down the stairway, danced the terror, which stamped resolutely on the floor. The wind whistled through the house. The hand Saxton, he assumed the man to be, cautiously feeling his way toward the door.

"You may as well stop there," Saxton said, without moving and keeping the pistol in his left hand. He spoke in sharp, cool tones. "I'm right, friend," he added in the same key. "Come in here, Hardin called, and the old bishop (colored, bearing Hardin carfull) by in his great arms. The others helped him to place his burden on the long table at which in Folletown's day many lighted companies had gathered. They peered down upon him in the uneven light.

"It was another—another of your tell chances," said Warry faintly and slowly, the words coming hard, but all in the room could hear. He looked from one to another. "The boy's safe and well. We got what we came for. Just once I just—just—just what I came for. I wasn't fair—in the dark that way—. His voice failed. He lay very still for several minutes.

"I never—quite arrived—quite—arrived," he went on, with his eyes on the old bishop, as if this were something that he would understand; "but you were forgiven all that." He sinnes in a patient, tired way.

"You have been a good man, Warry, there's nothing that can trouble you."

"I was really doing better, wasn't I, John?" he went on, still smiling. "You had helped me—you—he looked from his young friend to the elder one, with the intentness of his near-sighted gaze, "Tell them—the eyes closed and his voice grew weak—"I was doing better—tell them at the bank—Evelyn—the light of all my—life—over."

The wind sweeping across the plains blows the sickness in the peaceful manner of far away to the lonely house. The dying man had noted goals on the dying man's bend; his voice rose in sympathetic tones—the voice—the breath—he remembered them from a forgotten time—the voice—the voice—very and sweetness—the voice—the—" Saxton drew up to his knee, and a sob broke from them. "The Lord bless thee, and keep thee. The Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the old man's voice was trembling low, as he spoke the words. "The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee and give thee peace, both now and evermore. Amen."

SAVED IN SPITE OF HERSELF

Horse Frightened Sketcherd a Very Bad Social Break.

"That reminds me of a story," said Mrs. Haxter; but the sewing society was in full blast and no one noticed.

"About" she persevered. "That lady who was here last Wednesday—the one with the yellow—"

"Hush!" she persevered. "That lady who was here last Wednesday—the one with the yellow—"

"About" she persevered. "That lady who was here last Wednesday—the one with the yellow—"

"I know a girl—" she almost yielded, without pausing as much as a ripple on the wave.

"Well, anyway, she had been there an hour without uttering a complete remark. Not, that her voice was needed, but in her corner church house Mrs Haxter had been a recognized leader and she did not intend that these ladies should regard her, after this first meeting with them, as a person with nothing to say.

Accordingly, when the shifting talk paused for lack of an old family anecdote about a girl who had left her home town as Mary Ann Barney, and returned as Madame Mary Annetta Bourneo, she ventured to be heard.

"What you were saying a minute ago," she tried for the fourth time, "makes me think of—" but it was useless and by this time the current had carried the clatter so far away that it seemed the best thing to do.

Write a warm face Mrs Haxter gave herself and applied herself to her sewing, when, musing back surged the voices to the same point, and there was a better chance than ever to Mrs Haxter.

"I shall have to tell you, ladies," she spoke up, in tones calculated to reach a Madame, "I seem a girl who was always a synonym for silly affectation in my old home. I don't remember her myself—she left Barnsville—when I was quite small—but—"

"Harrabee! Are you from Harrabee? a lady sitting next her broke in "That's my old home, too. You may have heard of me by my maiden name, Marie Antoinette Bonneau."

"Oh!" gasped Mrs Haxter. "Yes, I have. And while the lady from Harrabee gave herself up to volubly reminiscent talk, Mrs Haxter chastened herself, thankfully allowed the billows of talk to roll on without her story—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Child's Reason.

The late Henry N. Pillsbury, the famous chess player, was fond of children, and delighted in incidents that illustrated the originality of the child mind.

"I cultivate children because they have a new way of looking at things. They give me new points of view.

"I showed a little girl an aquarium of Japanese goldfish the other day.

"'How would you like to be a little fish?' said I.

"'Not much,' said the little girl.

"'Why not?' I asked.

"'Because,' she said, 'if you were a little fish your mamma wouldn't have any lap.'—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Percy Pinkin' (pastelists)—Yes, I just love to go traveling for pleasure.

Miss Talusco—Yes, it is a double pleasure.

Percy Pinkin—Double pleasure?

Miss Talusco—Yes, a pleasure to you and a pleasure to your acquaintances.

Bright Idea.

Little Mary hated to say 'vinegar' because she had been laughed at so many times for her queer pronunciation of the word. So when her mother sent her to the store to buy some, she presented the jug to the clerk and said:

THE POPULAR PULPIT

PRAYER AND ITS POWER.

Does the Christian world pray as less or any less correctly than it used to? Why are the facts? Perhaps there is as much saving of prayers as ever before, but with a prayer and really praying are two different things all together; there is just about as much difference in a real prayer and the mere saying of a prayer as there is in a real, think, sense, tender, personal letter, addressed to a well known hand, and a very common, ordinary, cheap, finely printed 1 cent circular letter, addressed by an unknown person with an address printed on it. I doubt not that there is just about as much difference in the results obtained. I fear that there is much more, but it is imagine that God's wants, being just as generous and just as handy and just as necessary as ever, and that this second or third prayer that comes to Him that has no heart in it and no love in it and no faith in it and no desire in it and no yearning in it, I imagine a great deal of that stuff goes for what it ought to be, like the waste basket.

Now, let us test this matter out a little from our own personal experience. A minister told me recently that a couple came to his study on the morning prayer was a burden to him; that it was the last one he felt like offering, but he felt that God given it was over and he whispered he could consider it a prayer if he would take back of that confession? Simply this, that in reality God is no longer to him a personal God, but a mere abstraction, a mere force, a force, a force, a force. He felt that God is no longer to him a personal Father, with whom he can talk, to whom he can open his heart, to whom he can open his secrets, to whom he can open his heart, to whom he can open his secrets, to whom he can open his heart, to whom he can open his secrets

The silence from the vicinity of the governor's office has the chance factory is becoming painful. Is suggests an "aching void" or a lapse of gubernatorial verbosity. Then again, where is Pat Kelley, the governor's man Friday? We don't hear a flutter from the wings of these pink doves.

We don't hear a word lately concerning the deep laid conspiracy, emanating from the fertile brain of our junior senator, to banish Chauncey S. Osborn to a foreign embassy or relegate him to obscurity on some international boundary commission. Anybody possessing a scintilla of discernment knows that the move is in the interest of the Grand Rapids candidate for the governorship—Judge Montgomery. Osborn, like "Brer rabbit, he lay low." If this Goshkosh keeps up, one of these days the republican party of Michigan will lose its Alsace and Lorraine above the straits.

The travail incident to the birth of the tariff bill is over with, and the public breathes easier. Mr. Taft's treatment of the patient was entirely successful after the senatorial mid-wives were told just where to "get off at."

Will Give Away Apples

Grand Rapids Herald: George E. Rowe, who has been elected manager of the exhibit to be made by the West Michigan Development Association at the irrigation congress and exposition at Chicago, November 20 to December 4, returned yesterday from Chicago, where he closed contracts for the Michigan space. He secured 4,320 23 feet on the main floor of the Coliseum, where the exposition is to be held, and 500 square feet in the gallery. The space cost $5,200 and in dimensions and favorable location is equal to that of many other states.

The Michigan exhibit will be mostly of fruit—the choicest products of western Michigan, from 25 miles east to twenty northward.

Apples will be the strong feature of the display and what Michigan can do in apples will be emphasized by the free distribution of about 600 barrels on what will be known as Michigan apple day. Every person visiting the exposition will receive a sample of the Michigan product. It is estimated the 600 barrels will contain about 150,000 apples and there ought to be enough to go around.

The fruits will be shown in various forms and Mr. Rowe already has preparations well under way. The berries and early fruits which will be out of season during the exposition dates will be canned and for this two methods will be used. One will be commercial canning in glass instead of tin, and this part of the exhibit will include fruit jelces and preparations. The other method will be to place the fruit either as specimens or as branches picked from the tree or bushes in chemical solutions that will preserve them in color and shape. These exhibits will be in large glass cans or jars ordered specially for the occasion, and in which the fruit will be seen to the best advantage.

Penalty for Setting Fires

The following is the law regarding the setting of forest fires with the penalties for same.

The careless setting of fires, causing fires to be set, or allowing fires to spread in woods, brush or grass lands so as to damage or endanger the property of another, is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not more than three months.

The malicious setting of fires, or causing fires to be set, is punishable by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not exceeding ten years.

It is a misdemeanor to kindle a fire and leave it unguarded, or to a party thereto, to use other than incombustible wads for firearms, or to carry a torch or other exposed light in or near to forest, brush, or grass lands—punishable by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment for not more than three months.

In addition to the penalties provided, every person is liable for all damages caused by a fire set, or allowed to run, by him.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Thomas Whiting, of Boyne City, is the nominee of the republicans of Charlevoix county with D. S. Dayton in the Western Michigan Democrat's last issue.

The 29th annual reunion of the Antrim County Soldiers and Sailors association will be held at Bellaire on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 24, 25 and 26.

The Emmet County Law and Order league, organized for enforcement of the local option laws, has offered a reward of $50 for evidence that will convict any one having broken the local option law in that county.

On September 15th and 16th, at Traverse City, will be held the reunion of the Eighth Michigan Volunteer Cavalry association. The Grand Traverse Soldiers and Sailors association will meet at Traverse September 14th to 17th.

A launch party had a narrow escape Tuesday evening on Torch lake; a leaking gasoline tank exploded and the boat took fire and burned to the water's edge, while the occupants plunged into six feet of water and miraculously escaped uninjured.

Suffering from despondency, the result of bodily affliction, Mrs. J. N. Hill of Fulaski, while in the locking cottage in Bay View lately during the temporary absence of her husband, descended into the cellar and hung herself from a rafter. In order to successfully commit the act she was compelled to double up her lower limbs, the ceiling being low.

Claude Duquette, aged 19, is dead and his mother is critically ill from poisoning at Boyne City, previous to this have been taken by eating cucumbers covered with Paris green. The cucumber patch is near a potatoe patch and Paris green was placed on them. The presumption is that some of the poison became scattered in some manner upon the cucumbers.

A suit for injunction has been commenced by Wm. Grund, through his attorneys, Knowles & Converse, against Roy Winsor. Scarcities ago the Walloon Lake Lumber Co. sold the dead head logs in Walloon lake to Mr. Grund who alleges that Winsor, who owns the logs and converted them to his own use. Grund sues for damages for the logs that have been used as well as asking that Winsor be prevented from continuing the practice.

Petoskey News: The gentlemen who were in town last week looking about the installation of the wireless telegraph station, after going to Charlevoix and other places have determined that Petoskey is the place and have ordered their material, and are now waiting for orders from the head office at Chicago. The station will probably be erected on a plot of ground back of and near the New Arlington hotel.

A Traverse City special says: With the added number of trees coming in to bearing next season fruit shipments will be doubled at this point and the carriers are already planning to take care of the business. The Pere Marquette Railroad Company plans to erect a deck near the station factory for the loading of cars direct from the lag boats, and will put on a "season half" freight fruit special daily train, 11 hours to Chicago. The cars will be cooled, and it will not be necessary to ice them, and the expense of handling the fruit in ice will thereby reduced.

Harry Swanzey was discovered making an effort to saw his way out of the new Emmett county jail at Petoskey. Swanzey had secured a file in some manner and had made a saw from a case knife. With this he had succeeded in sawing off a bar and was in a fair way to liberty when the wife of Sheriff Jones discovered him. Being unable to put up a fight with the prisoner, and her husband being absent, she released one of the battery prisoners and he engaged in a fight with Swanzey and took the saw and file away from the would-be jail breaker.

The annual motor boat regatta at Alden has been postponed from the first of the week in August to the 15th and 16th, at a compliment to the United Commercial Travelers' annual picnic and season at Alden, Saturday, August 14. The $100 gold silver Alden cup and additional prizes will be competed for. A Traverse City motorist has entered three boats. In addition to the motor sports a lawn tennis tournament will be held each day. Texas from East Jordan, Traverse City, Bellaire, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis will entertain enthusiasts. Horses races, base ball games and athletic contests will keep every minute of both days full.

Two or three hundred members of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints have arrived in Old Elsinore and are now housed in the tents. Kenwood resort where the first annual reunion of members of the denomination from northern, central and western Michigan is to be held commencing Saturday. It is expected that several hundred more will arrive Saturday and Sunday to remain throughout the ten day meeting. A tent with a seating capacity of 2,000 has been provided for the meetings and scores of small tents are in use for living purposes. An organization will be perfected Saturday. Thomas Hartnell, of Cadillac, is president of the reunion committee and Henry Doty, of Traverse City, is the secretary.

Petoskey News: Deputy Game and Fish Warden Charles N. Smith, together with several of his deputies had a rather exciting experience Sunday when they captured a fishing tug near North Manitou Island. Warden Smith received word that a tug was doing illegal fishing near the Manitou Islands and on Sunday, with several deputies, left Charlevoix on the state department steamer Chas S. Osborne to capture the offenders. The tug was sighted off South Manitou Island and the crew, as soon as the occupants of the state department boat, had a hasty retreat. After a many mile run and some maneuvering in the rough sea, the tug was overhauled, but as the deputies attempted to board her the fishermen resisted and the deputies were forced to draw their revolvers. But Chambers, captain of the tug was hand-cuffed and the tug the L. P. Hill, of Washington, Wis., and the crew were towed to Charlevoix, where a Charlevoix magistrate assessed a fine of $100 and costs, and compelled the tug owner to take out a license costing $200.

The one really big event in Northern Michigan this fall is going to be the 25th annual fair of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society which will be held Saturday, September 25 29 30. We say this advisedly for our county fair is one of the few institutions of the kind that have weathered the storms of adversity, growing better and bigger each year, until now it is without a peer in the north. Liberal premiums offered and always paid in full have brought out some marvelously good exhibits in grains, fruits, vegetables, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and other departments, and it has been a leading factor in the rapid development of our agricultural possibilities of the region in a most effective manner. The exhibits in every department this fall give promise of being bigger, better and more varied than ever before. The prizes given in connection with the fair have always proven a big attraction for some will deny the fascination of the speed contests honestly conducted. A meeting of the committee having this feature in charge was held in the office of Secretary A. E. Nichols Jr., Monday afternoon when it was decided to offer purses aggregating $520 for races to be run the last two days of the fair.—East Jordan Enterprise.

The Rain Tree.

A tree known as the rain tree—Pithecellobium Saman—is found in the drier parts of South America. This tree opens to the height of 60 feet, and its leaves have the peculiar property of condensing the moisture from the atmosphere. So copious is this condensation that a continual shower fall from the leaves and branches until the surrounding soil is converted into a verdant marsh. Plants that would otherwise be barren desert are by this means covered with the most luxuriant forests.

SEARCHING GOOD COWS.
Stick to Your Ideals and Use the Dairy Scale and Tester.

There are but two ways to breed a good dairy cow. Either her sire and dam must be pure bred and have immediate ancestors are known to have the dairy qualities desired or else she must be the daughter of a pure bred bull and a well selected cow of the type of the bull. Occasionally good cows come otherwise, but they are accidents. Even when bred as stated some will be poor.

Such hats to be killed.

The greatest difficulty in the way of producing good cows is too often in the man behind the cow. The trouble is he doesn't stick to his ideals. It may be the end of all his breeding. With his father cows he may start with a good sire, strong kind of family moreover. He wants more grit, so cries to breed it in. The result is two sonsin so next time he gives for size. The product is perhaps a Hambletonian Morgan, twelve hand "B" sire with his cows. He has Jersey Herd-Guernsey in his effort to breed a cow that will give sixty pounds of 6 per cent milk and have her earnings sell for 6 cents a pound on the hoof when done utilizing her. It is the idea of a wheelbarrow, a train sulky and a load wagon in one vehicle all over again. Music and dirt don't mix; neither do breeds of so violently opposed types. So the very first step is to specialize than out what one wants and then stick to it.

The best breed of cows and replace with registered animals means a lot of work and a good deal of money. But it is the only way to get ahead. Nothing can be done in a hap-hazard way. Nothing can be done in a half-breeding power until his first crop of calves are matured, and is expectable that a good bull has to go oftentimes when his usefulness is just beginning, while so many grade and two-year-olds that ought to have gone when they were sixteen are allowed to die duty.—P. A. Campbell, University of Maine.

A HARNESS NEED.

Much of the pleasure of driving in summer is spoiled by the horse constantly switching his tail over the reins. Of course to a thorough horseman who has the knowledge and strength to manage a horse this does not cut an important figure. But to women or others not capable of handling a horse with a vicious tendency it is very important to do whatever necessary to keep the line from under his tail.

The best thing I have ever seen to prevent this, says a horseman, was a metal bar with the ends turned up for the distance of an inch and a half and then at right angles toward the middle, terminating in open spaces of about an inch and a half to let the lines pass through.

This one, of course, is made of any sort of metal and does not look nicely, yet it answers the purpose perfectly. A good blacksmith can make a fine holder of this sort that would serve as well as any. But care must be taken in attaching it. I have found by experience that there is no part of a horse's tide that can get the hair rubbed off so easily and look so unsightly as that on top of his rump.

In order to make a good job of putting the holder on the hide, drill the bends of the rivets that come up through the leather strap to hold the metal plate should be sunk into the leather sufficiently smooth. When fixed the back strap will not rub the hair off any more with the line holder on than not.

In applying this to harness trimmed with brass it will of course look better if the little implement is made of brass. If a light brass bar cannot be found to be used it is easy to cut a piece out of sheet brass, say, three sixteenths of an inch thick. This may be then hammered into proper shape, the holes drilled and then filed down smooth and the edges rounded and polished. And if one does not want a little low line on the harness at any time except "by time" the best plan will be to have the small bar so that it can be held in place by a clip, which can be taken off along with the holder if self it it is desired.

REIN HOLDER ATTACHED TO BACK STRAP.

Breeding From Young Sires.

If we canvass the country and learn the age of the bulls in service upon our dairy farms, we would find many young, untried bulls being used. It is a deplorable condition that prevails, that of breeding so much from young and immature sires. It is the custom with some dairymen not to think of keeping a bull after he is two years or three at the most. By that age he is just beginning to get old enough to show whether he has any value as a breeder or not. Nothing can be told of a bull's breeding powers until his first crop of calves are matured, and it is regrettable that a good bull has to go oftentimes when his usefulness is just beginning, while so many grade and two-year-olds that ought to have gone when they were sixteen are allowed to die duty.—P. A. Campbell, University of Maine.

TRAINING THE OX TEAM.

Training oxen is an match of a science as driving horses, and in their education much patience and self control are required to make a success and have what we call a "good team," says a writer in the Breeder's Gazette. Their education for work should begin as soon at least as they are six months old. They should be yoked and handled till they have perfect confidence in their driver. They will learn the words of command as quickly as a team of colts will the bit and words. Always use the same terms of command and attract their attention with a light whip or switch, but never use the whip. They do not feed it. They are as ready and willing to obey as a well handled team of horses and learn the words of command the same as a dog or any animal.

Some have an idea that an ox team is made to be whipped and yoked at as badly as possible, but a yoke of cattle can be trained to do their work without noise or blaster. It is all in the driver and their early training. The last ox teamster we ever had inside the least noise and used his whip the least. He had a yoke of oxen and would get his load or cart into place as quickly as or even sooner than most of the horse teamsters, and unless one were near and on the watch one would hardly hear his voice.

Again, in their education attention should be paid to their walk. As this is the only gait they have, it is very important that they should be taught to walk fast. Ay! Smallen they will not do this unless educated to it. A cautious driver will soon get an ox team in the way of hauling along or in plowing to go as slow as to offset all other advantages claimed for them, so that a team accustomed to a fast walk is much more valuable than a slow team. Of course it's understood that some of the large, heavy breeds of cattle can never be made to walk as fast as the lighter ones, but even they can be made faster than their natural inclination.

Often young cattle when first put to work are overloaded and overworked. This leaves their courage and will surely lessen their value as a farm team. Never make them try a load when they cannot start it by two or three inches, but rather lessen the load. By so doing they will get to the way of always doing their best and will have the courage to try. A well matched, well broken pair of oxen will do their work quicker and better with the intelligence of a good pair of well broken horses, and will be a pleasure to their driver and owner.

I do not think it possible for any one to lay down rules for breaking an ox team. Some are born drivers and love their team just as much as a good horseman does, and when such a driver is given a disciplined pair of young oxen it will be a pleasure to see them work, and the amount of work they can do is governed only by the length of the day. Such a team will be alert, the same as the driver. They will obey his commands quickly and prefer doing what he wishes of strength and with a willingness that cannot be excelled by any working team. Again, as an ox team are entitled to good care and some food, and if they are treated so they will grain and regular feeding as much as any horse, and they will appreciate grooming the same. Many a yoke draws a plow all day without a grain, feed or even water at noon and at night is unyoked and turned out in the yard with a few ears of corn for hay or grass. This is not fair to the ox team, for they are entitled to something in their rest, and they it is said that cattle are no good for farm work, as we know and know it to be the work of horses. On our hill farms we can hardly do all kinds of farm work without oxen.

When getting up wood and logs in the winter they can be taken into rough wood lots and rough roads over ground with deep snow, where it would be impossible and unsafe to use horses, and many of our hilside tillage lands can be plowed to better advantage with oxen. They carry a plow steadyand sure and can get over rough ground with no quick speed and with more safety to the plow and driver. And if a team are well kept they are not much of a loss if by accident they have to be killed, and, again, a well kept yoke will command about their real value as beef at any time when they become too old and feeble for work by age or otherwise.

Under the same circumstances a horse team has to be disposed of at a sacrificial price, as, all things considered, it is not economical every farmer can work to good advantage one or two yokes of oxen, depending on the number, of course on his farm tillage and the whole number of teams required to do his work.

NOT ONE LIFE LOST IN CITY

Attacked by a hurricane almost as severe as that which killed thousands of persons and practically wrecked every building in the city, Galveston at Wednesday weathered the storm with a loss of life thought to have been only sixteen, and without greater property loss than would have attended the storm had it struck any other city of equal size.

Not a life was lost in Galveston proper, so far as is known, but the hurricane demolished a new $250,000 fishing pier on the north jetty, across the bay, six miles from the city. It was here that the fatalities occurred, and it is thought that there were only thirteen guests on the pier. These perished, with their mentions, the manager and his wife and daughter, fifty other fishermen had a narrow escape from the fate that overt'ok Chagnent at the new pier.

Galveston is assured now of its practical immunity from another disaster like that of 1900. A general feeling of confidence was resulted from the splendid action of the sea wall, which resisted the onslaught of the sea, backed by the hurricane which beat in vain on the concrete wall seventeen feet high surrounding the city on the gulf side of the island.

WEST NEEDS 50,000 MEN.

A cry for help to harvest the season's crops came from the West to officials of the Department of Commerce and Labor in Washington, one of whose duties is to find employment wherever possible for the throngs of idlers who come to this country. Fifty thousand able-bodied men are wanted hurry to the farmers, says Representative Stevens of Minnesota, who has been in conference with Assistant Secretary Neilland and other officials of the department. Mr. Stevens says the West is literally begging for help to gather the large wheat and other crops.

Although the officials are more than willing to assist, they are not able to do much because of the almost painful lack of money. Secretary Bamgartner, Mr. Neilland is beautifully in favor of the suggestion of Commissioner Williams at the Ellis Island station that immigrant detained possess at least $25 on landing to prevent their becoming public charges. He believes that the problem of relieving the congested centers could be solved by the railroads if they offered to transport passengers at actual cost to sections where profitable employment could be found. The railroads would profit in the end, he declares, because they would carry back the product of the aliens' labor.

Mother and Daughter Found Besieged After Battle for Life.

Exhausted and on the verge of collapse from a harrowing experience, Mrs. W. J. Geoker, wife of the Salt Lake Railway station agent at Crestline, thirty miles east of San Bernardino, and her 10-year-old daughter, have reached their home after a two-day battle with a pack of wolves. For forty-eight hours they had been imprisoned in a lonely cabin on a deserted sheep ranch eighteen miles from home by the hungry wolves. While the husband and father, aided by a gang of 150 section hands, ordered out by the division superintendent, searched for them, the women were battling off with clubs the attacks of the wolves which tried to get at them by tearing off the sides of the cabin and digging under its foundation. The mother and daughter were found totally exhausted. They had sustained themselves with a few crusts of hard bread found in the hut.

1,000,000 RAIN HITS DULUTH.

Duluth was flooded in the night Wednesday for the second time in twenty-four hours, and the damage may reach $1,000,000. The damage to streets alone will be several hundred thousand dollars. Scores of basements are flooded. Two and three-fifths inches of rain fell in about an hour and a half. The streams were rivers. The water ran knee deep on Superior street and for several blocks each side of Lake avenue. The water was two feet deep on the sidewalk on the lower side of Superior street. The water poured into the floor of the Hippo Theater, where a performance was in progress, and a panic was narrowly averted. The street car service was demoralized. The St. Louis Hotel basement had seven feet of water in it and the lower floor was in darkness. Automobiles were abandoned in the streets for the night.

ERIE TRAIN IS HELD UP

Reports of a hold-up of passengers on an Erie Railroad train in which seventeen armed bandits robbed the victims, reached New York Friday night. The robbery occurred in Suffern, N. Y., and said that the hold-up occurred just after the train had left the Bergen tunnel in Jersey City. The train is known as the Western Express and leaves Jersey City at 12:10 a. m.

The varying reports of the affair say that either one or two men stepped into the first of two day coaches loaded and, holding the passengers at bay with revolvers, stripped them of money and valuables. Before the train was discovered that there had been a robbery, it is said, the train was almost at Middlebush, N. Y., the first stop after leaving Jersey City. The robber or robbers in the meantime had made good their escape.

While the robbers were at work there was a wild scene in the car. The men, women and children, just landed in a strange country and unable to make themselves understood, became panic-stricken when the robber covered them with revolvers and compelled them to turn over their property. Many of the women fainted, while the children added their cries to the uproar.

SHEA MAY GET 25 YEARS.

Cornelius P. Shea, 56 years old, of 222 West 112th street, New York, formerly president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, who led the big teamsters' strike in 1905, was convicted of attempted murder by a jury in special session before Judge Foster in Jersey City. The prosecuting witness was Miss Alice Walsh, 24 years old. Shea's crime was not the most brutal on record. He met Miss Walsh in a Chicago theater in Chicago and brought her back to New York with him. He quarreled with the woman in their home at 222 West 112th street on May 21 and called her names that were unsuitable to mixing with a pocket knife. The woman nearly died from the severity of her wounds, but recovered and brought action against her assailant. Shea was indicted for the crime of which Shea was convicted is twenty-five years in prison.

Duluth was flooded in the night Wednesday for the second time in twenty-four hours, and the damage may reach $1,000,000. The damage to streets alone will be several hundred thousand dollars. Scores of basements are flooded. Two and three-fifths inches of rain fell in about an hour and a half. The streams were rivers. The water ran knee deep on Superior street and for several blocks each side of Lake avenue. The water was two feet deep on the sidewalk on the lower side of Superior street. The water poured into the floor of the Hippo Theater, where a performance was in progress, and a panic was narrowly averted. The street car service was demoralized. The St. Louis Hotel basement had seven feet of water in it and the lower floor was in darkness. Automobiles were abandoned in the streets for the night.

FIRST BEATS BISHOP IN SUIT.

Several weeks ago Bishop Hoaenan appeared before District Judge Dunn and secured a temporary order restraining Father Murphy from holding services in the Chemeeuna church. The Chemeeuna cabinet fell sudden. ly Tuesday night under dramatic circumstances, at the conclusion of a violent debate in the French Chamber of Deputies over the naval scandals, extending over several days. On a motion by Premier Clemenceau, the vote stood 176 in favor and 291 against.

M. Clemenceau and his fellow ministers immediately left the chamber, proceeding to the Elysee directly to President Fallieres and offered his resignation, which the President accepted. M. Delcasse, chairman of the investigating committee, had led the attack upon the naval administration, especially that during the incumbency of M. Pelletan and M. Thomson, former ministers of marine.

Long Branch Fire Swept.

Fire swept across the greater part of the business section of Long Branch, N. J., and caused $100,000 damage. Starting in the rear of the near Second avenue, the flames spread north and south, destroying a dozen buildings. None of these, however, were of great value with the exception of the Lincoln House, which had not been opened this season. No one was injured.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Midsummer conditions are sufficiently gratifying to support the feeling of optimism which prevailed the first week of activity. Some increases in trading definitely is noted, but the dates not distinct from the healthy significance of high salvage payments through the banks, ideal crop prospects and improved operations in factory production and distribution. Larger demands for money indicate that business generally revives under renewed vigor and confidence, and it is not surprising that preparations for the future are substantiated by many heavy demands, involving more drawing upon capacity of the leading industries. Seasonable weather has brought numerous buyers into the markets for general merchandise, furniture, hardware and machinery, and all reports testify to increasing consumption of raw supplies and moderate reduction of retail stocks here and in the interior.

Steel car building gains in this district and more hands are engaged at this mills and shops. Contracts now reach greater aggregate in implements, electric appliances, heavy forgings, leather and wood working, and the current demands in these branches come from more numerous sources. Movements of raw materials reflect improved conditions, though consumers are wary, and but there is decrease in the visible supply of pork, lard and packing.

Receipts of clearings, $355,761,000, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 19.3 per cent, and compare with 1907 as 1 to 1.4. Failures reported in Chicago district number 18, against 20 in the week to March and 29 in 1907. Those with liabilities of $5,000 or more number 12 in the week, 8 in 1908 and 2 in 1907.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Improvements in the crops, rather better advices as to ultimate outcome of the leading cereals, easing in prices of textile products, lower prices for cotton and a slight enlargement of failures in the mercantile and manufacture are the leading features this week. Connected therewith in some degree are the advices from leading industries of enlargement of output, of a continuance of trade activity, of further increases of manufactured goods, a larger demand for money for crop moving purposes, and a hardening tone in the price of iron, which between buyers and sellers is now quoted in terms of a quiet life in a hamlet.

NON-UNION SLAYER ACQUITTED.

Police and Coroner Find Cleveland Killing Was Justified.

Jasper G. Purvis, of Detroit, Mich., the non-union marine engineer who killed two strikers, hurled out of life and barely escaped with his life at the hands of strike sympathizers who attempted to torch him in Cleveland on a recent night, was discharged by both the police and the county coroner. The official found that Purvis acted in self-defense only.

The price of petroleum on the free list by a substantial majority of the finance committee has not taken off the flight out of the Independent oil producers, and another effort in the direction of protection for this industry will be made when the tariff bill shall have been perfected in the committee of the whole and reported to the Senate.

Senator La Follette has issued a formal statement of the Aldrich bill from the insurgent viewpoint, based on the amendments so far viewed as perfects. From these he estimates that the revenues will be increased, but would affect imports to the value of $100,000,000, while the decreases in the Senate bill would affect imports to the value of $300,000,000 instead of the billions of 1909 as the standard.

Cotton goods will be cheaper, and cotton suffragettes at New York to organize a protest against the increased prices. Demanding the work that women have invaded the home and factory, and that they have taken up the sewing and knitting to attract attention, a good distribution at retail under the stimulus of clearance sales and a slight enlargement of fall orders are reported from wholesalers are the leading features this week. Connected therewith in some degree are the advices from leading industries of enlargement of output, of a continuance of the upward tendency in values of manufactured goods, a larger demand for money for crop moving purposes, and a perceptible increase in the friction visible between employers and employes in a number of lines. This latter is a natural phenomena of the season when the demand made more noticeable than they would be if the high level of prices at commodities had not intervened.

Another rise in the price of crude rubber of $1.87 per pound to an advance of 37 cents since July 1 is reported, while the Ford factory announced that it would manufacture the imported tires itself. The price of Para rubber has now been made the position of rubber manufacturers difficult.

Industrial failures in the United States for the week ending with July 8 were 226, against 206 last week, 263 in the like week of 1908, 155 in 1907, 171 in 1906 and 191 in 1905. Canadian failures for the week number 24, as compared with 36 last week and 32 in the corresponding week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

SALVATIONIST SHOT IN DUEL.

Captain Albert Belnap, Salvation Army leader, who came to Boston Harbor from Chicago to take charge of the local post, engaged in a pistol duel with Alexander Bartucci, a dashing young Italian of 27. More than a dozen shots were fired. Belnap was injured in the groin. The Italian was arrested in an attempt to flee from the city and he now in the county jail. Relatives Bartucci said that he had left with the salvationist's wife are illfavored by the police to have been the cause of the shooting. Early in the summer Captain Belnap lived several weeks at the Italian. According to Captain Belnap, he was going through an alley near his house on a city down town when Bartucci, concealed, fired at him. Flashes from the Italian's pistol enabled the captain to tell Bartucci's place of concealment. Belnap, standing in the doorway, fired back with two revolvers and compelled them to turn over their property. Many of the women fainted, while the children added their cries to the uproar.

Cornelius P. Shea, 56 years old, of 222 West 112th street, New York, formerly president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, who led the big teamsters' strike in 1905, was convicted of attempted murder by a jury in special session before Judge Foster in Jersey City. The prosecuting witness was Miss Alice Walsh, 24 years old. Shea's crime was not the most brutal on record. He met Miss Walsh in a Chicago theater in Chicago and brought her back to New York with him. He quarreled with the woman in their home at 222 West 112th street on May 21 and called her names that were unsuitable to mixing with a pocket knife. The woman nearly died from the severity of her wounds, but recovered and brought action against her assailant. Shea was indicted for the crime of which Shea was convicted is twenty-five years in prison.

Following her arrest, charging two members of an excited crowd of parishioners who had forced an entrance into the home of her brother, the Rev. Father Nowakowski, of St. Mary's Polish Church, in Alma, she attacked Miss Mary Nowakowski was arraigned on the charge of assault with intent to kill. Neither of the two wounded men is fatally hurt, although one of them has part of his jaw shot away. The shooting took place in the presence of Bishop Richter, of Grand Rapids, who had refused a demand from the committee representing one faction of the church that Father Nowakowski be transferred elsewhere. When the crowd heard that the Bishop had denied their demand they rushed into the house and the priest was roughly handled until his sister appeared in the door of his study and opened fire. She also was badly treated by the excited Poles.

ERUIN JUST MISSES HIS REVENGE.

Gnawed Off Sapling, but Man Falls into Another Tree.

Herman Russell, a farmer of Hudson township, had a thrilling escape from a den of bears. While driving home from a Fourth of July celebration a cub and Herman, seeing the little fellow, decided it would make a good pet. The cub climbed a tree over the rush, but when he attempted to pick up the little fellow he found to his mother bear, who set up a fight. Herman took to the tree, which was a sapling about 20 feet high, and in this situation, then deliberately gnawed the sapling down. Mr. Russell was saved by falling into the branches of a larger tree.

Woman's World

A WOMAN JAILER.

How She Manages the Male Prisoners of Aigle, Switzerland.

There is only one official woman jailer in the world. Her name is Jenny Porchet, and she lives in Switzerland. She is governor and warder of the prison of Aigle, in the Rhone valley. It came about in this way.

Thirty years ago Mme. Porchet married the chief warder of the prison and soon proved to be a helpmeet indeed, for, being a strongly built woman and with proper notions of discipline, she made as good a jailer as her husband and more than once did his work when he was ill or away.

So when he died the authorities asked her to take his place permanently, and she accepted.

All the year round the Aigle prison contains from twelve to twenty male prisoners, sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from three months to three years, and, although the women jailer has no assistants, she has never had any trouble with the prisoners, she says, except, indeed, on one occasion many years ago, when a burly ruffian attempted her.

Mme. Porchet taught him a lesson in good behavior that confined him to the hospital for several weeks.

Since then she has shown that the woman jailer has the kindliest of hearts and takes great interest in her "guests," as she calls them. Many a prisoner has been set on the straight path again by her wise and kindly advice.

lie in the low, marshy bottoms of the Potomac, the breeding ground of malaria germs. These germs cause chills, fever and ague, biliousness, jaundice, lassitude, weakness and general debility and bring suffering or death to thousands yearly. But Electric Bitters never fail to destroy them and cure malaria troubles. "They are the best all round tonic and cure we sell," writes H. M. James, of Lourdes, S. C. They cure Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Blood Troubles and will prevent Typhoid. Try them. 50c. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

Interior Clothesline.

The clothesline or lingerie as illustrated herewith is intended for use in the house during inclement weather. The frame is made with a centerpiece of round wood about one inch in diameter and any length to suit the size of the room. The wood may be square if a round piece cannot be secured. The two end pieces are of the same material and are 18 inches long. The pieces are held together at the connections with small braces made from iron. The frame is kept to the ceiling on three one-inch hooks screw eyes. Clothesline are stretched between the end pieces on which to hang the clothes.

Loading the Wagon.

It is generally believed that the load pulls easier if put well forward on the wagon. But this is not so on the ordinary wagon, where the hind wheels are larger than the front ones. Should the wheels be equal it also the load should be equally distributed. If the tongue are so low down that the horses have an upward pull on the load, then it would be all right to put the load well forward. The load should be proportioned to the surface contact of the wheels. A large wheel sinks less than a small one. Therefore the load should be heaviest on the hind wheels. Distribute the weight so that no one wheel or no one side is carrying the greater share, lest it make the draft excessive for the baggage carried.

Best Varieties of Potatoes.

Of 111 varieties of potatoes tested at the Ontario Agricultural college the following varieties are among the best when yield, size, freedom from rot and quality are considered: Late—Empire State, Jacquey Seedling, Rural New Yorker No. 2. Medium—Rose of the North, Burpee's Extra Early, Early Daily Portland, Early Harvest, Extra Early Eureka and Early Ohio. The results of planting potato sets of different sizes at different distances were in favor of two ounce sets planted the closest together. Planting one set per hill has given the best average results for eight years.

Feed For Egg Yield.

There is nothing that will increase the egg yield like fresh cut green bone. It should, however, be fed judiciously, as it is highly nutritious, and a little goes a good way, but as a supplement to the regular daily grain ration is sure of bringing good results. It should be fed in about the proportion of one to one and a half ounces per bird three times a week. It is advisable to begin on even a smaller amount than one ounce to each fowl on the start and gradually increase to the maximum amount.

Violins at Boyne City.

"The residents of various parts of this county were startled last Sunday evening about 10 o'clock to see a strange phenomenon in the southeastern sky resembling a huge meteor which was visible for a period of several seconds, and which brilliantly illuminated that portion of the heavens. It seemed to have been particularly brilliant in the vicinity of this city where it terrified several of the residents of this community who happened to see it. A doctor on the road coming from Boyne Falls says that it appeared suddenly in the sky like a huge ball of red fire with a comet like tail and that as it flashed out from the darkness it almost blinded him, then burst and disappeared from view. A young lady who observed the phenomenon in this city says it seemed as if the sky had parted and a yellowish ball of fire resembling the sun appeared to view and a black cross appeared in the center of the ball, which descended rapidly and disappeared from view in a few seconds. What was really seen was a huge meteor which appeared into our atmosphere, burst and disappeared into fragments, but as distances are so deceiving in matters of this kind, that the exact location where the meteor fell would be hard to locate."—Boyne City Journal.

It probably dropped at Ellsworth where the meteoric "implosion" came from. We are truly sorry to hear such a story as this come from Boyne City, from whence we have heard of so many healthful results of local option. "Yellowish balls of fire" are unmistakable symptoms of Ellsworth whiskey.

The statement that "it was particularly brilliant" in the vicinity of Boyne City, where it terrified several of the residents," is not doubted by those who have made the Ellsworth trip.

The only feature of the story that seems to give it a shade of reliability is the statement that a "young lady observed the phenomenon." If it was a man who saw the "sky part," we should at once volunteer to produce evidence that several "sky partings" have been seen between Charlevoix and Ellsworth since the first of May, and that the sky remained "parted" for several days after the first vision.

The "black cross in the center of the ball" serves to inferably confirm our opinion that Boyne City folks will only cease to be haunted by visions when Antrim county goes dry next spring.

Pica for Open Fireplace.

"If people would only learn to have open fires in their rooms, instead of converting them into hotair boxes by means of furnaces, there would be fewer colds," said a physician. "Fireplaces and their chimneys are ventilators. To me the beauty of an open fire makes it worth having, but when you consider that it's a sanitary effect, constantly changing the air and driving out germs, it is hard to see how any one can prefer a furnace."

—Nevada this week.—J. L. Crane, A. E. Mason, M. A. Levinson, Grinnell Bros. and the Kalamazoo Furnishing and Tailor Co.

—The foundation of the Carnegie library building was completed last week, and brick-laying has been commenced.

—Another invoice of new type faces was added to the SENTINEL job office equipment this week, and more coming.

—Ed. Chaloupka and wife arrived yesterday from Oregon, and will reside in the city. They were accompanied by Chas. Skinner, who will spend the summer here.

—The Rt. Rev. Jno. N. McCormick, D. D., L. L. D., Bishop of Western Michigan will preach at Christ church, Charlevoix, on Sunday August 15th at 10:30 a. m.

—Twenty-five Charlevoix ladies ran opposition to Boy City Friday and had a very enjoyable picnic at Clinton's bay with their old friends Mesdames A. J. Stroud and J. A. Carisiein.

—Van Pelt is already planning to erect another good brick store building on Bridge street next year. When goes to show that Van Pelt is firm full of confidence in the future of "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

—The editor of the Appeal to Reason, a rank socialistic paper, has just been fined $1,500 and sentenced to six months in jail for improper use of the mails, which consisted in sending out his paper containing an article begetting crime.

—The last of the local option cases from various counties of the state was decided by the supreme court Thursday. The decision was favorable to the drys, making their record of victories complete in the attempt to contest the local option elections after they had been held.

—Leo H. Comfort and wife, of Traverse City, were in town a few days last week visiting Mrs. Comfort's parents Mr. and Mrs. Archie Irwin. Mr. Comfort, who is superintendent of construction and repairs in the lighthouse service, is doing work this week at Squaw Island.

—Many Charlevoix people are aware that the three children of "Bob" Shiles, formerly of this place are noted juvenile acrobats. The youngest is but five years old. The trio is becoming famous. We are in receipt of a Raleigh (N. Va.) paper announcing their appearance there. The mother of the children is a daughter of the late Capt. Walter Clifford, U.S. Army. The Shiles still make their home in Washington.

—The masons are well along with the second story of the Van Pelt building on Bridge street.

—Mrs. W. N. Moore, of West Branch, Mich., is here visiting her mother, Mrs. Hapshaw.

—Col. D. C. Wickham, who, as inspector in the engineer's department, formerly had charge of harbor work here, paid his friends here a visit Sunday. The Colonel is now filling a corresponding position in the life saving service, and was on an official trip to Lake Superior.

—The attorney general gives it as his opinion that the new law exempting old soldiers from taxation up to $1,500 assessment does not go into effect until next year, also that it disfranchises them from voting at school meeting if they have not property in excess of the above amount.

—Manager Fischer again calls attention to aquatic carnival to occur at the Swimming pool Wednesday, Aug. 18th. The prizes offered to successful competitors are on exhibition in the vestibule of the pool. This is expected to be the best and most varied series of swimming contests in the history of the pool.

—"Moses, Prince of Egypt," is a new play, and, strange as it may seem its first presentation on any stage will be in Charlevoix next Monday night. The author is a dramatist of established reputation and Manager Bridge is to accept of a letter from him stating the above fact. The patrons of the Charlevoix Theatre may look for a rare treat.

—A prominent Marion farmer was tempted and narrowly escaped falling. He was talked into considering a proposition to exchange farms with a Northern Michigan man, and last week he went there to see the farm. He is back home again. He don't regret making the trip for he needed the rest, but he says Northern Michigan is plenty good enough for him.

—It is a very gratifying fact that Charlevoix Theater was well filled last Monday night, on the occasion of "The Tiger and the Lamb" presentation. There has never been a better play produced in Charlevoix. We are glad that our people are waking up to the fact that Manager Bridge is entitled to credit and encouragement for his discriminating judgment in booking attractions. "Moses, Prince of Egypt" next Monday night.

—One of the prettiest places in the environs of Charlevoix is the demesne of the U. S. lonny station, of which William Shields is the keeper. The cleanliness of the place is the first thing that strikes the visitor. But it is the garden and flower beds that are the charm of the place. Mr. Shields says he keeps the latter "just to look at." The garden contains about every staple vegetable, and it is one of the most attractive spots we have found yet. The grounds embrace something over three acres and reflect great credit on the taste and industry of the keeper.

BAD FOR NORTHPORT

Through the consummation of the deal by which the Ann Arbor railroad company takes control of the Manistique, Marquette and Northern railroad, officially announced Thursday the Ann Arbor makes a long stride in the direction of expansion, and that road and the Toledo gateway gain a large amount of freight tonnage from the forest and copper mines of the upper peninsula of Michigan.

The Manistique, Marquette and Northern extends from Manistique to Shingleton, a distance of forty-five miles. At Shingleton it connects with the Duluth South Shore and Atlantic.

Desire on the part of the owners of the Ann Arbor for a portion of the tonnage of the copper mines was partly responsible for the negotiations culminating in the purchase of the road in the upper peninsula. All the traffic controlled by the Manistique, Marquette and Northern and heretofore divided will be moved via Toledo and will add greatly to the importance of this city as a traffic gateway.

The Ann Arbor's carferry service has been handling the traffic of the Manistique, Marquette and Northern to Northport, but the Toledo road, now being in control, the port of Northport will be closed so far as this company is concerned and all traffic handled by the Ann Arbor will be carried direct from Manistique by carferry to Frankfort, thence by rail to Toledo, which will become the common distributing point for shipments to the east and south of this city.

To connect Northport with Traverse City and the Grand Rapids and Indiana the Traverse City, Leelanau and Manistique railroad was built through the Leelanau county peninsula some years ago and the company then purchased a $500,000 carferry. The great boat proved expensive and required too big a crew to operate economically and the road became involved in litigation with its bondholders. Its affairs are still in the courts. The Grand Rapids and Indiana leased the little road for a time, but found its operation undesirable. The failure of the Traverse City, Leelanau and Manistique now seems more hopeless than ever.

—Concerning the workings of local option elsewhere, we print the following, which appeared in Monday's Detroit Free Press, and was a dispatch from Coldwater, Branch county, dated August 10: We give it as it appeared without comment: "Local option in Branch county will be hard to defeat should it be voted on in two years and Coldwater city would give a majority for it if an election should be held at the present time. Merchants report a marked improvement in collections. Three of the four best saloon buildings have been refitted for trade, Grinnell Brothers, of Detroit, opening Saturday the finest music store Coldwater has ever had. A carnival company has exhibited here all last week and only one drunk was reported, that of a Quincy man, who will spend 30 days in jail without the alternative of a fine. The criminal cases in the county have dropped off 80 per cent."

—Again Manager Bridge, of the Charlevoix Theater, has scored a big success in advance by booking that talented actor, William Owen, and his company. This superb company will appear Wednesday night, Aug. 25th, in Shakspeare's "As you Like It." Everybody knows that none but intensely people can produce this great play. Mr. Owen, who is rated as one of the greatest "Hamlets" on the American stage, is well known here, having appeared in Shakspearian roles several times. Probably the most altogether cultured company that has ever appeared here was that of William Owen. Charlevoix people should appreciate this effort of Mr. Bridge to elevate the standard of popular amusements. This he certainly is doing when he books William Owen.

I.O. THE POOR FISHERMAN

The SENTINEL has always maintained the position that the Michigan commercial fishing laws, taken as a whole, are the product of reckless and unintelligent legislation.

"Tell them all for me that if the game warden's department arrests every man who has illegal fish in his possession that there will not be a fish netter in this part of the country who would escape the tolls," said Carl Schroeder, a fisherman of Northport, to a Traverse City Eagle reporter last week. "It is a fact that the fishermen are placed in a most peculiar predicament in the handling of whitefish and trout, especially whitefish, this being evidenced by the fact that they will not live but a short time when out of the water.

"When we pull our nets and take out the fish there will be many of them under a pound and a half, despite the precaution we take in using nothing but large mesh nets. We throw the whitefish into the lake, and they will not live as would be expected, but will die without a struggle. The whitefish which I sent to this city a few days ago and which appeared to be under weight were all above weight, but I did not make an allowance for their shrinking, as this was the reason I was caught.

He further stated that he would not pay a fine, and had pleaded not guilty, and would stand a jail sentence rather than submit to what he considers the tyranny of the law.

James McCann, of St. James, returned from Manistee Friday, where he went to investigate the recent seizure of six packages of menominees and suckers by deputy game warden Allan Smith. Mr. McCann still has "poison in his eye." The fish were taken from a N. M. T. Co. boat as under-sized whitefish, and were shipped to the Traverse City asylum, to which place Mr. McCann followed them, and where the fish were buried. The resides. Smith acknowledged that he could not distinguish between a whitefish and a menominee, and for that reason called in Manistee fishermen to identify the fish. The matter was submitted to warden Pierce, who promised to investigate. Meanwhile, Mr. McCann has been to large expense and compelled to see his fish deteriorate in this extremely warm weather, to say nothing of having his name published lightning rod in a dozen daily papers as a violator of the law. The latter phase of the case he places more stress upon than the loss of his seizure the fish, because there is scarcely a man in the entire straits region who does not know that James McCann is a scrupulously honest man and a strict observer of the law. It is bad enough to have contradictory laws without being compelled to submit to such outrages at the hands of officious deputies who do not know a shad from a codfish or a chub from a sucker. Much has been said about Beaver Island fishermen in the papers that does them injustice, and we wish to say in this connection that the percentage of arrests and convictions involving the islanders is below those of any other fishing center in the straits region. The commercial fishing laws have come to be little less than a standing joke, and some of the deputy game wardens hereabouts nothing less than a bunch of Falstaffian swashbucklers.

Burned News.

There was a very pleasant gathering at the cottage of Thomas Shapton one day last week to raise an addition to his barn, where twenty six years ago a similar gathering raised the barn for our esteemed friend the late uncle John Shapton when W. A. Smith and Dr. Crosier were captains of some the lighting editor was.

Three weeks later the same two fought it out again at the barn raising at Wm. Bakers in Hayes, with the same result.

Old timers look back on such occasions with a good deal of regret, knowing full well that such occasions are becoming a thing of the past.

ONE OF THEM.

FARMERS' MUTUALS

Next month the amendment to the farmers' mutual fire insurance law of Michigan whereby the class of companies indicated may classify their risks and make rates of assessment in accordance with the hazard assumed, will become effective. Ever since its enactment, in 1893, this law has provided that all classes of property shall be assessed ratably, which means that the same charge necessarily was made for a ramshackle, dilapidated barn as for a steel and concrete structure; if there happened to be such a building within the field of such companies' operations. The growing use of lightning rods within the past few years suggested the advisability of amending the law so that a less charge might be made for properly rodded buildings than for buildings without rods. For a number of years a very large percentage of the losses sustained by farmers' mutual were due to lightning, and observation evidently convinced the officers and members of these companies that properly adjusted lightning rods are a positive protection. So strong has this belief become that within the past years there has been organized in the state a mutual company which will insure nothing but rodded buildings, and it makes a very low rate of risk this class of structures. This induced the members of the state association of farmers' mutual fire insurance companies to ask the last legislature to amend the law so that the companies represented by them might meet this reduced rate. It is probable that as soon as the law takes effect next month the 100 or more mutual companies throughout the state will make a reduction in the rate of assessment on wooden buildings. While the losser due to lightning are very extensive, they are not as great as has been advertised throughout the state recently through the circulation of a bulletin issued by the Ohio fire marshal. This bulletin embodied the statement that in 1906 the farmers' mutual fire insurance companies of Michigan sustained losses aggregating more than three million of dollars from this cause. This is a gross error, the fact being that the aggregated losses reported by the mutual companies of Michigan for the year named were $713,006, while the aggregate of losses due to lightning for that year was $141,411. It will be seen that the percentage of lightning losses was sufficiently large to warrant the adoption of any and all measures that reasonably promise a reduction. If the plan works on as its projectors hope, the average rate of assessment on farm risks will gradually decrease.

—The SENTINEL had a call yesterday from Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Love, of Kansas City, who are just returning from a Quebec trip, and are guests for a week at the Elston. Mr. Love is a prominent contractor in Kansas City. But the interesting feature of the visit is that Mr. Love in his boyhood days waded in the surf about the ledge fish house and caught speckled trout from the old Orr mill pond at "Antrim City," where the writer of this landed on Grand Traverse soil about the same time. Mr. Love's father, Jefferson Love, whom we remember well, owned a farm in that locality. The family moved away thirty five years ago. The elder Love is still living, having shown a home in the Ozark mountains of the South.

—The printer's "devil" was making up his form. The paper was late and the boy got the galleys mixed. The first part of the obituary notice of a precentious citizen had been dumped in the form and the next handful of type came off the gally describing a recent fire. It read like this: "The hall beams towered the body into the grave and it was consigned to the flames. There were few if any regrets, for the old wreck has been an eyesore to the town for years. Of course there was individual loss, but that was fully covered by insurance." The writer thinks the editor wrote the obituary that way because the intended patient of his, pays owed him five years' subscription.

CHAPTER XXII.

There was hurry in and John Saxton had been back and forth twice between the church house and the village before the sun had crept high into the heavens. The little village had been alive since the first of the tragedy at the desert school and already spread its news well beyond its borders. Saxton was in his shirtsleeves when he came to his office and ordered his man to open the office. Saxton's office was a long room, with a fireplace at one end and a table in the middle. Law books lined the walls, and a door opened into a small room in which was a cot and a few chairs. Saxton had assumed the bar Grant with characteristic thoroughness. Long before the Civil War he had been a party to an exploit fearlessly that should cover here attempted to rob the Chicago mail, as known to you and you it was Hardin's own plan.

Saxton had ministered to

An article in the Cadillac Democrat states that Judge C. C. Chittenden has been offered $500,000 for his really holding at Seattle, and that the ex-judge refused the offer, believing the property to be worth much more.

The recommendation of the Boyne City board of public works to purchase 75 horse power motor for the purpose of running the water works pumps has been adopted by the council. The Boyne Rivers Power Co. will furnish the necessary current, and it is expected will effect a considerable saving.

The Elk Rapids Progress says that indications are that at least fifty per cent more names will be secured in submitting the local option question. Assuming the figures on the votes at last fall's election, the Progress says that the petition in the county requires 577 signatures to submit the question, or 115 in Elk Rapids township.

The annual picnic and rally of pastors and officers of Antrim county will be held in a grove overlooking Torch lake, at Alden, Wednesday and Thursday, August 1 and 13. Hon. George L. Horton, past master of the Michigan State Grange, will deliver a rousing address that will interest everyone who can come to hear him. Everybody invited to attend this picnic, and especially all farmers. Good train accommodations from both north and south. Grounds near T. M. depot. The program, beginning with plenty dinner at noon Wednesday, to which all are requested to bring well filled baskets.

The Cadillac Turpentine company is at present testing out the pulp possibilities of the chips or spent wood of their plant. This is after the turpentine and resin and other products of the Norway pine stumps has been secured through the distillation process. Before the distillation takes place, the stumps are cut and ground up into small chips. Over twenty tests have been made and during the past week the company shipped three car loads of the chips to paper pulp mills. If the chips prove valuable for paper, it will probably result in Cadillac securing a paper mill in the near future.

The Pioneer association of Antrim county held its second annual picnic at the Mineral Spring grove at Central Lake Saturday. The attendance was not large, between three and four hundred being present. This is accounted for by the fact that the farmers are busy with harvesting at this season and the organization is young. Plenty of enthusiasm was manifest and a large number became members of the organization. The fruit of residences in the county was reduced from 90 to 25 years. James Williams of Banks township was chosen president for the next year, and the next picnic is to be held in the same grove on this year, upon call of the executive board.

The Traverse City Record of last Thursday has a beautifully illustrated four page extra devoted to Grand Traverse county fruit orchards. We clip the following: "It is estimated that upon the peninsula alone there have been more than 60,000 cases of cherries raised this year, at the very least figure. On three farms in Leelanau county there were 3,000 cases of cherries shipped, they being in close proximity to Traverse City. * * * A night work going twenty miles to see is the cherry farm of Guy Tompkins, one of the largest and most successful growers of fruit on the peninsula. Mr. Tompkins, farm is about two miles from Old Mission on the center road. He has 110 acres of which 20 are devoted to cherries but 10 of these bewore, bearing fruit, the other 10 acres having been set to young trees. Mr. Tompkins expects to harvest about 7,000 cases of cherries."

Kalkaska Leader: That whipsaw on official game warden Smith has been making trouble again, and Justice Jas. A. Harriel has this week handed out fines of $20 and $5 costs to O. E. Eberling, and $25 and $5 costs each, coupled with an alternative jail sentence of thirty days each to H. D. and Walter Harold, all of Sharon, and all because the parties had in their possession a sturdy old deer skin from an animal killed by the train in question last November. The venison was long since put where it would do the most good. But the joke, if there is one, falls on the taxpayers of the county, as the Harolds, having no immediate self pressing engagements and it being the vacation season anyway, have concluded to enjoy the attractions of the Bastile over which Sheriff Sieling presides, and the rest of us can sweat out our various contributions this hot weather to pay for their board and lodge thereon. Darn a game law, anyway.

After carrying for 46 years the bullet which killed his comrade in a battle during the Civil war, Henry Foss of Traverse City has had the leaden missile removed. The two men were standing upon a little knoll when his companion fell dead, shot through the body. The same bullet, well spent, lodged in Foss' arm. The wound in time healed and gave Foss little trouble until recently, when it began to trouble him considerably. An X-ray examination revealed the presence and surgeons removed it.

There are 3,000,000 acres of pine stump land in Michigan. Each of these three million acres will average fifteen cords of stumps. And each cord will give, through a newly found chemical process, liquids to the value of $25.75. Such at least is maintained by the formers of a mammoth turpentine company to build a factory. There are four turpentine stump plants in Michigan. They are located at Cadillac, Herbert, Grayling and Nokes. The syndicate being formed which will build a plant at Cheboygan will work on a larger plan than any industry attempted in the north.

Reports have reached Cheboygan that a large black bear had carried away a baby 18 months old while the mother was picking huckleberries on the Mackinaw plains about 10 miles out on town. The mother, a Polish woman, left the child sleeping in charge of another child, nine years old. The bear suddenly appeared from the bushes and started away with the little one, frightening the older child nearly to death. The mother went into hysteria and was scarcely able to tell what had really happened. Sheriff Clute dispatched a posse of 10 men in charge of deputy Sheriff Linn and County Surveyor Bowen to the scene, but they were unable to find any trace of the child or the bear.

Traverse City Record: Caldwell & Loudon are rebuilding, for that is practically what the work of putting the plant once more in shape for active operation means. In many ways the remodeling of the plant will require a greater amount of work than it would to build an entirely new structure for the different departments of the establishments. In their reconstruction the greatest care is to be exercised in the matter of making the buildings as nearly proof against the spread of fire as possible. There will be four distinct structures erected, according to the plans of the company, including a paint shop, woodworking shop, storage room and blacksmith and mechanical departments.

East Jordan Enterprise: Mr. L. C. Madison, who in point of continuous service was the oldest business man in East Jordan, has decided to retire after twenty-five years in the pharmacy business, selling his stock, etc. to Mr. Vernon S. Payton on Friday of last week. Mr. Payton is the son of County Clerk Payton and is a registered pharmacist, having passed the examination before the State Board at Ann Arbor a year ago. Vernon has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, having worked with the doctors and in the drug stores here for the past seven years with the exception of the time spent in school and seems particularly equipped to carry on the business even more successfully than his predecessor.

Traverse City Eagle: The Leelanau county Old Settlers' picnic held at Burdickville last week Tuesday was very successful. The day was beautiful and the attendance was very large, people coming from all parts of Leelanau county. The grounds were filled with automobiles and fine turnouts and the lake was dotted with launches, the whole being a great contrast to the first picnic inaugurated by Kasson Freeman when the ox team and lumber wagon were much in evidence, all going to show the rapid growth of the country. The Alice J. Day gave free excursion on the lake all day and a free excursion was given by Mr. Tuy to a large crowd from South Manitou over his railroad and tug. The association decided to buy the grounds and a subscription was taken up for that purpose, half of the necessary amount now being on hand.

Traverse City Record: George E. Howe, in charge of the Western Michigan Development bureau work in the Chicago exhibit, has opened a press bureau in this city. through the courtesy of the Hannah & Lay company he has been assigned to a handsome suite in the State bank building and there he will establish headquarters for the Counties in the bureau. The room number is 403. A clerk and two stenographers will be employed and a letter will be sent to the newspapers in the counties in the bureau each week. These letters will show the scope and progress of the work of the bureau and will be compiled by Mr. Howe personally, who will visit the various counties continuously, making the trips in an automobile.

WRIGHT MEETS U. S. TEST.

Orville, with Passenger, in Airship Surpasses Requirements.

Orville Wright Friday night attained a hard earned success. In a terrific cross country flight near Washington in the aeroplane built by himself and his elder brother, Wilbur, and accompanied by Lieutenant Benjamin D. Foulois, of the army signal corps, he not only surpassed the specified requirements of his contract with the United States government but accomplished the most daring flight ever planned for a heavier than air flying machine.

He broke all speed records over a measured course and established the practicability of the aeroplane. Wright's speed was more than 42 miles an hour. He made the ten-mile flight in 14 minutes and 42 seconds, including the more than twenty seconds required for the turn beyond the line at Shuter hill, the southern end of the course. He attained a height in crossing the valley of Fort Hill run of nearly 500 feet, and the average altitude of his practically level course was about 200 feet.

President Taft arrived at the parade ground at Fort Myer just in time to see the aeroplane land and participate in the demonstration which welcomed the triumphant aviators. He met Colonel Twohy, commanding officer of the artillery at Fort Myer, to hear his congratulations to the victor.

WOUND MANY IN STRIKE RIOT.

As a result of rioting at the Mower Rocks, a street car station at the McKees Rocks, Pa., Trooper Stanford Morris of the State constabulary was in a critical condition in the McKees Rocks hospital, while three strikers were seriously shot and scores of others were wounded.

Trooper Morris, while watching along Unity street, was set upon by a crowd of foreigners, and with a companion was compelled to fire a number of shots, three of which are known to have taken effect. In the mêlée Trooper Morris had two fingers on his right hand broken and received a fearful injuries. When the crowd of rioters was surging close to the troopers the latter opened fire, and this scattered the crowd so that the wounded could make their escape. The wounding of their comrades caused the dismounted troopers to fire volleys the evening, however, the troopers were compelled to do patrol duty, and church services were suspended.

BASEBALL MAGNATE A SUICIDE.

Harry C. Pulliam Shoots Himself to Death in New York.

SPAIN IN AN UPROAR; ALFONSO IS HOOTED

MARTIAL LAW EVERYWHERE

Rioting in the provinces of Catalonia, Spain, and the general manifestations of discontent in Madrid evince continuance of the war against the

New photograph of Spain's ruler and his Queen, who hastened home from San Sebastian to a throne endangered by insurrection; typical group of the Moorish soldiers; Premier reported to have resigned; barber at Barcelona, where the insurrection brought about a state of siege with heavy loss of life; royal palace, guarded by troops whose loyalty is doubtful, and map showing cities affected by the insurrection and war.

Kabyle tribesmen in Morocco have given rise to grave fears that the entire country is on the brink of a revolution.

King Alfonso Wednesday declared all Spain under martial law and announced a temporary suspension of constitutional guarantees. He announced that the rioting in Catalonia would be put down, at all costs and arranged to dispatch to Barcelona at the two cruisers and the entire third army corps, under the personal command of Prince Charles of Bourbon. Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria also will accompany the troops, with the rank of army corps commander.

King Is Hooted in Streets.

King Alfonso was publicly hooted on the streets as he drove from the railroad station to the royal palace on his return from San Sebastian. Cries of "down with the king!" were heard on every hand.

Barcelona is the center of the worst rioting, and it is there that the uprising is being made the war policy of the government seems to center. The authorities feel that their first care must be to break the spirit of the Barcelona rebels, after which they can subjugate the subordinate towns in turn with greater ease.

Wednesday marked a black chapter in Spain's history, for there was traffic both in human and national lives. The king reached Madrid in time to learn that part of his army at Melilla had had a bloody battle with the Moors, which, though the final victory was won by the Spaniards, cost the lives of twenty-one officers and a total of 200 Spaniards killed or wounded.

The capitulation of Barcelona to Spain, has telegraphed to the general staff at Madrid that the revolutionists have surrendered, and that he is now the master of the situation. The number of victims as a result of the fighting in the streets was high. Twenty-three buildings were destroyed by the artillery. Leaders of the rebels are being tried by court-martial and summarily executed. There is no train service between Barcelona and Madrid.

Special dispatches from Melilla said that the Spanish cruiser Numancia was shelling the heights of Mount Gurugu, which was swarming with Moors. Gen Marina, commander of the Spanish forces in Morocco, reports that he is momentary quiet outside Melilla, but no details of the situation of the army at Melilla are given save except that Spanish reinforcements to the new commanding general have arrived there.

A Carlist plot to dethrone Alfonso is believed to have been foiled by the police, who raided the Carlist headquarters in Madrid and seized a large amount of papers and documents. Members of the Carlist junta, some of them close relatives of Don Jaime, the pretender, fled from Madrid just in time to escape capture. Bankers are rapidly shipping their cash reserves into France, under heavy military guard, owing to a fear that the army will revolt and a bloody revolution will follow.

CHECKS DEPORTING OF ALIENS.

Immigration Bureau Rebukes Inspectors for Hasty Action.

Of late the arresting and deporting of aliens has increased enormously and a tendency is noted in some cases to sacrifice quality of work in quantity. This is the letter of the Commissioner of Immigration to the inspectors at Ellis island, in which he says, in part:

"Recently the arrest upon treaties and laws, which are in some cases impossible, universalized accusations." This was the sharp rebuke administered to instructions which have just been sent out from Washington by the Bureau of Immigration to all commissioners of immigration and inspectors in charge, directing attention to the failure of investigating officers in making thorough preliminary inquiry, especially in cases of alleged violation of the alien contract labor law.

A report from Newmarket, England, is to the effect that the announcement of the engagement of Miss Cecil Cooper, daughter of the late Sir Daniel Cooper, the previous record for broad mares was $62,000, paid for La Fronde.

The cruisers North Carolina and Montana are returning to the United States from a cruise in Turkish waters, where they were sent under rush orders from Constantinople last April for the protection of Americans in Asia Minor. Following has been paid for the titles between the Montana and the Armadillos.

MADE IMMUNE FROM TYPHOID.

Soldiers Undergo Test and Prove the Value of New Serum.

The loss of the period of typhoid tests have been applied to Sergeant Fuller and Privates Delgadet and Goodman, of Fort Oswego, and they have been pronounced immune. June they were vaccinated with typhoid serum and developed the disease in a mild form. Later they were vaccinated, but the serum did not "take." Ten days ago they underwent the supreme test, that of drinking freely of a gallon of suspension of germs taken from a pure culture, that of drinking freely of a gallon of suspension of germs taken from a pure culture, that of drinking freely of a gallon of suspension of germs taken from a pure culture

If the Departed Pioneer Could Return

We do not believe in eternally looking backward. The habit begets laziness. Look straight ahead and incline your eyes upward. This habit begets energy and perspicuity. But as we look forward an occasional glance over the shoulder along the line of mile posts you have passed sometimes sharpens judgement and rectifies impending error.

Shades of the departed!

What would William Lister say today could his disembodied spirit walk along the bituliithic pavement where forty years ago he hewed and whitened the stumps to prevent his falling over them on his nocturnal visits to Uncle Philo Ikins!

And what would be the remarks of Uncle Philo of hallowed memory, were he to again stand in the window of the little postoffice when the Mantou comes up the revetted river, the banks of which, when he was clothed in the flesh, were garnished with the foliage of cedar and elder? The Missouri now,—the wood scows then, with uncle Philo standing on the bank, his hands in the broad pockets of his broader barn-door trousers—we see him now, as we write. We close our eyes and imagine the stubby form of the old postmaster standing by the corner of the fenced postoffice enclosure as one of the big red resort autos goes rushing past over ground that in his mortal days was traversed by Steve Hull's steers.

Could the lamented Seth F. Mason walk and speak, what words would he utter were he to wander down the beautiful street that was named in his honor—down past the County Bank building and then on where the walls of the Carnegie library are rising.

And while we are dreaming, another figure is outlined to the mental vision. It is that of John S. Dixon, emerging from the orchard of the old homestead, out across the grit road and into Dixon avenue. We see him turn and look eastward where The Inn breaks into the sky line. Then, as the Dixonian form fades from view, we see the tall and imposing ghost of chief Macsawin approaching from the north, wonder depicted in his dusky face. Then we see him retrace his steps to the little log house that stood on the terrace. We see him pause as a Tree Marquette express passes just below him, and then the Indian and his primitive abode vanish into air.

We stand on the corner by the splendid Hotel Elston and look westward down the beautiful perspective of Antrim street. Down the old road under the terrace we see horse-laden turtleback loaded with the pale-faced bifurcated bags across their shoulders, and then the vision shifts to the old Fox store by the river's mouth, from whence came the increasing roar of the propeller-wood pile. We see the sturdy trader and his Indian wood cutters blending over theme assortment, and then, presto, we see the array of beautiful cottages that cluster about the 'historic spot, and "Old Glory" floating across the channel at the life saving station, where forty years ago the dreamer looked out in the ripples of the shoal waters of Pine river.

Then, thrown upon the mental spectrum, comes another picture in dim outline—but it vanishes before assuming form and feature. The dream has passed, and, awakening, we are again living in the progressive to-day, chastening the precious memories of the past while looking forward into a future of hoped-for blessings.

or scalded by overturned kettle—cut with a knife—bruised by slammed door—injured by gun or in any other way—the thing needed at once is Bucklen's Arnica Salve to subdue inflammation and kill the pain. It's earth's supreme healer, infallible for Boils, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Eczema and Piles. 25c. at F. G. Hines & Co

As a result of reports from Mackinac island that aliens are entering the country from Canada by that route, it is reported that a man will be detailed from the Soo Immigration office to watch books there until the close of the season. It is said that several people have reached the United States by that route without examination. It is alleged that some of them came in from Goderich. The immigration department generally keeps a close watch of the Canadian border as many undesirables' enterthis country from that direction. Many of them come from Europe. Even now it will probably be difficult for foreigners to get in by the Mackinac route unless they can make a satisfactory showing.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Three very desirable summer houses. Located near the water of Little Traverse bay. Fine shade and pleasant surroundings. All are furnished and ready to occupy. Address Box 66, Bay shore, Mich.

Do Not Feed Crackers.

The habit of giving baby something to chew, etc., between meals is not to be advocated and crackers should be banished from the nursery. Far from being digestible, they are otherwise, for moistened by much saliva they go into the stomach as solid masses more or less pasteboard-like in effect and give the tiny organs hard work. When baby is old enough to have any such article of food, zwieback should be substituted for crackers.

Among trees in good season for the change, a child, no matter what age, should be kept on the food on which it thrives. If the feeding varies from what the infant has been accustomed to the method should still be followed. For instance, if there is a child visiting the home its usual hours must be kept and continued, and if it has been in the habit of getting its heavy meal at a time different from those at home effort should be made to let the individual regime continue. Otherwise the visitor is likely to become ill.

For example, a child of nine years who has been having her hearty meal at 6 o'clock went recently to visit some relatives who gave it to her in the middle of the day, with bread and milk at night. On coming home she told her mother that she had been hungry all the time at night and was unable to sleep, and she was really ill for three days afterward. It was entirely a result of changing hours of feeding.

A Quick Way.

No matter how much a woman may like to sew, she often gets very tired of the work, especially when there are just a few more stitches needed to complete an article. This is true of the busy mother who is always planning for the making of something else before the garment in hand is finished. By such a woman a helpful hint is appreciated.

For instance, when making a corset cover it takes time to cut and turn in the edges of material for a casing through which to run the ribbon necessarily used at the waist line of the article. A piece of strong tape of sufficient width will not have to be turned in, but merely to be sewed along each edge on the sewing machine and used as a casing.

The Crime Of Illness

Illness means trouble for any one, it is same with a lazy liver. It causes constipation, headache, jaundice, sallow complexion, pimples and blotches, loss of appetite, nausea, but Dr. King's New Life Pills soon banish liver troubles and build up your health. 25c. at F. G. Hines & Co.

The West Michigan Development Bureau.

To the Editor:

At a meeting of the West Michigan Developing Bureau, held at Baldwin, Aug 6th eleven counties were represented. Emmet county, was represented by E. A. Lilly, Pres., of the Petoskey fair and E. C. Rust, of the Tindle & Jackson Ltr. Co. and asked to be, and was admitted. Kent, Kalkaska, Milwaukee, Osceola, Mecosta and Ottawa counties were invited to join the bureau, provided, they do so before September 15th. Space 23 by 43 ft. on the main floor and, 500 feet in the gallery of the Colosseum at Chicago has been secured for the West Michigan exhibit at a cost of $2,200.00.

Mr. Hines has visited each county in the district, and reported each one working enthusiastically. Mr. Hoyle also gave a very elaborate account of the display that will be made at Chicago by the West Michigan Developing Bureau. This display will consist of fruit, vegetables and cereals, and the literature that will be given away, will be a map and history of the county, giving the number of churches, schools, high schools and our Normal, as well as the number of oranges, giving the number of oranges in the county, and the value of grape property.

It will also show the particular advantage of each city and village, with their saw mills and other manufacturing industries, together with a list of the cut-over lands held by the several companies and individuals, the advantages we have to offer to manufacturers, and the facilities we have for shipping, both by rail and water.

In summer resorts will receive full consideration, showing the beautiful summer homes, not only on Lake Michigan, but, also on our inland lakes. The board adjourned to meet at Ludington, September 15th.

Truly yours,
D. S. PAYTON.

—Fourteen Charlevoix Lady Maccabees went to Beaver Island Wednesday morning of this week on a Paterson trip.

—Jas. Wilkinson and wife, of Cleveland, are here visiting Mr. Wilkinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wilkinson.

—Hudson O. Smith, of Owosso, is the guest of his yearling kid at the house of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, on a week's vacation.

—The local W. C. T. U. will hold a baked goods sale in the McKinnon building, near the bridge, Saturday afternoon beginning at two o'clock.

—Superintendent Morton and Lieut. A. L. Gamble, Inspector, U. S. Life Saving Service, were here over Sunday and inspected the Charlevoix station.

—William Owen in "As You Like It" at the Charlevoix Theatre next Wednesday evening, August 25th. This will be the first Shakespearean attraction for Charlevoix in more than a year, and the house should be filled.

—Truman J. Mead, a clerk in the office of the A. Beck Co. fisheries for the having last spring successfully passed a civil service examination, has been tendered a position as stenographer in the Washington office of the Civil Service Commission, which he has accepted.

—There was never a more refined and scholarly gentleman on a Charlevoix stage than William Owen, and every member of his company is of the same high grade. Mr. Owen is a Shakespearian artist in its truest sense. Mr. Owen appears at Charlevoix Theatre next Wednesday evening in "As You Like It," one of Shakespeare's greatest productions. Charlevoix people should demonstrate their appreciation of high class talent by filling the house.

—Mr. Thos. Wadge and wife, of Winnipeg, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Frazier.

—New and interesting ads this week—J. L. Crane, M. A. Levinson & Co., A. Powers, B. W. Miller, E. A. Jefferies and S. M. See & Sons.

—Rev. L. P. Pence, pastor of Lutheran church of Dayton, Ohio, will preach in the Methodist church Sunday morning at 10:30. A cordial welcome to all.

—Manager Bridge continues to book good good plays for the Charlevoix Theatre. Next Monday evening will be given "Hidden Hand," one of the greatest productions ever staged.

—A. T. Stewart, of the Northville fish hatchery, has been in town for a few days. He came to plant 100 pretty well grown small mouth black bass in Barney's Lake, Beaver Island.

—Next Sunday, August 22, is "Big Sunday" at the Northport Indian camp meeting—one of the most interesting events of the year. The steamer Beaver will run an excursion on that day, leaving Wilkin's dock at 8:00 a. m., returning, leave Northport at 8:00 p. m. Fare, round trip, one dollar.

—"Bob" Shrier and his whole family, which includes his wife and the three acrobatic children, who have become famous as the "world's greatest juvenile athletes," holding six gold medals, are in the city for a short time visiting relatives. While they did not come with that intention, it is hoped that "Bob" may be induced to make an engagement at one of the local theatres.

—The anti saloon league will carry the fight into the upper peninsula this fall and the following counties are being organized: Mackinac, Schoolcraft, Chippewa, Dickinson, Luce and Marquette. In the lower peninsula the following will be the battle grounds: Leelanau, Grand Traverse, Antrim, Cass, Kalamazoo, Kent, Ingham, Macomb, Gladwin, Arenac, Roscommon, Ogemaw, Crawford, Oscoda, Otsego, Montmorency, Presque Isle, Shiawassee, St. Clair and Cheboygan.

—Boyne City Journal: Just as an indication of how the working men look upon local option we might mention that a man from St. Ignace was in the city Saturday seeking men for positions in mills and lumber yards. His inducements were good but he found many who informed him that they would not consider the proposition because, St. Ignace is in "wet" territory. Otherwise they would have been glad to accept. This shows the trend of public opinion in this city regarding local option.

—Frank N. Clark, superintendent of U. S. fish hatcheries, was in town Friday looking over the local plant and renewing the city water contract. Mr. Clark states that the spawn gathering has passed by the last legislature will be given a fair trial, but that no new work will be laid out in his department until the efficiency of the new arrangement is demonstrated. "Ten years from now is when the true story will be told," remarked Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark is right. The U. S. Fish Commission is working for the benefit of future generations, while the present law was enacted for the transient financial benefit of the fishermen.

—Charles S. Pierce, state game, fish and forestry warden, has issued an edict of warning from his office at Lansing, saying that the open season for brook trout and other kinds of trout found in the inland waters of the state will close this year on August fifteenth. Many people in all parts of the state have the impression that the new law passed at the recent session of the legislature, making an open season from May first to September first, has the effect of extending the open season this year until September first. Others think that the season will close August fifteenth, and then reopen on the nineteenth and remain open until September first. Still others think that the season will close August fifteenth, reopen on September first and remain open until September fifteenth. The laws passed at the last session of the legislature will not go into effect until the first day of September; therefore the new law cannot affect the season this year, which will close finally August fifteenth. After this year the open season will be from May first until September first.

—Bert A. Willan, of Chicago, spent Sunday in the city with his parents.

—Miss May Cornell, of Grand Rapids, and Mrs. Stanton, of Oak Park, Ill., are guests of Mrs. G. E. Wilbur.

—One of the most engrossing stories ever dramatized is "Hidden Hand." It will be presented at Charlevoix Theatre next Monday night.

—The "Southland Nightingale Jubilee Singers" will give a concert in the Congregational church at Ironton Saturday evening the 28th inst.

—Gate Lee, our old time Chinaman, who the past year has run the Antrim street laundry, has skipped the town and there are several people who would like to see the celestial "washee washee."

—Rev. M. Rhodes, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., will preach at the Congregational church next Sunday morning. The union service will be held in that church Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Ehle preaching the sermon.

—Clarence Withers, a young man with a decidedly scientific turn of mind, has installed a small but effective wireless outfit on the roof of the H. W. Miller store. On Sunday he picked up and conversed with the wireless operator on both the Missouri and Manitou, ten miles out in the lake.

—Down on the life saving station grounds the fine new cement-block residence of W. S. Hibbs is nearing completion. Cement sidewalks are being laid about the premises, and a large number of young trees set out. Every man in the crew, from captain down, is enthusiastic in the work of making the beautiful grounds more beautiful still.

—One of the enactments of the last legislature, to take effect September 1, makes subject to official inspection all steam crafts operated by machinery and engaged in carrying passengers for hire on waters subject to the jurisdiction of the state. The inspection will be made annually and will relate to hull, boilers, engine and other equipments. The certificate to be issued by the inspector will limit the number of passengers carried, with a $10 penalty for every passenger carried above the limit. The act prescribes regulations as to construction with reference to safety and prescribes navigation rules. Vessels licensed to carry 200 or more passengers must be provided with steam fire pumps and must have life boats and life preservers. The master pilot or engineer must undergo examination for license.

McCANN VINDICATED.

Seizure of Beaver Island Fish Declared to be Unjustified—"Pretty Kettle of Fish" for Deputy.

The SENTINEL last week gave an account of the seizure by deputy warden Allen Smith, of Traverse City, of 22 packages of fish from the steamship Missouri at Manistee. The fish had been shipped by Jas. McCann, of St. James, to a Chicago concern. The grounds for the seizure were that they were under sized whitefish. Mr. McCann had shipped them as menominees and suckers.

We related how Mr. McCann chased the fish to Traverse City from there to Traverse City, where they had been consigned to the asylum for crazy people by a crazy deputy. We also stated that Mr. McCann had reported the case to Warden Pierce, and at this point the second chapter of the interesting story begins.

Mr. Pierce ordered the fish sent to the Charlevoix warehouse of the Booth Co. for inspection, and instructed chief deputy C. N. Smith and the next deputy in rank, Mr. Eddy, both possessing brains and sense, to proceed to this city and inspect them. On Friday every package was emptied and every fish inspected, and there were found three small lake trout, which the wireless declared "did not eat any cheese," all the rest were officially declared to be suckers and menominees. Then chief deputy C. N. Smith telephoned deputy Smith at Traverse City to come here and fix up matters with Mr. McCann, and "make him good." But the measure of justice will not be filled until the resignation of deputy Allen Smith is received and accepted by warden Pierce.

With reference to Beaver Island fishermen, there still lingers in the minds of some people the old, time-worn hallucination, based chiefly upon tradition, that "no good can come out of Nazareth." That is the stigma of lawlessness has been fastened upon the Island by sensational newspaper correspondents and reporters at times when the unquestioned location of the island prevented an adequate defense. This tradition has long since and many times been exploded. Mr. McCann was the last victim of the success of the enterprise is the fact that no resident of Charlevoix or the environs of Boy City has made a complaint of a mischievous act on the part of the boys. They have been good "citizens." It has been "plug square" from start to finish.

While Fred Brown has been "the presiding genie in management, Judge Brown has been the high priest in the work of expounding the moral tenets that constituted the true basis of success. The Judge endeared himself to every boy on the grounds. His always cheerful and sympathetic magnetism has, ere this, reached every home that has furnished a boy, and it will remain. His good-bye to the boys last Friday illustrates this quality of his nature. We clip it from the Boy City Daily News:

"Good bye, boys, citizens of Boy City. Again and again have I put off saying this, but tomorrow will witness the silent tents white gleaming through the green foliage and birch-wrapped trunks of the trees.

"I shall stay here for a few days and dream of next year when again your shouts and songs shall ring along the shore of Pine Lake. Then I shall do more than dream next year, for I shall live over the past three weeks and wonder how marvelous God is when he can bring us all together from distant cities and states and different homes and creeds. And on the Square Game draw us to each other in a public matter, in which not only every fisherman but every lover of justice is interested.

"My eyes are winking too fast to write more. And if you were all here as I write I swore could say good bye for some times the voice sounds, O, so low when we say good bye. It will be a happy time when we meet next year and say Hello—so Good bye and Hello.

Yours in the Game,
JUDGE."

BOY CITY PULLS STAKES

The Juvenile Municipal Government Expires by Limitation—The Enterprise Justifies the Effort

—Will be Perpetuated.

The Boy City of 1909 has "folded its tents like the Arabs and quietly stolen away." But there will be a Boy City in 1910, and it will be more populous, and, consequently, more interesting and useful than that of 1909.

Friday was the closing day, but quite a swarm of "citizens" remained until Saturday. On that day the last tent-peg was drawn and the last piece of boy damage done to the boats and trains. All the boys were enthusiastic over the splendid outing, and all look forward to a similar outing to the next year, when it is hoped and expected that "the city of a thousand boys" will be a reality. The foundation is built and the superstructure will next year be built higher and broader, and the time will be lengthened to take in all of July and August.

The establishment of an enterprise of this kind involves much risk and more courage. While the theoretical results have amply justified it, the Boy City proposition has fallen short of expectations financially. The improvement of the grounds and the construction of permanent buildings has involved a large outlay, but this work will not have to be done again, and the management can start in next summer with courage and confidence. Already plans are being made for the future, and Mr. Fred H. Brown, the energetic manager, will remain here until the opening again. There is no doubt about the permanence of the enterprise. It is founded upon a principle that appeals not only boyhood enthusiasm but to parental school vacation solicitude. The boy government of the city has been both successful in administration and educationally profitable. There has been no sickness and no accident. Every department of the city has moved smoothly and there has been no unpleasantness worth speaking of. The boy officials, from mayor down have taken pride in their work, and excellent order has been preserved. A most important feature of the success of the enterprise is the fact that no resident of Charlevoix or the environs of Boy City has made a complaint of a mischievous act on the part of the boys. They have been good "citizens." It has been "plug square" from start to finish.

SPAIN NOW AT PEACE; AMERICANS ARE SAFE

Minister Says No Visitor Was Injured During Rioting in Barcelona.

FEAR TROUBLE IN THE FUTURE

Order now has been restored in every province in Spain, Barcelona has been calm for a few days and normal life has been resumed there. Saladell and Tarrasa have submitted to the troops and the numerous republics proclaimed in some of the towns fended away as soon as the soldiers made their appearance.

The American minister in Madrid announced on Wednesday that all Americans in Barcelona or in the affected districts during the recent disorders are safe.

The officials at Barcelona are taking every precaution to prevent any outbreak in the future. The terrible repressive measures of the military authorities have left a deep under current of resentment among the masses and fears are still entertained that another outbreak may flare up again in a new form. The people the claiming for the release of the prisoners in the dungeons of Fort Montjuich.

Denies Murders by Rioters.

Senor Soluerga, a Republican Senator, has arrived at Madrid from Barcelona. He denies the recent movement in that city was separatist and says also that the revolutionists during the two days they were masters of the city did not commit a single assassination or act of cruelty. The Republican and religious institutions fled when the killings were formed. One of the gravest losses in Barcelona is the library of the Christian schools and the Cerdofic museum, containing together 70,000 volumes. A new civil governor of Barcelona has been appointed.

The minister of the interior has given out a statement in which he says, among other things, that not only the reservists but volunteers are flocking to the recruiting stations for service in Morocco.

Says Women Attacked Monks.

The Paris Figaro's staff correspondent at Barcelona reports that the priest who had the worst fear of nuns but did not harm living nuns. The monks, however, were chased from cloisters and monasteries while the women in the crowds, who were especially on record cried "Away with you! No longer will you steal our needle and our bankbooks; no longer will you prevent your unfair competition over women finding employment."

Some incidents of the rioting assumed the phase of grewsome leitbeer. In one convent where there was a big stock of candles the women and children lighted these and held a mock procession, and two mummified bodies of nuns strayed in — another convent were carried with mock pomp before the festive eye of a millionaire citizen.

TWO KIDNAPED: $25,000 ASKED

Grace Vivians, 5 years old, and Thomas Vivians, 7 years old, children of a wealthy Italian manufacturer, were kidnaped in St. Louis, and are held for $25,000 ransom. A letter demanding that sum under penalty of injury or death to the children was received by the distracted parents and is now in the hands of the police.

Detectives have been sent through Italian quarter and five suspect arrested, though no trace of the children could be found. Though nothing in the letter demanding the ransom indicated it, the parents are of the belief that the Black Hand is back of the kidnaping, and, remembering the fate of two Louisiana children kidnaped by agents of the Black Hand Society some time ago, they feel sure their children will be stripped or killed unless the demands of the kidnapers are met or the children taken from them soon.

KILLED AT "DEATH CURVE."

Chicago-Whiting Electric Car Run Down by Suburban Train.

TAFT PRAISES PAYNE BILL

I have signed the Payne tariff bill because I believe it to be the result of sincere effort on the part of the Republican party to make a downward revision and to comply with the promises of the platform as they have been generally understood and as I interpreted them in the campaign before election.

This is not a perfect tariff bill, or a complete compliance with the promises made strictly interpreted, but a fulfillment free from criticism in respect to a subject matter involving many schedules and thousands of articles could not be expected. It adheres in say that, except with regard to whisky, liquors and wines, and in regard to silks and as to some high classes of cotton—all of which may be treated as luxuries and proper subjects of a revenue tariff—there have been very few increases in rates.

There have long, a great number of real decreases in rates, and they constitute a sufficient amount to justify the statement that this bill is a substantial downward revision and a reduction of excessive rates. This is not a free trade bill. It was not intended to be. The Republican party did not promise to make a free trade bill.

The Philippine tariff section I have struggled to secure for ten years past, and it gratifies me exceedingly by my signature to give it the effect of law. I am sure it will greatly increase the trade between the two countries, and it will do much to build up the Philippines in a beneficial property.

The corporation tax is a just and equitable excise measure, which, it is hoped, will produce the revenue anticipated to prevent a deficit and which incidentally will secure valuable statistics and information concerning the many corporations of the country, and will constitute an honest step forward that degree of publicity and regulation which the tendency in corporate enterprises in the last few years has shown to be necessary.

TARIFF BILL IS VICTOR; SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

SEVEN SENATORS BOLT G. O. P.

Within an hour thereafter, or at 6 o'clock, the Senate having adopted the conference report by a vote of 47 to 31, and both houses having adopted the concurrent resolution to correct the errors in the leather schedule, the special session of Congress adjourned without day. For good or ill, the revised tariff is before the people. The new law became operative at midnight.

Thursday night the President made a farewell dinner at the White House to the leaders of both houses of Congress. Friday evening he departed for the summer capital in Beverly.

Seven Republicans Vote "No."

Seven Republican Senators voted against the tariff bill. They were Messrs. Bourne of Oregon, Bristow of Kansas and La Follette of Wisconsin, Senator McGinty of Louisiana, Dixon of Montana and Jones of the bill. Details of the vote are as follows:

The passage of the bill was welcomed by crowded galleries. House members filled the rear of the Senate chamber. Prominent among the latter was Serene E. Payne, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who reported the bill will carry as its author.

Immediately after his return to the White House from the capitol, where he had gone to sign the Payne bill and thus the Philippine tariff and the inheritance tax provisions, President Taft issued a statement to the country. It is a defense of the new tariff law with reason to the people's pledges, and the President's campaign interpretation of the platform. The President does not seek to declare the bill perfect, but is the opinion he adheres to as having wrought substantial downward revision.

RECORD CROPS IN NORTHWEST.

Wheat and Corn Break All Records in Minnesota and Dakotas.

The Northwest has raised a great crop of grains this year. Harvest is at hand and the cutting of grain is general in Minnesota and South Dakota, and is creeping into North Dakota. The record will be broken as to wheat and corn, and probably oats and flax, while barley will hold its own and may prove to be a record crop also. It will require $375,000,000 to $400,000,000 to purchase these crops at present prices, and the transportation companies to emphasize the prosperity that has come once more to the people of the Northwest.

Boy Resists Girl to Death.

A Bendick mother, committed at Boylston, N. S., due to fight of her son, Andrew Isaard, 13-year-old negro, in the absence of his parents, tied the 9-year-old daughter, Mrs. Annie Ash to a tree and beat her to death. Young Isaard has been arrested.

Father and Son Are Drowned.

George Hodek, aged 45, and his son, Fred, aged 28, were drowned in Lake Minnemaulin, a short distance from St. Paul. The father fell out of the boat in which the two were fishing and the son dived for him and lost his life.

Women of 70 Dies in Fire.

TAFT TRIP OF 13,000 MILES.

President Outlines Itinerary for Fall Visit to West and South.

President Taft has made public a tentative outline of the trip he will take through the South and West this fall. The big trip will be a swing around practically the entire United States, embracing a journey aggregating 13,000 miles—as long as the cruise of the battleship fleet from Hampton roads, through the Straits of Magellan to San Francisco Bay.

The President, accompanied by Secretary Fred W. Carpenter, Captain Archibald W. Butt, his military aide, and a White House attaches and perhaps a guest or two for various parts of the trip, will travel in a private car attached for the greater part of the time to regular trains, but running "special" frequently. It will be a "White House on wheels." The President will start from Boston on Sept. 15, his fifty-second birthday.

Following is the itinerary as outlined:

Sept. 15—Boston.
Sept. 16—Albany.
Sept. 17—Madison and Portage, Wis.
Sept. 18—Minneapolis.
Sept. 19—Sioux Falls, Sioux City, Omaha.
Sept. 20—Denver, Colo.
Sept. 21—Colorado Springs and Pueblo, Colo.
Sept. 22—Kansas City, Topeka and Hutchinson, Kan.
Sept. 23—Salt Lake City, Utah.
Sept. 24—Butte and Helena, Mont.
Sept. 25—Spokane, Wash.
Oct. 2—Portland, Ore.
Oct. 3—Sacramento, Cal.
Oct. 5—Oakland, Berkeley, and San Francisco, Cal.
Oct. 6—Stockton.
Oct. 10—Fresno, Cal.
Oct. 11—Los Angeles, Cal.
Oct. 12—Grand canyon, Ariz.
Oct. 13—Albuquerque, N. M.
Oct. 14—El Paso, Texas, meeting with Mexican officials.
Oct. 15—San Antonio, Texas.
Oct. 16—Houston and Galveston, Texas.
Oct. 25—Hoosier and Dallas, Texas.
Oct. 26—Shreveport, La. 1102 East St. Louis, Ill.
Oct. 27—Memphis, Ill.; Hickman, Ky.
Oct. 28—Memphis, Tenn., and Helena, Ark.
Oct. 29—Vicksburg, Miss.
Oct. 30—Meridian, Miss., and Birmingham.
Nov. 1—Macon and Savannah, Ga.
Nov. 2—Jacksonville, Fla.
Nov. 6—Augusta, Ga.
Nov. 8—Charlotte, N. C.
Nov. 9—Wilmington, N. C.;
Nov. 10—Richmond, Va.
Nov. 11—Washington, D. C.
Nov. 12—Washington, D. C.
Nov. 13—Norfolk, Va.
Nov. 25—Hampton, Va.
Nov. 26—Washington, D. C.

The final return to Washington completes the President's longest trip outside of the mainland of the United States. Then he will start putting the finishing touches on his annual message.

FAMOUS "BLUE LAWS" KILLED.

Liberal Vote Defeat 1722 Statute—Sunday Baseball Now Possible.

Connecticut's famous "blue laws" legislature Wednesday passed a bill repealing the so-called "blue laws" relating to Sunday observance, which forbid almost every form of recreation and amusement. The laws, which have been seldom enforced, are relics of 1722. One blue law forbids "people provides for a fine of $4 on each person who shall sweep or scrape the floor or sweep out on the Lord's day. The penalty for this is short. It reads: the Sunday 24 hours all sports and secular activities "except such as are demanded by necessity and mercy, and such as are for the general welfare of the commonwealth." The penal laws provides both fines and imprisonment for violation. Under the words "general welfare" the legislature interpret it liberally. Bills calls for injury were heard at the camp, but the supporters of the measure, Senator Thomas Slossum, who was in the neighborhood, voted to the Sunday ball game held. He sampled Robinson by the men when he came up the second time and held him to a single. The Pirates had a lead of 3 runs.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with August 26, numbered 223 last week, 205 in the like week of 1908, 157 in 1907, 187 in 1906 and 186 in 1905. Canadian failures for the week number 27, which compares with 34 last week and 19 in the corresponding week of 1908.—Bradstreet.

CHICAGO.

The sustained improvement in business is emphasized by a high aggregate of payments through the banks, smaller trading defaults, and widening demands upon productive capacity and transportation facilities. Tariff revision has accomplished fact removes some uncertainties and may be made easier to decide upon new projects. Iron and steel conditions have entered upon a most encouraging outlook, and the success of that industry imparts strength to many other industrial branches.

Factory outputs begin to approach the best previous records. The aggregate of new demands for finished products assures increasing employment of facilities and labor, although the subject of adequate profits may for a time cause some hesitancy in commitments. Movements of commodities are seen to be steadily expanding and high temperatures cause widespread supplementary buying in the leading retail lines of the east and the interior.

An elevated advance in some cotton has brought increased activity in wholesale lines of general merchandise, the demand for utility cotton cheats being far above the numbers offered. The situation in woolens remain uniformly good, particularly as to corn, and this prospect of a bumper crop has caused a new purchasing power to be constructed as favorably in central Illinois and northwestern interior in commercial channels. Foreign movements are seen to be now draw more exhaustively upon available equipment, and grain now moving in unusually large and promise to continue so for months.

Bank clearings, $252,815,520, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 40.4 per cent.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 22, against 20 last week, 21 in 1908 and 24 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 3, against 1 last week, 4 in 1908 and 4 in 1907.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

With the advent of August the new tariff has become an accomplished fact, the leading stocks are assuming more tangible form with some temperate or not exactly excessive estimates of yield; high premiums on old supplies of farm products are disappearing and the effect of buyers' excursions are bringing purchasers to leading marketing. There is no doubt this year what was absent for two preceding years—a growing scarcity of labor.

On the other hand, there are some features of the trade and the industrial situation not as yet clearly defined, which are material for many for caution in placing orders in some lines of cotton goods and the advance in the price of leather and finished iron and steel is claimed to have diminished some buying movements.

United States Senator G. H. Gray, of Delaware, has been elected to the Georgia Legislature. His term will expire in 1911.

President Taft's faith in the corporation tax measure is unshaken. He will accept no substitute for the measure and will not modify it.

Democratic campaign committee of Ohio are to make an effort to send one of their best men to Congress two years hence. There are agreed this Mr. Pan Pain Dexter is to be the candidate.

The Democratic congressional committee, one year in advance of the usual time, has begun to select its elective officers and mapped out the course for campaign in Congress in the coming congressional elections.

Speaker Cannon has decided that if he there is open all the immigrants in the matter of committee assignments he would have to be considered during the opposition to Cannonism and the House leader for that reason the appoint of two or three of the insurgent leaders will be left out of the committees while others will be permitted to retain the assignments they held in the former Congress.

Congressman Ashbrook of Ohio has started the Democratic campaign of 1912 by asserting that a canvass of the Democrats in Congress shows a practically unanimous sentiment for the choice of Governor Harmon of Ohio as the best candidate of the party for President.

President Taft has several notes of such congressional leaders of the Republican party that the minority is confident that the minority has gained ground since the last election, and that the President's position is that, so far as within his power, he will see that the pledges are kept.

SAYS FIRM RESTRAINS TRADE.

Arcanum Company Headed by Chicago Man.

Alleging that the American Seating Company is a combination in restraint of trade, George A. Bullard of Marshall, holder of $7,500 in stock of the corporation, began suit against the concern in Grand Rapids. Bullard alleges that he represents the minority stockholders, who, he says, were ignored in the 1906 reorganization of the American School Furniture Company, when the American Seating Company was formed. He asks an injunction that the corporation is now losing money for the minority stockholders.

WOMEN LEAP FROM FIERY BOAT

Gasoline Launch Becomes Ignited, but Party Reaches Shore.

While Lillian Gilmore, Mr. Edith Jones and baby of Chicago, Mrs. John Bryant and child and Mrs. Ida Jones, who are with a camping party at Central Lake, were in the Cadmus launch, a gasoline tank leaking tank was ignited by accident. The launch at the time was about half from the shore, where the water was quite deep. The women jumped into the lake and reached shore safely. The boat was destroyed. Nearby the camping party in tents were represented in the party.

DIVORCED WIFE SLAYS FARMER.

Shooting Follows Quarrel Over Division of Property for Each.

Jacob Hoffman, a farmer living ten miles from Lansing, in Clinton County, died late Sunday from 12 bullets wounds inflicted by his divorced wife, after a quarrel over the division of barns. Mrs. Hafer was arrested and taken to jail so St. James. According to the story of the 9-year-old son of the couple, who was the only witness, the quarrel began over a disagreement over a financial settlement following the divorce, which was granted a year and a half ago.

MINOR STATE ITEMS.

John Liberg, a Forest Grove farmer, was accidentally killed Monday from a blow in the head of hay which he was loading in the barn.

While bathing in Pine Lake, Benjamin Hood, 12 years old, of Boyne City, was drowned Sunday afternoon. In 1911, however, his movements will be followed with great interest by his countrymen.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Railroads and Waterways.

Close study of the conditions of the inland waterways of this country shows that the prosperity or the depression of traffic upon canals and rivers is dependent in large part on the quality of competition picked by the railroads. Lower rates mean bulk traffic grasp upon inland business.

While freight can be carried much cheaper by water than by rail, figured on the cost per ton mile, transfer, handling and storage cost eat up all the savings of a shipment. Regulation of charges on waterways is made difficult if an attempt were made to counteract the retaliatory rates of railroads. Hence the real feasibility of an adjustment of differences which would promote the development and the prosperity of waterways lies, probably, in an understanding between the rival interests.

The Railroad men of foresight have said that the rail lines must some day, if they would survive, take up the carriage of surplus. The companies would then have to provide the new boats in order to hold all the freight they can, build terminals and wharves and discharge water shipments.—Toledo Blade.

Who Owns America?

For the last generation the magazine muckrakers have chosen to convince corporation control with corporate ownership. The millions of a trust combination, for the sake of the argument and the rhetoric of title, are generously shoveled into the coffers of a small group of men. "Who owns America?" asked one of the magazine gentlemen of fantasy. The implication was that the men whose portraits were reproduced in the article were the owners. At best they are merely had control. And stock ownership, as it has been shown in scores of instances, is a thing as uncertain as political popularity.

The population of the United States, it is estimated, is now about 96,000,000. Assuming the ownership of the human creatures twenty million two possess stock in corporations, or other other branch of Congress within the ten years to come, is doubtful. After his return to the United States in 1910 or 1911, however, his movements will be followed with great interest by his countrymen.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

INDIAN'S MEMORY HONORED.

Monument to Chief White Pigeon is Unveiled.

The people of White Pigeon, one of the oldest towns in Southwestern Michigan, on Wednesday unveiled a monument to the Pottowattomie chief, White Pigeon, who died in the last century due to one the settlement at that place. Chief White Pigeon, or in the Indian language Ma-ne-ko-ne-ne was probably at the time of his death, about 70 years of age, he is described as having been tall, athletic, and as especially fleet runner; he seems to have been a splendid type of the American Indian at his best, brave and courageous, with high ideals of truth and honor. According to the beautiful Indian legend, Chief White Pigeon, while in the neighborhood of Detroit, learned of a meeting among the Indians and a threatened attack upon the settlement at White Pigeon. Fording creeks and swimming rivers, he made a long journey that lined the almost his splendid powers of endurance, and reached the settlement but not rest, so kept on until he had reached the settlement and warned the friends, and then his mission seemed fulfilled, he fell of exhaustion and died. He was buried on the outskirts of the town. The Alba Columbia Literary Club of Detroit raised the money for the erection of the monument in hand and placed a bronze memorial boulder on the mound with an appropriate inscription. The ceremony of unveiling was performed by Master Willie White Pigeon, of Boer, the great-great-grandson of Chief White Pigeon. Other descendants of Chief White Pigeon also were present.

SAVES ANOTHER LAD'S LIFE.

Wallace Sheram, of Muskegon, Rescues Drowning Boy.

Wallace Sheram, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace H. Sheram, on and the life of John Robinson, a child, aged 10 years, of Muskegon, was Monday afternoon in a party of crude boys from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Chicago, camping at Lake Harbor. He displayed the heroism of his ancestor, Sheram, who, in the last boys' swimming hole, crossing the lake in a boat and going in swimming, as the other lad, who was not quite out of his depth, was drowning, he swam to the boat and with great difficulty pulled the boy into safety. His pal saved himself.

John Bozard, a sixty grower 55 years of age, was probably fatally injured in a runaway accident in Kalamazoo. His skull was fractured, and several ribs broken and he received internal injuries.

Engineer McCrory was killed and three other trainmen were severely injured when a Grand Trunk freight and Indiana Railway passenger train collided in Fort Wayne, one of the 148 street crossing in Kalamazoo.

The semi-centennial of two Southern churches will be observed next summer, fifty years having elapsed since the founding and dedication of St. Ignatius Catholic and Grace Methodist Episcopal churches of Houghton.

The body of Mrs. Ida Jones, who was drowning were recovered from Lake Michigan Sunday evening. The body of Ann Martenaer, aged 16 years, who was drowned while crossing the ice on Lake Michigan, Jan. 1, was found in the lake, and the body of an unknown man, who was drowned in Jan. 1, was in the water a week or more, was found near the Portage lake lighthouse.

The contract for Bayne City's new schoolhouse was let Tuesday afternoon, Price Bros. of East Jordan being the lowest bidders and were awarded the work.

Petoskey News: Charles L. Fraser an old pioneer in this city and county, died at Detroit on August 9th. Mr. Fraser represented Emmet and Cheboygan counties in the low house of the state legislature for two years and was also interested to a large extent at one time in real estate in this city. Older residents will remember him, as he was active in church and other affairs.

Arrangements have been made for bringing a goodly portion of the exhibit which the Western Michigan Development Bureau will display at the Land and Irrigation Exposition in Chicago, November 20th to December 4th, to Traverse City for the week of the session of the Michigan State Grange, December 14-18. The grangers of the Grand Traverse region are planning upon supplementing the bureau's exhibit with products from their farms.

Petoskey Record: One of Petoskey's prominent physicians, either unappointed with or having forgotten the laws of Boy City, had them explained to him in an explicit manner last Sunday afternoon. The doctor was standing in a secluded spot on the grounds enjoying one of his favorite cigars, when a light-looking chap of a dozen, or fifteen years appeared and quietly informed his doctorship that it was against the rules to smoke in Boy City and the cigar must be reserved till outside of the grounds. The information was not taken seriously until in answer to his authority the little chap announced himself as chief of police and the cigar instantly disappeared.

John Doublite did not break the record in regard to trout, but got a good prop under it, when he successfully landed a German Brown trout at Bellaire last week that weighed exactly six pounds. The trout was caught in the pond at the municipal lighting plant after dark that night, and had to be played for an hour to get the fight out of him. The record for the season was made about three weeks ago by W. S. Walker, when he successfully stayed with another German Brown that proved to weigh six pounds and 12 ounces. There pound trout no longer attract much attention here, hardly a week passing that least one of that size or larger is not caught.

Northport is now equipped with one of the best electric light systems in the state, the Leland Electric Light & Power company having installed 40 60 candle power arc lights on the streets. Northport undoubtedly is ahead of Traverse City in its lights, and it is safe to say that there is no light in Traverse City as good as one of the street lights in Northport. The prospects are bright for two new hotels in the future, Kehl Bros. expect to put up a fine hotel on Kehl's point, and there is strong talk of erecting a stock company for the purpose of building a hotel on the site of the old Northern, which burned three years ago. Charter Swatasch is ready with the ground, which is valued at $1,000.

East Jordan Enterprise: John F. Greenman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milan Greenman, aged five months and twenty-three days, was burned to death in the fire that destroyed the Greenman home on Stone's addition Tuesday evening. The fire was discovered shortly before six o'clock Tuesday evening and is supposed to have originated from the fire in the kitchen stove. Mrs. Greenman had started to get supper ready and had gone to a neighbors on an errand leaving the baby asleep in the kitchen and startling to return home was horrified to see her home a seething mass of flame. The alarm was sounded and the fire department was soon upon the scene and with two lines of hose soon had the blaze under control and was able to recover the body of the infant, though it had burned almost beyond recognition.

Traverse City Record: The local office of the Western Michigan Development Bureau is now in thorough working order and the work of gathering information is going steadily forward. Mr. Howe has secured an automobile in which he will traverse the territory in search of information in order to be independent of the railroads in making near-by places. There are now on file at the office automobile maps of the various sections of the state, and also a diagram of the space that the exhibit will have at the exhibition at Chicago. Mr. Howe is now engaged in collecting data for the special book that is to be issued for distribution at the Chicago exposition. This book will be 9x12 inches in size and contain from 80 to 100 pages and will be a special edition of the Fruit Belt, which is published in Grand Rapids. This book will contain maps of all the counties in the bureau, as well as pictures of scenes within the counties. The work of the local office is now being devoted to collecting data of the industries and resources of the section, which will be kept on file for the use of all who may desire it. Mr. Howe will be in this city one day of each week and will spend the other five days in the other counties in the bureau. There are now 12 counties organized and seven others have been invited to join. This plan will take in all counties from Oceana north to the straits.

Central Lake Torch: Alta M. McCartney, wife of the editor of this paper, was suddenly stricken by death at three o'clock this morning. Her trouble was of an unaccountable nature affecting the bronchial tubes in such a way as to prevent breathing, and she passed away before the doctor, who was summoned with all haste could reach the bedside. Alta M. Wilcox was born in Southern Michigan in 1870, coming to Petoskey with her parents in her infancy, where she has lived the greater portion of her life. She was married at an early age to Morton A. Pelton, with whom she lived happily for about ten years, when her husband met an accidental death in a paper mill at Watervliet. Three children were the result of this union, Mrs. T. B. Temple of Columbus, Ohio, Mrs. Charles L. Ball, of Mackinaw, and Morton A. Pelton of this village. For ten years after the death of her first husband Mrs. McCartney made a brave fight to rear her young family. November 17, 1897, she married the writer of this and has since been a loyal faithful wife to him. She was a good woman, a good wife and devoted mother, always cheerful and kindly, she filled well her place.

One of the Season's Best.

Mrs. Southworth's justly celebrated story of the "Hidden Hand" one of the most powerful glimpses of real American life ever penned, will arrive, in the form of a new four act play by Eugene Moore at the Charlevoix Theatre Monday, August 25.

The play, which is of course entitled the "Hidden Hand," will have only one presentation here. Many have read the story and remember the whipping, childlike, dauntless Capitola, Mr. Moore, with the true instinct of the first class actor that he is, has preserved all the charm of this character and straightened it beyond the power definition of it for the stage. Around about her in the rugged life of the "folks" of the Blue Ridge Mountain districts of Virginia before the war. The comedy, the pathetic, the poetry, picturesque scene and romance are all most ingeniously shown in this new dramatization, say the critics. Manager Fred C. Conrad has selected a company for this production with his usual care and the attraction altogether should be one of the very best of the season. Charlevoix Theatre Monday, August 25.

The New Primary Law.

Now that the candidates for the republican nomination for governor are beginning to be at least mildly active, it will be of interest to note the provisions of the new primary law relative to the activities of candidates. The law makes it unlawful for a candidate to circulate any printed matter or advertisement of greater dimensions than four inches in length by two and one fourth inches in width excepting postal cards and letters. No handbill or printed matter may be circulated if it contains a cut of the candidate larger than two inches high by one and one half inches wide, except in a newspaper having a bona fide circulation of more than three months standing. Newspapers are prohibited from charging for this service a rate greater than the highest regular rate named on its advertising schedule. It is made unlawful for a candidate to post or cause to be posted any campaign card, banner, handbill poster, lithograph, halftone, engraving or photograph of himself within the territory within which he is a candidate. It is also made lawful for a candidate after he has announced his candidacy or filed his petition, to purchase clothes of any kind for his constituents or permit treating to be done by others in his behalf. The next campaign will witness a wonderful departure in methods of campaigning.

Barnard News

The Rev. Adam Clark is expected to visit Barnum in a few days. We wonder what for.

And now the young people of Barnard are going to go the Hay City one better with a program and refreshments on Tuesday evening, August 24. If they's drivers are not sick it is expected some very fine talent from Filson avenue will be there, that will eclipse the quartets of the last entertainment. The young people say the entertainment positively will start before 10:30 p. m.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Even delicate glass can be safely washed in very hot water if slipped in edgewise.

Insects the neither salt nor alum, and enough odiferes to the carpet to keep them away.

Saturate grass stains on children's clothes, etc., in paraffin and then put into the washtub.

When vegetables with roots become soft and withered slice off one end and lay in water for a few hours.

A spoonful of sugar added to the water for basting roast beef will give a rich brown color as well as a fine flavor.

Burning oil is spoiled by water. To extinguish it throw flour, sand or earth on it. The idea is to prevent the oil spreading.

Starch should be mixed with nappy water, for thus the linen will have a more glossy appearance and be less likely to stick to the iron.

Clothes lines and pegs will last much longer if they are boiled for ten minutes when new. It is a good plan to repeat the boiling occasionally.

It is an excellent plan, if you live in a house, to have a "house purse" downstairs in a convenient place, so that when a little change is needed for something you are not obliged to run upstairs for it.

Remember in washing the china silk from that best rosette are obviated by treating it when damp. Do not let it dry at all on the line after it is washed. Roll it up in a cloth for about ten minutes and then iron on the wrong side.

Corner Rhymes.

Corner rhymes is a fine game and is played thus: The players sit in the four corners of a room. Those in one corner decide upon a word in rhyming. The word must be one that has three words rhyming with it. Then those players act the word until one of the other groups guesses it and places acting one of the rhymes. As soon as the third and fourth corners guess they act two other rhymes, all high by one and the last locks wins, except in a newspaper having a bona fide circulation of more than three months standing. Newspapers are prohibited from charging for this service a rate greater than the highest regular rate named on its advertising schedule. It is made unlawful for a candidate to post or cause to be posted any campaign card, banner, handbill poster, lithograph, halftone, engraving or photograph of himself within the territory within which he is a candidate. It is also made lawful for a candidate after he has announced his candidacy or filed his petition, to purchase clothes of any kind for his constituents or permit treating to be done by others in his behalf. The next campaign will witness a wonderful departure in methods of campaigning.

FOR TIRED EYES.

Looking Into Space Occasionally is Very Restful.

When any other organ of our body gets tired we do not hesitate to rest it, but few people take systematic rest of the eyes. Yet they, being very sensitive, need especial care.

Women will say, "My eyes are so tired I can hardly see!" Yet, instead of stopping the sewing or embroidery, they stitch away in a dim light with no thought of rest to follow.

It is not possible for every one whose eyes are weary to stop work for a time, but it is possible for them to rest and close the eyes for a few seconds. This gives a needed rest to the muscles and the habit, once formed, will postpone the evil day of glasses and headaches.

Another quick rest for tired eyes is to look into space occasionally. Your friends may accuse you of being lovesick, or heavy, but who cares if vision is strengthened thereby?

The woman whose eyes are on a constant strain will find it time well spent if she rise occasionally from her work, step over every two house, and fasten her eyes with very left or very cold water. One must decide for herself which gives greatest relief. One famous oculist declares cold water for those under forty years of age and hot water thereafter.

If one's eyes stay tired persistently, the cause must be looked into. It may be due to faulty vision, and an oculist should be consulted without delay. There is no proper economy than to fool with one's eyesight.

Often tired eyes come from a run-down condition of the health, sometimes from serious functional disorders. One may complained for months of tired eyes, and yet, upon a slight tingling discomfort until, too late, he learned the tired feeling was caused by handling of the fetcher and blindness was inevitable.

If your eyes stay tired persistently, try to keep in good physical condition by exercise, diet and fresh air. Should they still annoy you consult a doctor at once.

African Elephants.

In portions of Africa the native believe when a herd of elephants is startled and runs away the bulls, if necessary, pick up and carry on their backs the little ones which may not be able to keep up with the herd. These little ones when first born weigh not more than 30 pounds and of course might readily be carried, as stated. We do not know that any white man has ever seen this, but the natives insist that it is true.—Forest and Stream.

Washington Hopes For a Salon.

A phase in the character of the only New York celebrity in a cabinet house is her fondness for getting celebrities together. The hope is large that at least Washington may have a salon. Mrs. Wickersham is a profound student of public affairs and public men. Experienced leaders of society have declared the salon impossible. Mrs. Wickersham thinks differently. She is especially interested in the personnel of leaders of thought, not only in the political world, but in the worlds of science and letters. Her most apparent approach to the salon Washington has known in the last few years has been in the British embassy since the advent of James Bryce and Mrs. Bryce. When the traditions etiquette places on the activities of foreign chancelleries are considered, if Mrs. Wickersham is as earnest in her efforts as Mrs. Bryce has been a brilliant reputation awaits her.

Crotons Used For Embroidery Bag.

A nice little embroidery bag is made of crotons covered with two embroidery hoops and finished at the ends with the cardboard covered with crotons just the size of the hoops. In other words, the bag is built like a barrel, with no opening at the side. The opening is held together by lacing with ribbon or by two buttons.

The bag is carried by ribbon loops, which are fastened at each end to the embroidery hoops.

It is pretty, and the sewing materials do not get lost when thus protected.

ALL PIANOS
In Use at the Meeting of the Bay View Assembly
GRINNELL BROS.
After ordering the pianos Mr. Hall inserted the following article in the Bay View Magazine, the official organ of the Assembly:

"Steinway" and "Grinnell" Pianos Chosen.

Acting upon the principle that nothing is too good for the Bay View Assembly, we have arranged with Grinnell Bros. for the use of Steinway and Grinnell Bros. pianos during the Assembly meetings. These Pianos are every where recognized as the best. The Steinway, as every musician knows, is the World's standard; the Grinnell is a magnificent piano manufactured by Grinnell Bros. at their own factory in Detroit. We have selected these pianos in preference to other makes because we are confident they will give large satisfaction. At the close of the Assembly Grinnell Bros. will offer these pianos for sale at greatly reduced prices. This will be a splendid opportunity for those desiring to purchase high class pianos, for these instruments will be as good as new, yet possessing all the savings.

Since the above was printed we have furnished, on additional order from Mr. Hall, several beautiful WEGMAN PIANOS from our Petoskey warerooms.

Prospective Piano Buyers Should Note Well These Facts.
Our pianos were selected for the Assembly meetings in preference to ALL other makes. They are giving perfect satisfaction in every respect. They were chosen particularly for their superior qualities of tone, and YOU CAN obtain ordinary pianos would never do for Assembly Artists and Assembly Audiences.
Immediately at the close of the Assembly these pianos will be offered for sale at LIBERAL REDUCTIONS—affording prompt buyers a matchless opportunity to secure highest grade pianos, especially selected by competent judges, at SUBSTANTIAL SAVINGS and on easy terms of payment.
See us at once, or write, for Special Prices and all particulars, if you are interested in securing one of the Magnificent Assembly Pianos.

An Ingenious Tuck.

The mother who groans over the disarrangement of her yarn sox on the knees of his stockings should adopt the plan of one ingenious mother who has devised now to make stockings last twice as long.

In buying she selects stockings as long as they can be bought and before wearing rips a tuck about the ankle just below the shoe top, where it will not show in walking.

When the knees of her son's stockings become hopelessly darned the tuck is ripped and the worn part raised so that it falls under the shoe, whereupon, while a whole knee takes its place.

No Trouble About That.

The druggist's clerk handed him his change politely.

"You want to read the directions carefully," he said, "so as to know how to use the powder you ask to take."

"I never take 'em off," answered Mr. Wiggleboots. "I always wear the things till they drop off."—San Francisco Chronicle.

FOR THE EPICURE.

Three Odd Dishes That Are Not Difficult to Prepare.

This is the way one woman millionaire broiled broad crumbs and made a quickly made dessert. She spread the bottom of a glass dish with powdered sugar and broad crumbs spread over this she put a layer of whipped cream and a spoonful or two of preserves, then more crumbs and sugar and another layer of whipped cream and preserves. The cook the job pares this to a German, and she calls the simple dainty "pottergeister."

Dutingness apples are prepared thus: Choose twelve apples, not too large and all of one size. Peel them and remove the core. Stew gently in syrup until tender, but not broken. Let cool. Place in a glass or silver dish, strain and then color the syrup pink and fill the hollow in each apple with red currant jelly, and let stiffen slightly to be pounced in. For the syrup use a boiled syrup of sugar, the same of water, the juice of one lemon and the peel of half.

An appetizing way to prepare dessicated soda-frothy Boumber is to skin and flake two of the fish and season with salt, pepper and a little lemon juice. Place them in a well buttered fireproof dish, cover with buttered paper and bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes, moistening with a little stock. For the sauce, stew four large tomatoes, then rub them through a sieve and mix with them the juice of half a lemon, a pinch of salt and pepper and add the liquid in which the tomatoes were cooked. Stir well, make thoroughly hot and pour over the fish. Chopped mushrooms or truffles may be added to the sauce, and a glass of wine should not be omitted.

Stewed chicken with olives is delicious. Cut the chicken into neat joints and fry them in butter or sweet olive oil in a saute pan. Pour off the oil and add a finely minced onion. Cook for a little time and then moisten with rich brown stock gravy. Cover the pan and stew gently for about half an hour, or until the meat has sunk well below taking up the chicken and twenty stoned olives. Dish up on a mound of fried bread and garnish with the olives. Pour the sauce strained, round the fowl and serve.

WELL GROOMED WOMEN.

For, After All, Nature Hasn't Done Much For Them.

An Eighteenth-century writing in the Queen describes that she considers Nature very much overrated in the matter of taste.

"For instance," says the lady, "it is perfectly evident that Nature constructs the least color for human hair in the shape of a pedestal. Imagine to her the charms of auburn, gold or midnight locks and she says in effect:

"Thank, Olive use a good durable shade like potato bronze!"

"So she proceeds to give it to us. "Straight hair too! Wavy hair is more becoming to ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, yet I suppose not one woman in a thousand has real, naturally wavy hair. Nature does it solely alone. Not Venus herself would look well with a sharp zone, yet life's pathway would be illuminated by countless millions of them if we left the matter to Nature.

"When it comes to our attitude or carriage, how many of us would not stop if we were simply natural? Our ancient ancestors probably stooped frightfully. Our feet! Theories to the contrary notwithstanding, I assert that nature never meant without shoes spoil the beauty of one's foot.

"Though nobody thinks less of a small waist than I do, I assert that if I had a waist of more than twenty-five inches I should look dowdy unless it was round. The lucky possessor of an absolutely round waist may have one of twenty-five inches and still appear to measure only eighteen.

"Nothing can be more beautiful than an absolutely lovely, natural woman—a woman with perfect skin and hair, features and figure, a woman for whom Nature has done everything at her very best—but how often do you find her? Once in a million times perhaps.

"As for most of us, we want our hair, even if abundant, to be coaxed into ballooning and form; we want our jewelry and our clothes carefully prepared and kept clean. The same with our skin. We want to be taught to walk and dance and hold ourselves properly, to know the right ways, the right boots, the right clothes. We want our color bettled and our general taste tutored; we want to be taught to push not to talk through our noses or out of our boots, not to laugh too loud or in an unfortunately suggestive manner. We want to be taught to take care of our souls—the right kind of souls Nature does Nature but want justice, in short, we require civilization where our appearances are concerned if we are to be fit to look at."

BEAUTY HINTS.

Many nervous women find that they can sleep better if they take a bran bath just before retiring.

Every time you pick up something from the floor for the landlady come absolutely from the lips and not the knees. This exercise will make the waist supple.

One cannot have a pretty hand if the fingers are kept stiff and the tips bended down on the ends of the fingers from the first joint to the tip with, if done many times a day, remedy this defect.

Any exercise that works muscles and chords that the dancers procure elegance, and for this reason aquatics is certainly to be recommended but no person shall sit immediately after eating.

The middle second figure is to be forgot. You can avoid it by diet and exercise, which is to say, eat nourishing food and solid and which will do away with the fatty rolls on hips and plaster. Do not drink coffee from your grocer a pound and a half of round steak chopped fine. Heat this without butter in a frying pan. This amount will do for three meals. Stew lettuce, potatoes, cream, sugar and fole. A little care and you will be slender again.

Three Salads.

A delicious salad served at a luncheon recently consists of half a dozen plates. On each plate there was a white lettuce leaf and on this in the middle of it shredded celery dressed with mayonnaise and sprinkled with the top white and tender yellow inside leaves. Around the second there were slices of Spanish red onions.

For a lunch fruit salad when fresh fruit is not at hand pare a can of peaches, drain it and arrange the halves of the fruit on lettuce leaves, sprinkle them with shredded almonds and a few cherries if they are at hand, and dress them with mayonnaise. If nuts and cherries are not at hand the peaches are excellent alone.

A woman with a long oval regular face should fasten walnut insets with a slice of onion and a blade of mace for fifteen minutes in cold water and chilled lemon and serves on lettuce leaves with sections of hard boiled eggs and mayonnaise. As a garnish she uses strips of olives.

To Save the Slippers.

For the very fine slipper, whose softness needs little more than the old time stuffing of cotton and tissue paper, there is a homemade sprinkler that will save the price of a shoe tree.

Take a pint of lime, covered sheets, flour that come for boiling water sauce. Cover this with puffed ribbon or silk and stick one end of each sheet in the lime and cover the exposed with ribbed ribbon or silk. This bill should be big enough to fill the vamp of the slipper and should be sufficient reason to the steel. Finally it is to be placed in the slipper toe, after which the other end of the sheet is stuffed into the heel.

Difficult.

Judge decides that it is difficult at times to account for the bright sayings of some children after hearing their parents talk.

John Saxton sat in the office of the Tarleton Gazette as he did night in fifteen years. He had left home the morning after Melissa Ordeman had been officiated and John would no more know Mrs. Saxton than Queen Elizabeth. His work in Clarkson was at an end. The Saxton Publishing Company had sold his interest to a rival concern, which meant, in some mysterious way, a reduction of service with them. He had lately sold the Pinnacle, which was in fact, if he reasoned on the Nemesis, thanks that it could be done, and he was the loser of it. He had run against the afternoon mail. He picked up the Tarleton Gazette and the pale dated from San Francisco, and read:

"My Dear Jack:

"I remember about writing you, but there are some things which I should like you to know about me in case I find fully expected to remain with you and Bishop Seymour for the rest of my life. Clarkson that had seemed to be my destiny. I thought I could get back the peace I had known in the Episcopal church, but I can only say, it may have seemed a witness to Christ for me to do what I had felt intended acting on the bishop's advice, when I came, and I was very, very glad. But when the wind blowed right across me, and I felt that I could not go back and live the parade I had known, after I had tried to live a life of the truth, there in the church house that I helped build, and I felt that I could not make it there enough like one disciple, I felt that I was not worth it, and I felt that I was not worth it, and I felt that I was not worth it, and Almost Fatal Runaway Accident.

Mrs. Cynthia Vosburg, who lives just south of town in Marion, met with a severe accident last Saturday, and for some time it was thought to be fatal.

With Mr. Vosburg she was driving her vegetable wagon on the north side, when a cracked shaft gave way and fell under the horse's feet, frightening him into a run. The rig brought up against a tree near Mrs. Ainslie's residence, throwing both the aged people violently to the ground. Mr. Vosburg escaped with a few bruises, but the old lady received a bad cut across her nose and cheek and suffered a dislocation of her shoulder.

Mrs. Dr. Abt, one of the north side resort people, rushed to her assistance, calling several resort gentlemen to her aid. Tenderly and skillfully Mrs. Abt applied "first aid." She caused a cot and blankets to be brought from a near-by cottage, a dray was pressed into service, and, accompanied by the gentlemen she was carefully conveyed to Dr. Tholen's office, and later to her own home.

She is said to be doing nicely, but her advanced age makes the injury a serious one.

Man Drowned in Pine Lake.

G. H. Cogger, a resident of Detroit, who was spending his vacation with his father-in-law, H. H. Smith, of Hayes township, owner of what is commonly known as the Whitmore farm, was drowned in Pine Lake last Sunday noon.

He was, with a few friends, enjoying a bath in Pine Lake. All of the others had gone ashore, leaving Mr. Cogger wading about in shoal water, but, evidently near the channel-bank. Looking lakeward his companions discovered that he had disappeared. They immediately went to the spot where they last saw him, but the body had disappeared, and, up to this writing, Monday morning, it had not been recovered, although the life saving crew made a diligent effort to locate it. Cogger was known to be a good swimmer.

Deceased leaves a wife and one son. He was in the employ of the National Can Co., of Detroit.

LATER.—The body was found Monday afternoon. Funeral and interment at South Lyon, Mich.

A Pomona Grange Event.

The Charlevoix County Pomona Grange, at its recent meeting, gave a very striking demonstration of the activity and thrift of Grange matters in this section. This body enjoys the distinction of having the largest membership of any Pomona Grange.

More than 100 were present and ten of the townships of 13 were represented. Reports were read from many of the subordinate granges in the county, showing a total membership of 800, and property worth $11,000. Hon. D. E. McIlroy of Muskegon spoke. D. S. Payton, director of the West Michigan Development company, was present and told of the plans for the Chicago exhibit, and committees were appointed to gather products for the exhibit.

Thus were discussed for attending the meeting of the state grange at Traverse City. It is probable that 500 from here will attend that meeting. A meeting will be held in October with the Pine Lake grange at which time an address will be delivered by N. P. Hull, master of the state grange. The meeting here closed by the initiation of 37 into the Pomona degree.

Woman's Missionary Society.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Congregational church will meet at the home of Mrs. H. H. Fowler, Antrim street, Friday, August 20, at 2:30 p.m. Topic, "India."

This meeting will be especially interesting as Mrs. Green, who will speak, has travelled considerably through India, making a thorough study of the conditions existing in that country. The following program will be rendered:

Piano solo—Beulah Monroe.
Vocal solo—Mrs. A. Davidson.
India—Mrs. Green.
Piano solo—Marion Parsons.
Vocal solo—Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

Washington's Plague Spots

lie in the low, marshy bottoms of the Potomac, the breeding ground of malaria germs. These germs cause chills, fever and ague, billiousness, jaundice, lassitude, weakness and general debility and bring suffering or death to thousands yearly. But Electric Bitters never fail to destroy them and cure malaria troubles. "They are the best all-round tonic and cure for malaria I ever used," writes H. M. Jones, of Lousiana, Mo. C. Beaver Island News.

Since the last issue Beaver Island has witnessed several eventful happenings. Last Thursday an Amusement company arrived on the Island and are giving vaudeville performances in the new hall every evening.

Sunday the Beaver Island ball team defeated the Manistique ball team on the Beaver Island grounds in a score of 10 to 3. The game was fast and interesting, proving the ability of the Beaver team. Next Sunday the Naubinway team will visit the Island and a good game is anticipated.

Monday evening the Holy Cross Dramatic society rendered a most pleasing vaudeville entertainment. Wm. A. O'Malley, nephew of Mrs. James Donlevy, and a successful young dramatist of St. Paul, is visiting with his aunt and brought with him several of his one act playlets, which he presented. Immediately upon his arrival he organized the Holy Cross Dramatic society, the members of which assisted him in the presentation of his playlets. They were "At Boarding School" and "Her Last Performance." The leading female role in both playlets was interpreted by Miss Roe Donlevy, a cousin of the dramatist and the leading male role was played by Mr. O'Malley. Those assisting in the cast were Miss Maude Counagan, Miss Myrtle Douglas and M. J. Harty.

Mr. Hansman, of Davenport, Iowa, and Mr. Wm. Shled, of the Island, rendered several violin duets in a pleasing manner.

Miss Annie O'Malley, of Chicago, sang in a clear soprano voice two solos, which merited rounds of applause. She was accompanied by Miss Eva Gibson.

Miss Roe Donlevy recited "Sahnny" in a manner that proved her an advanced student of elocution. Several curtain calls rewarded her effort.

The big hit of the bill was a roaring burlesque entitled "Pita" presented by Mr. and Mrs. Cacell, Mr. O'Malley and Miss Roe Donlevy. This act closed the bill and sent the audience home in "fits" of laughter. The Beaver Island band furnished the music during the entertainment and for the show the young folks held a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harrannn, Miss Hedwig Ravenz and sister Dorothy and Mrs. Fred Hartz, Mrs. Ed Hath and Mrs. Wm. H. Kom with daughter and son left for their homes in Davenport, Iowa, Tuesday after a pleasant vacation on Beaver Island.

—S. D. Williams, editor of the Modern Maccabee, the newspaper representative of more than 100,000 members of that organization in Michigan, who is something of a student and philosopher in various directions, declares that it looks like a good time for the farmer boy to stay on the farm. He approaches the conclusion which leads him to believe that for some years to come farming will be almost the most profitable industry that man can engage in, through a review of the increased production of gold and silver and through the further fact that this country's cheaper labor is drifting toward the cities. "Unless you have a good and sure thing in the city you had better hoe a wise bit with the old farm, for the pendulum is swinging that way," is his concluding admonition.

A CHEROKEE LEGEND.

Indian Story of the Lazy Rabbit and the Tar Wolf.

Among the Cherokee Indians the following story of the rabbit and the tar wolf used often to be told:

"Once there was such a long season of dry weather that no more water remained in the creeks and springs, and the animals held a council to see what could be done. They decided to dig a well, and all agreed to help except the rabbit, who was a lazy fellow and said: "I don't need to die for water. The dew on the grass is enough for me."

"The other animals were not pleased with the rabbit's remarks, but they set to work to dig the well. They noticed that the rabbit kept sleek and lively, although it was still dry weather and the water was becoming low in the well.

"The other animals suspected that the tricky rabbit was stealing the water at night, and they made a wolf of pine gum and tar and placed it by the well to frighten the thief. That night the rabbit came, as he had been coming every night, to drink enough to last him all the next day. When he saw the queer black thing by the well, he inquired:

"'Who's there?'

"But there was no reply. The rabbit came nearer, but the wolf didn't move, so he grew braver and said:

"'Get out of my way or I'll kick you.'

"Still there was no reply. Then the rabbit kicked with his hind foot so hard that it was caught in the gum, and he could not move, and there he stuck until the unlucky game for water in the morning. When they discovered the thief they had great sport over him for awhile and then prepared to kill him. But as soon as the rabbit was released from the tar wolf he managed to escape."

Stopping a Train.

An old locomotive engineer and once noted within what distance it was possible to stop a train that was running at a speed of sixty miles an hour. He answered that with air brakes, if the wind and dry rails it could be stopped within a quarter of a mile, but the distance would be greater if the rails were wet and a strong wind was blowing from the rear. With dry rails and a strong wind blowing from the front, the stop could be made within less than a quarter of a mile. Much would depend, he said, on the way the air brakes were applied. If they are put on too suddenly they will "lock the wheels up" and the latter will slide along the track the same manner as if they were running. The brakes must be applied gradually and tenderly, so to speak, to get the best results from their action.

An Interrupted Story.

Said Mrs. Moore: "It happens two a fairy tale I'll tell.

Chapper the Brownie rose last night and climbed over hill and dell.

I wake the fairies in the woods and all the sleeping elves

And lead them scamper to the fields and there enjoy themselves.

"Away they speed on tripping feet, with hearts as light as air,

A banquet spread by fairy hands was waiting for them there.

Oh, dear, they had a lovely time, the fairies, elves and fays;

They danced and sang right merrily beneath my silver rays.

"And now its time for chapper two. There is no much to say.

The moon was nearly thirteen, you know, while not one sees by day.

So I must go to bed at once! Good night, my dears, good night!"

Spray For Apple Trees.

One of the most successful apple growers of Ohio uses arsenate of lead in the bordeaux mixture to kill the different fungi, as well as to keep in check the codling moth, spraying at least four times after the blossom falls. His formula for bordeaux is: 4 pounds sulphate of copper, five pounds of lime and fifty gallons of water.

Common Council

At the council meeting Tuesday evening cement sidewalks were ordered on Almeda street, abutting on lots 5 and 6, block 3, Dixon's addition; on lot 1 of block 19, Newnan's addition, abutting on Bridge street; on west 44 feet of lots 6 and 7, block 3, Dixon's addition.

Sidewalk petitions were granted B. W. Miller estate, John Cook, H. C. Hunt, Robert O'Neill, Joseph Cooper, A. M. Burdick and school district No. 4.

Ordered that new leases be executed with life savers for building sites for a term of 15 years.

The matter of licensing theatres was referred to the council for further action.

Circuit Court.

Owing to the fact that Judge Mayne is hourly expecting a telegram summoning him to the bedside of his sick father, in Northern New York, he thought it inadvisable to tie himself to the trial of a case, and therefore called in Judge Davis, of Ionia, to preside through this term.

Monday was occupied in cleaning up on naturalization, and the opening of the case of this people vs. Woodruff obtaining money under false pretenses. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty Tuesday evening.

Local News.

—M. J. McCann, of St. James, was in town Saturday.

—Circuit court adjourned Friday until Monday, August 30th.

—The Pappin residende on Dixon avenue is being rebuilt and enlarged.

—Mrs. Lottie Schubert, of Chicago, is visiting at the home of Robert McDowald, Dixon avenue.

—Chas. Nettleton and Junius S. Dixon, of Chicago, have been spending a few days in the city visiting relatives.

—Harry C. New, of Indianapolis, formerly chairman of the Rep. National Committee, was in town over Sunday, a guest at the New cottage.

—Dangerous fires have been raging in the woods east and south of East Jordan. On Monday one of the mills was shut down and the men sent out to fight the flames.

—D. J. Bigelow, an old time Marion farmer, who left here twenty years ago, and who is now living in Toledo, is here visiting friends, accompanied by his wife and Dr. W. J. Downard and wife, also of Toledo.

—The U. S. Sandsucker Gen. Gillespie arrived here last Thursday, and at once began the work of deepening both channels. She is ordered to take out about 30,000 yards, which will leave the channels in good condition. This week will probably be all taken up doing the work.

—It will be remembered that when the steamer Olive Mitchell "went below" last spring, Capt. Hulme announced that he was headed for salt water. A telegram sent Sunday by Capt. Hulme from Hichibucto, New Brunswick, announced the safe arrival of the schooner at that port.

—W. L. Sligo, of "Auntie Mac City," was in the city Tuesday. Of course there is no such place as Antrim City now, but there was such a place 45 years ago, when Mr. Sligo located there—four miles south of Norwood. There was then a dock, a store and a grist mill. Now there is nothing but Sligo, and he is still fishing, as he was 42 years ago, when the writer first met him.

—The Argo Milling Co., of this city, in view of the steadily increasing cost of wood fuel, is changing its motive power. Last week the engine was taken out and the towering smokestack removed, and there is being installed a gas producer plant. That is to say a gas engine will drive the machinery and the gas will be taken from coal retorts set up on the premises.

—"Bob" Shrier and his wonderful children appeared three nights last week before Charlevoix audiences. These little ones exhibit remarkable athletic procosity—indeed, young as they are, they deserve the title of acrobats. We have never seen juvenile agility that could surpass that of "Bob's" kids. We feel an especial interest in them inasmuch as they are the grandchildren of one of the closest personal friends the writer ever possessed—the late Capt. Walter Clifford, U. S. army. The mother of the children accompanies them.

—Under Sheriff Weikel was at Beaver Island two days this week on official business.

—Thos. Shawley left today on a visit to his old home in Canada, after 18 years absence.

—With Capt. and Mrs. A. A. Kent, Mrs. G. L. Harper, of Michigan City, and Miss Ida Lukenbach, of Kalamazoo, was in town Sunday.

—James Gaskin was taken to the Saville Sanatarium at Petoskey last Monday to take treatment for rheumatism.

—Cake sale by ladies of Episcopal church on Thursday p. m. from two to six in Capt. Wilkus's store on Bridge street.

—An incomparable event of soul-stirring musical mirth at the M. E. church next Monday night. Don't fail to hear the Southland Nightingales.

—Rev. Bastian Smits, pastor of the First Congregational church of Jackson, will preach in the Congregational church of this city next Sunday morning.

—Deputy Warden Allen Smith, of Traverse City, should start an aquarium, and then, if he can stop talking long enough, take a few lessons in pisciculture from Frank N. Clark.

—Mrs. J. S. Harris, of Ann Arbor, with her son, Mr. John Wistar Harris, of New York, brother and sister of Mrs. J. B. Thielen, are guests at the Thielen residence.

—One of the best attractions that Manager Bridge has booked at the Charlevoix Theatre this year is "Vanda Enos and Her Girls." This fine organization will appear Saturday evening of this week.

—The bay ferer people are coming. Washington gentlemen arrived Monday after having suffered several weeks at some of the ocean and far-north resorts. The first relief he has enjoyed since starting out was at Charlevoix Tuesday.

—The Southland Nightingales, a famous organization of Negro Jubilee singers, twelve in number, will appear at the M. E. church Monday evening, Aug. 30th. This company is spoken of everywhere as a great attraction.

—In circuit court last week, John Woodruff, coming up from Boyne City on trial for obtaining goods under false pretense, received a sentence of from one to ten years in Jackson prison. Luther Delos Follett, of Walloon Lake, charged with incest, has gone to Jackson on a sentence of from seven and a half to fifteen years.

—It is a wonder that there are not more cases of drowning in these waters, when the carelessness of pleasure seekers is duly considered. Recently the steamer Hum passed a small row boat in which there were nine people, including several ladies. The raft of the boat was but a few inches above the surface of the water. Almost every day the papers contain accounts of drownings at resort places.

—Notice to the people living within the vicinity of Ironton. On the Congregational church of Ironton Saturday evening next, and you will hear an entertainment about which you will talk for months to come. Twelve colored singers, "The Southland Nightingales," will give one of their charming concerts. They are trained musicians and render the colored melodies and plantation songs in a most delightful manner. Admission, 25 cents for adults and fifteen cents for children. Entertainment begins at 8 o'clock sharp.

—Miss Ellen Insley, of Delhi, Ia., is in the city visiting Mrs. Geo. W. Priest.

—Charlevoix county has 511 rural telephones, not including suburbs of cities and village. This indicates progress.

—Mrs. George H. Martin, of Columbus, O., who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. J. B. Thielen, returned home Saturday.

—"Vanda Enos and Her Girls" at the Charlevoix Theatre Saturday evening of this week. An evening of unalloyed enjoyment.

—W. S. Stoddard, the commedian, who was formerly attached to Charlevoix vaudeltes, writes us from Kasson, Minn., where he is traveling with a circus.

—At a very short council meeting Tuesday night the petitions for cement walks presented by A. M. Wilkinson, G. W. Crouter, Joseph Kimber and A. G. Madill were granted.

—The 22 packages of Beaver Island fish, concerning which there has been so much trouble lately, were received by the consignee to whipper last week as spoiled. Mr. McCann will now proceed to add the original value of the goods to his bill.

—The U. S. dredge Gen. Gillespie, on Tuesday, dredged out the U. S. Beaver Island cable, and communication with the Island will be interrupted for some time. The chief of the service at Washington has been advised by wire, and the local official in charge is awaiting instructions.

—The Christian Scientists of Charlevoix announce a lecture at Charlevoix Theatre Friday evening, Sept. 3, by Frank H. Leonard, C. S. B., a distinguished Christian Science scholar and lecturer, and a member of the Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ Scientist. There is a steadily increasing interest throughout the world in the rapidly developing truths of Christian Science. It is not so very long ago that Christian Science was by some people spoken of as a "fad." S. mehow the number of its votaries is increasing by the thousands, and the increase seems to come chiefly from the religiously thoughtful.

—Cadillac Express: The statement from Detroit says that the Lawrod Order League is now represented by organizations in Cadillac, Pontiac, Ilsea City and Midland. It is further stated that those who are urging the matter are basing their expectations of bringing about changes in the union situation in these counties because of "loss of business, empty stores, comparatively deserted streets and an amazing increase in taxes" in the counties where local option now exists. Mr. J. Earle Brown and his Law and Order League will have a very hard job on their hands not only in their effort to enforce the law in Wexford county, but they will have to secure the return of saloons in a single one of the counties from which they are not absent.

—Mr. George E. Howe, manager of the West Michigan Development Bureau's display at Chicago, was a passenger on the Missouri Sunday. Mr. Howe was on his way to Petoskey to meet with the board of trade of that city, Monday. Mr. Howe called on D. S. Payton, a director of the West Michigan Development Bureau, to meet him at the dock, and reported all counties in the bureau are working harmoniously, and all are very enthusiastic. Mr. Howe said the West Michigan display at Chicago next November, will be second to none, and he predicts a great boom in the near future for West Michigan. The executive committee, will meet at Traverse City, September 3rd, and the directors at Ludington September the 17th.

—In view of the strict enforcement of the navigation laws by the United States government against small watercraft, owners of motor boats of all sizes plying upon Lake Michigan or its connecting and tributary waters who have not during the present year received the required number of copies of the pilot rules to be carried by such craft when being navigated upon waters under federal jurisdiction, as well as other recently issued information pertaining to the equipment and navigation of such motor boats, should so inform Hon. Walter I. Lillie, Collector of Customs for the District of Michigan, Grand Haven, Mich., giving the length, breadth and name of the boat operated and the waters upon which the same is navigating.

WIRELESS WONDER

How the Manitou Operator Picked up an Ocean Message.

Will wonders never cease?

Many of our readers will not believe that a Lake Michigan steamship wireless could pick up a message that was being sent ashore from an Atlantic liner, yet it actually happened on the steamship Manitou.

About three weeks ago Capt. Finucane ship was about ten miles south of Mackinac island, bowling her eighteen miles an hour, south bound. The wireless operator sat at his instrument with the receiver fastened to his ears, when he plainly heard a message being sent from somewhere to somewhere. As the International code was being ticked off the operator began to sit up and take notice.

He copied the message in full.

It was being sent from the Royal Mail Steamship Tre... 800 miles east of Sandy Hook, to the Heinz Hook, (Mass.) station.

The operator could not believe his ears, yet there was the message before him. In his amazement he sent with it to the Captain and other officers of the ship and their incredulity was added to his.

On reaching Chicago he told his story to the general manager, and left the copy of the message with him. The general manager determined to investigate and to that end he referred the matter to the wireless company for verification.

In due time the Chicago officials were informed that the message was on that date sent by the Trent and received at Heinz Hook.

The steamship Trent and Manitou were 1250 miles apart. Such a marvelous feat of electrical transmission probably would not be done again in ten years. It was doubtless due to a peculiarly favorable electrical wave condition that only the most profound of electrical savants can understand.

DROWNED AT SEULWIN!

Young Lady Resorter While Bathing Loses Life Before Eyes of Companions.

Miss Carrie Ingersoll, of Galesburg, Ill., was drowned in Pine Lake at Seulwin Monday afternoon.

With several young lady companions she was bathing near the club landing, when she suddenly waded into a deep hole, and, before help could reach her, life was extinct.

The body was recovered within about thirty minutes and every effort was made to renew the spark of life, but without avail. Dr. Armstrong was summoned, and Capt. Kent took his crew to the spot in the surf-boat. The captain gave the regulation methods of resuscitation a thorough trial.

It was just opposite Sequenota that Mr. Cogger was drowned recently, under identical circumstances.

ALMOST ESCAPED

Woodruff and Follett Sentenced Prisoners. Sawed Hole in Jail Floor.

Woodruff and Follett, recently sentenced by Judge Mayne to serve terms in Jackson prison, nearly escaped from the jail Monday night.

One of the prisoners called Jailer Dilgard and requested the loan of a hammer to drive a nail. Mr. Dilgard at once surmised that something was wrong, and an inspection followed. In one of the unused cells he found a square space sawed through the floor. The hammer would have done the cent. They acknowledged that a saw had been passed to them through a window and the saw was found.

The prisoners were at once locked separately in cells. They left for Jackson yesterday morning, handcuffed, in the custody of Under Sheriff Weikel.

THE COUNTY SCHOOLS

How County Clerk Payton is Augmenting the Work of the Western Michigan Development Bureau.

D. S. Payton, in his capacity of Charlevoix County director on the board of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, is doing good work in compiling statistics of the resources, utilities and industries of Charlevoix County. These statistics will be printed and circulated far and wide, and cannot fail to be educational in their effect. This week Mr. Payton gives official information concerning the schools of the county:

The approximate value of school property is $200,000.

At the last school census there were 5,435 pupils registered. It is expected that the census of 1909 will show a registration in excess of 6,000. The actual enrollment of attendance of 5,000.

There are four high schools in the county, three of which are on the accredited list of the University of Michigan.

The county normal is located at Charlevoix.

Music and drawing are taught in all the high schools and in many of the rural schools.

The City of Charlevoix has a well organized commercial department in connection with its high school.

High ideals in educational methods prevail throughout the county.

Booze on Board the Excursion Boat Sunday Causes Fight.

From the Boyne Citizen: A disgraceful fight occurred in the harbor Sunday afternoon, after the arrival of the Pere Marquette ferry steamer with the excursion from Empire. A saloon keeper named Donvan, from Empire, has his license to sell booze transferred for the day to the boat, a large stock of liquor refreshments was put aboard the car ferry to sell to the two hundred excursionists. Evidently on the way up the intoxicated saloon did a good business for when the car ferry arrived at this port there were several cases of unbridled drunks. The man running the saloon, told his bartenders, two in number, that when they reached the dock they must close up the saloon, as this was dry territory. The bartenders closed up the saloon when the boat got to the dock, but one of the crew, who had part of a jug aboard, while the boat was tied to the dock, said he would have a drink anyway, and jumped over the bar and proceeded to help himself from the bottled goods. The bartenders immediately set upon the man and gave him a bad beating and other friends of the parties took in a hand and soon a free-for-all fight was in progress as it is alleged. Someone cut the lines and the boat drifted towards the lake with a rough house in full progress. It is said the man who attempted to get the booze was cut up badly. The captain of the boat was in a deplorable state of mind, to put it mild. It is alleged. In fact it seemed it was with difficulty that he stood upon the bridge and guided the boat or gave orders. At Charlevoix the boat run upon the beach, due it is said to the inebriated condition of its commander. It is said complaint will be made against the captain of the boat and criminal proceedings will likely result. Several people aboard the boat left at Charlevoix, refusing to return to Empire owing to the condition of the officers.

The City Schools

The public schools will open Monday, Sept. 20. Definite announcements in regard to courses of study and general conditions will be given later.

The tuition for non-resident pupils is $1.00 per month for those attending high school and $1.00 per month for grade pupils. We are always glad to welcome non-resident pupils and can offer final places where they may work for a part of their school expenses.

Supt. L. M. DeVoe will be at the high school building Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons of each week, until the opening of school and will be pleased to confer with anyone in regard to course of study, or anything in connection with school work.

The Redemption of David Corson

By CHARLES FREDERIC GOSS

Copyright, 1909, by The Bowen-Merrill Company — All Rights Reserved

WE announce with a great deal of pleasure a serial that is somewhat exceptional, even in these days of active fiction. It is a story of unusual power, of wonderful pathos and yet dealing with practical, every-day life in a way that stirs the soul and teaches a lasting lesson.

The story begins with a description of the home and life of David Corson, a young Quaker, whose career has been so peaceful and uneventful that when a traveling mountebank and his beautiful assistant, Pepeeta, visit the town, the glare and glamour of tinsel and excitement lead David to turn his back on the old life and plunge into the wide world he had only read about previously. David is entranced by the beauty of the peerless girl. He is led into a mad whirl of pleasure by the mountebank. Finally, he induces Pepeeta to desert her husband and flee with him. A rivivalist brings David back to a sense of his misspent life.

It is a marvelous life story. Everybody should read it.

CHAPTER I

Hidden away in this warm and carefully-sheltered world are sweet, quiet and beautiful nooks to make the fall of man seem impossible, and awaken in the breast of the weary traveler who comes suddenly upon them a sweet and dear delusion that he has stumbled into Paradise.

Such an Eden existed in the extreme south part of Ohio in the spring of 1849. It was a valley surrounded by wooded hills and threaded by a little brook which hastily made its way, as if upon some errand of importance, down to the Big Muskingum River. A good old Dutchman had once dammed the brook into the valley, and entering as if by a surprise and throwing the open portal of a temple, the traveler saw a white farm-house nestling beneath a mighty leafless tree whose wide-reaching arms sheltered it from summer sun and winter storm. The farm was dotted of bleaginous ice to front and a garden of flowers, which had blossomed in the southern side. Stretching away in the background was the forest, now covered out of the wilderness, but already in a blaze of glory.

In this lovely valley at the close of a blustery day in February, in the early May, the sacred silence was broken by a medley of Indian music, the unmusical of instruments, a tin dinner horn. It was blown by a young country boy who seemed to take delight in the shrill, piercing tones it gave forth. In the time-honored speech of the white farm-house people, it summoned the absent sons with her hand as she looked toward a young man who is a dinner-horn. She was no longer young. As she laid the last stitching seam full upon her fair is seemed almost transparent, so pale was the complexion that have perceived that some deep experience of life had entered her life, and for her character an indescribable charm.

There will have to go and call him, Stephen, for I think he has fallen into another reverie. He is a good boy, but he was an adult there was not a trace of mischief in him.

The child threw down his dinner-horn, and entering the house started furlongs up from where he had been watching every movement of the young's face, the shaggy coffin hounded around his head, and the woman watched them with a proud smile.

Unalterable and incomprehensible emotions of a mother's heart in the sight of the boy by the stillness and beauty of the evening hour, the woman knew not yet defined her its feelings jubed. Through every generation of the world, since the mystery of the universe stole into his sensitive spirit. If a breeze blow across the meadow he turned his cheek to its kiss; if the odor of spearmint from the brooklets in the virgin ground filled the breathing it into his nostrils with delight. He was the absorbed a very living creature of the child and stopped to look up and listen for the sketch of her wings and her book, lest she should be also made her way to the celestial grounds; then he gazed beneath her, into the fathomless depths of the blue sky, and his soul was stirred with an inexplicable awe.

Had it was not so much the objects themselves as the spirit pervading them, which stirred the depths of the child's mind. The little parishioner saw God everywhere. We behold the gift of heaven upon a child, but the feelings which that heritage serves only to interpret and express exist and grow within him even if he be dumb. And also girl, or teenager is often of more tumultuous value, and had been so with him. All that he felt, filled him with love. To him the valley was heaven, and through it flowed the brooklet, ever day and noon, morning, noon and evening.

To the child something drearily and wistfully along the object lately seen from the farm-house door began gradually to disclose itself into a group of living beings. Two horses were started to a plow, one standing in the high grass of the window, and the other in a deep furrow, the wood alone in the surface. The plowshare was buried deep in the rich, alluvial soil, and a ribbon of earth rolled from its blade like a petticoat as billow, created with a shower of dahlias white as the foam of a wave.

Between the handles of the plow and tossing on its crossbar, the stalk of the horses, stood a young Quaker, the broad-brimmed hat, set carelessly on the back of his head, displaying a wide, high forehead, his flaxen silky locks thrown back from the broad, calm, columnar neck, and a deep, broad chest, his manhood and muscular arms were folded across his breast, figure and posture revealed the perfect command of body and soul with the beauty of the world, but a great blue eye were fixed upon the setch in the hills where the sun had just disappeared, he gazed without seeing and left without think.

The only approached this mysterious figure with healthy vigor and pluck, but a long space of grass intervened the broomed neck. The head of the plowman moved automatically upward as if on some way a sky and his thoughts conscious action the child, sister, to a consciousness of laughter and fleeting rest it expanded, stalled his face into his mouth. In the opinion of the irreverent young sheptic his Uncle Ezra was in a "trance," and he thought such a state ridiculous.

For several years this Quaker youth, David Corson, had been the subject of remarkable emotional experiences, in explanation of which the rude sons of the village declared that he had been moon-struck, the young girls who shared his beauty thought he was in love, and the sensible fellows and toothers of this religious community believed that in his the sentiment prevailed. Very rarely, indeed, David Corson, had been the subject of ridicule, for his manner was so gentle and kind, and yet so manly, that he was a favorite with all who knew him.

The child approached this mysterious figure with healthy vigor and pluck, but a long space of grass intervened the broomed neck. The head of the plowman moved automatically upward as if on some way a sky and his thoughts conscious action the child, sister, to a consciousness of laughter and fleeting rest it expanded, stalled his face into his mouth. In the opinion of the irreverent young sheptic his Uncle Ezra was in a "trance," and he thought such a state ridiculous.

For several years this Quaker youth, David Corson, had been the subject of remarkable emotional experiences, in explanation of which the rude sons of the village declared that he had been moon-struck, the young girls who shared his beauty thought he was in love, and the sensible fellows and toothers of this religious community believed that in his the sentiment prevailed. Very rarely, indeed, David Corson, had been the subject of ridicule, for his manner was so gentle and kind, and yet so manly, that he was a favorite with all who knew him.

Three Bumper Crops Gathered at Once, Government Report Reveals.

ERA OF PROSPERITY SURE.

High Prices for Grain Will Bring Farmers Huge Sum, Aiding Trade in General.

More grain than ever before grew to maturity in a single year in the United States already has been harvested or is readily approaching maturity, according to the government official crop report for August.

Never, but once, has there been more wheat; never before has there been so much corn or so much oats. And never before have bumper crops of these three staples been in the same year.

Never in history has such a huge tack confronted the railroads as the moving of this stupendous harvest to market, and never have the railroads been so prepared for their work. Along the lines of the principal roads in the great grain producing States have been built miles of empty box cars, ready for the loading, while locomotives and engines, the envy of foreign lands, stand in the period of depression just drawing to a close, stand, with steam up, ready to rush them to Chicago, Minneapolis and other terminal points. Never before in the history of the country have so many railroad men been employed as now. Never before have so many men been employed in the manufacture

Political and Otherwise.

And now somebody is trying to make trouble for Game and Fish Warden Pierce with the charge that the results of his department's work is not commensurate with the cost. Mr. Pierce replies that results do not show on the surface and that only the annual report for the year should be taken as foundation for criticism or commendation. We are of the opinion that Mr. Pierce is a conscientious and efficient warden, and that his two leading deputies, C. N. Smith and Mr. Eddy, are sane, conservative and capable assistants. In this particular section we think Mr. Pierce is unfortunate in having Deputy Allen Smith on his staff. But it is unfair to condemn Warden Pierce and his department until the annual roundup develops just cause for criticism. The work of the warden is not a summer sinecure. Prejudice against that official is what the appointee always has to encounter and often unjust criticism is the outgrowth of it. Give Mr. Pierce a fair show.

We read that Mr. Amos Musselman, of Grand Rapids, has announced himself a candidate for the governorship with Judge Montgomery this makes a pair of candidates from Senator William Alden Smith's town. Pat Kelly has been in the under heath for some time but he left word when he went in that his pennant would be discovered when the lines are formed. The more the merrier. We hope to hear nothing from our friend bill nears fateiy. He may yet be induced to enter the field. But we shall hear a bugle-blast from the direction of Lake Superior at the proper time that will make them all sit up and take notice.

The tariff bill is now a law, and the nerves of Uncle Sam's people, so long at high tension, are relaxed. The framing of a constitution is a child's play compared with the creation of a tariff schedule. The instrument is so interwoven with the business activities of the country that its formulation is only finished in time to avert spasms of national hysteria. Diversified interests begot diversified ideas of national economics, and both individual and corporate selfishness is a factor that drives Congress crazy and befogs the understanding of a majority of those whom Mr. Lincoln classed as "the common people." But the pulse and temperature of the people have returned to the normal. The incubator, bearing the earmarks of executive contentment, yet, withal, revealing the imprint of executive firmness, will, for an indefinite period be the guardian of American industry and commerce. Everybody could not be suited, but the schedules will be generally satisfactory.

The Present Fact.

The resort season of 1909 is within sight of its setting. While many will remain through September and a goodly number stay well into October, the summer population will begin to decrease September first.

The evidence from all sources unmistakably proves that this has been the greatest resort season in the history of Charlevoix. And another interesting fact is proven. The increase has come to us largely at the expense of other Northern Michigan resorts, from whence come reports of decreased business. Evidence of this is not wanting among Charlevoix resorters themselves who come here this season for the first time.

We will, for the time, cease using "local option" in our summer resort arguments. That is faded and worn to a frazzle. It is only a joke now, when we refer to the predictions of the "wets" last spring. The tree season was the resort business a year ago this year than in previous years is that the fact is becoming known throughout the length and breadth of the land that Charlevoix possesses more and greater attractions for summer visitors than any other superlake resort.

Charlevoix is the only resort town in the straits region at which applicants for accommodations have been turned away by the summer hotels. As we write every one of them is full to overflowing.

The season of 1910 will witness a greater increase than ever and Charlevoix will be better prepared for it.

While drilling a well, William Steele, four miles south of Traverse City, struck what is believed to be a vein of fine coal. He drilled three holes and always at 24 feet down he found the vein. He is making an investigation as to the size of the vein while waiting for expert opinion on the samples.

Boyne Journal: Yesterday the prompt action of Sheriff McWalon prevented the loss of the life of a child at Chula Vista. Little Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Robinson, was playing on the dock and fell off into the water. The Sheriff, who was at his cottage, heard the alarm and rushed down to the dock and diving into the water without hesitation, brought the little one to shore where willing hands soon restored her to consciousness.

In a marriage ceremony at the courthouse in Traverse City one day last week, with Justice Partridge officiating, a romance of the west was revealed, the principals being Miss Henrietta Miller, a beautiful Ottawa maiden of Kewadin, and Virgil Page, a school teacher of Horton, Kas. The bride is a graduate of the Carlisle school and has spring visited in the west meeting Page. An ardent correspondence followed, with the result that Page came here and claimed his bride.

Petoskey Record: Ford Robbins, of Boyne Falls, was in the city yesterday coming up from Walloon Lake, where he states he has just made a very important discovery in the way of a valuable vein of coal. The deposit is located on the north side of the lake on what is known as the old Davis property, recently purchased by Mr. Robbins. The coal is about 20 feet from the surface and gives every indication of a paying field. Mr. Robbins has secured the services of an expert mining engineer who will visit the place the first of September but until then nothing definite can be stated relative to the quality and very little as to the quantity of coal. Mr. Robbins will be in the city again in a few days and will make further prospects at his new claim.

The Antrim County Grange and Farmers' picnic was held on Aug. 18 and 19 in a grove on the banks of Michigan's most beautiful sheet of water, Torch Lake. There were present 2,000 farmers with their wives and children. It was the largest farmers' rally ever held in this section of the state. The picnic proper was held the 18th. Games, recitations, music, addresses, rides on the lake conferring the fifth degree by the County Grange, filled the two days full of pleasure, instruction and inspiration. The feature of the great meeting was the address of H. E. McCulloch, secretary to Congressman James C. McLaughlin of the tenth Michigan congressional district. The subject of his address was "The Relation of the Grange to Good Government."

Cadillac Express: Edward Mc. Mullen returned last evening from Hoyville, near Charlevoix, where he spent a couple of weeks in the toy model city. He enthusiastic over the accomplishments of 250 boys in hyville. He said: "The one thing I much said Edward today, was that we had to do the work of running the city just as the men do, and things went along as nicely as Hoyville is the successful outcome of a similar successful venture at Winona Lake, Ind. This year the city had business three weeks, next year it will try it for three months. Nearly all the buildings are permanent structures, including a city hall, printing office, hotel, restaurant, library and others. All of the 250 boys had their individual duties and each boy was on his honor to work in harmony so that the entire civic structure might become strong and effective. The boys made their own laws and enforced them. Edward and five other boys were detectives and were instrumental in seeking out infringements of the law. One young offender was out after dark with a young lady. On returning to his room he was captured and with his clothes on docked in the lake. As a rouse of great pleasure and a means of cultivating independence of action and a knowledge of what is before him in real life Edward thinks Hoyville is the best thing going.

Boyne Journal: State Game and Fish Warden Stanfoul plucked three fellows today for violation of the fishing law and they were made to settle before Judge Hammond this afternoon. For some time the Warden had been laying for these men. They were engaged in helping themselves in an illegal manner to trout from Boyne river above the dam and it is alleged that they have been at it for some time. Stanford has been at work on the case for several days and had such a mass of conclusive evidence that when confronted with it the men immediately plead guilty. They were charged with catching trout by means of gill nets which were set in the river. The Judge fined the men as follows: Jasper Dunlap $25 and costs and Bert Moore and Fred Arnold each $5 and costs. The amounts were paid and white Dunlap thinks he has had his money's worth he also has concluded to quit.

Prosecutor Ernest C. Smith of Kalkaska county warns the people of his bailiwick against selling the so called "unfermented beers," going under the names of "near beer," "hop pop," "great American hop ale" and various other misleading terms. Agents of breweries sell them in local option counties, representing that they do not contain alcohol and can be sold without violating the law. Mr. Smith obtained samples and sent them to Lansing to the state chemist for analysis. The state analyst says they are "a brewed, slightly fermented beverage of the beer type of low alcoholic strength." Mr. Smith says, "the sale of these beverages is therefore a violation of the local option law, and subjects the seller to prosecution." His warning to the "soft drink" dealers is published in the Kalkaska papers, and he further says: "In fact, all the so called near substitutes contain some alcohol, and the guarantee of the agent selling them that they do not contain alcohol will not protect the retailer of them from prosecution."

Manistee Herald: The secretary of the county local option committee, Dr. A. S. Evans of Bellaire, reports to the News that the canvassers of the different townships of the county are meeting with excellent success in regard to the petitions. In order to get the matter of local option before the people at the next spring election, one third of the voters of the county must sign a petition to the board of supervisors asking that the question be submitted. Dr. Evans has heard from only eight of the townships thus far and the percentage of the voters signing run from 70 to 90. The required number of voters necessary is estimated at 1257, according to the last general election and with only eight townships heard from with a total at present of over 1000 names, it looks very much as if success was sure and that the question would be submitted. The far flunks township has shown the largest number of names, which is 285. Kearsley has 250, so far, Central Lake, Elk Rapids and Mancelona are not finished yet, in fact none of the township have completed the work of canvassing but will be completed and in shape for presentation at the October sitting of the board.

Traverse City Eagle: Sanford M. Silver, cook on the Chequamegon, and familiarly known as "Bert," fell overboard this morning as the boat was leaving Northport, and was drowned. According to some of the passengers who witnessed the accident, Silver went to throw a pail of refuse through the gangway, when it is alleged, the shutter gave way, precipitating the man into the water. The alarm was promptly given, the cook stopped and a search made for him, but he was not found. It is said that Silver appeared once after going down, and after ascending 10 or 12 strokes, got into the wake of the steamer and disappeared in the swift current from the wheel. The place where the accident happened is very deep, the exact measurement being 49 feet. The accident occurred about 11 o'clock, as the boat was leaving for Charlevoix, and she was about 40 rods from shore. When Silver came to the surface of the water he was about 15 feet from the steamer, according to the passengers who saw him. A searching crew was immediately organized, Captain Welsh of the Chequamegon getting out the steamer's boats, and about half a dozen fishermen joining the fleet.

THE way to reckon the cost of painting is to put both costs together—the cost of paint, and of putting on.

It costs as much to put on one paint as another; if you use as many gallons of one paint as another, the putting on cost is the same.

But if you use Dover Lead and Oil, Paint you'll use less gallons by half or a third. Hundreds of cases prove that Dover requires less gallons than any other paint for the same service.

DEATH TAKES DR. H. W. THOMAS

One of Chicago's most noted clergymen of days gone by has been claimed by death. The Rev. Hiram W. Thomas died Thursday night at De Funiak Springs, Fla., where he had lived recently because of his feeble health. The body was taken to Chicago for burial. Jenkin Lloyd Jones of All Souls' Church conducted the funeral services.

Dr. Thomas ranked with Prof. David Swing as one of the most noted preachers of the West when both were tried and convicted of heresy nearly a generation ago. Theological opinions have changed since then and many orthodox clergymen now accept and preach the same doctrines which caused the expulsion of Thomas and Swing from their respective denominations.

After the expulsion of Dr. Thomas from the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1879, he established the undenominational People's Church, which held regular services in McVicker's Theater. In 1891 he realized a pastor And was succeeded by the Rev. Frank Crane.

Hiram Washington Thomas was born in Hampshire County, Va., on April 29, 1832. He was converted at the age of 18 and at once began to prepare to become a clergyman. He took a private course of study and afterwards attended Cooperstown Academy and Rock-in College. He came West and joined the Iowa conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1856, having married Miss Emmeline C. Merrick of Pennsylvania the preceding year. For three years he was chaplain of the Iowa penitentiary, which position he left to become pastor of Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church in Chicago in 1869. Later he was pastor successively of First Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, First Church at Aurora and Centenary Church, Chicago. While pastor of this church he was accused and convicted of horse.

His first wife died on Jan. 5, 1876. They had seven children, the only surviving one being Miss Ida Vivian Thomas of Chicago. Early in 1890 the Rev. Mr. Thomas left his home in Northern Iowa, a believer in liberal religion and mining. They were soon reunited, however, and she was ordained soon afterwards as assistant pastor of People's Church.

VENEZUELA TO PAY CLAIM

Asphalt Row Expected to Go to The Hague to Be Settled.

Information has reached New York that the claim of the New York-Venezuela Company, one of the five American claims against the government of Venezuela, the dispute over which led to a rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries sixteen months ago, has been settled out of court.

Minister W. W. Russell called the State Department at Washington that the Venezuelan authorities had signed a protocol whereby their government is to pay the American company $475,000 in regard to the expenditures made in the development of concessions granted in 1901 to the Castro government. It was expected that the case would go before The Hague tribunal next fall, but sentiment has been taken in New York for the last three months in preparation for the trial. The case of the New York-Venezuela Company is the third of five differences between this country and Venezuela to be settled independently.

LOST MILLIONS BY ONE SPREE.

With the death Tuesday of Robert Womack, discoverer of gold in the Cripple Creek district, the career of a man who lost millions by one spree ended.

In 1891 Womack dug a prospect hole in what is now known as the 25 Place lode of the Gold King property. A few days later he struck the Genuina lode. He could not stand prosperity, closing to Colorado Springs he went on a spree and sold his Genuina for $500. Then, crazed with drink and success, Womack jumped on his broncho and rode through the streets, brandishing his pistols, shouting his discovery to the world. The next few days saw one of the greatest rushes to the scene of his discovery that the West has ever known.

When Womack sobered up, two or three days later, he returned to the district, only to find that the lucky mining property had been sold to others. He staked out a few claims, and soon he was compelled to go to work for day wages.

SAYS THAW IS INSANE; BACK TO MATTEAWAN

Justice Mills Rules Against the Slayer, but is Strongest Decision Yet Made.

CALLS HIM A CHRONIC LUNATIC

Harry K. Thaw was Thursday adjudged insane by Justice Mills in a decision handed down in the Supreme Court at White Plains, N. Y., and ordered to be sent back to the Matteawan State Asylum for the Criminal Insane immediately.

The order of Justice Mills was turned over to the Westchester County authorities by the Clerk of the Supreme Court and Thaw himself, in the jail at White Plains, was informed of the decision. Arrangements were made to take him back to Matteawan Friday.

Decision Thaw is Insane.

Justice Mills' decision was the strongest against Thaw that has been handed down by any Judge since the two trials of the prisoner. His decision can be summed up as follows:

That the insanity that Harry K. Thaw was afflicted with in June, 1906, the date of the shooting of Stanford White, was a chronic, delusive insanity, generally known as paranoia.

That Harry K. Thaw has not recovered.

That in paranoia recovery is very doubtful.

That the release of Harry K. Thaw now would be a danger to the public peace and safety.

Justice Mills in his decision finds that Thaw is now insane and unable to properly care for himself. The decision contained 7,000 words and thoroughly covered the insanity hearing that had been held before Justice Mills.

Thaw awaited the decision in his cell in the jail at White Plains. He was plainly nervous and paced up and down almost unnerved. Arrangements had been made to let him know the decision as soon as it was made public by the clerk of the court. When he learned his fate, Thaw stopped in his nervous walk up and down the cell and stood still. He did not seem to comprehend what had been told him. Then, when he realized that he must go back to Matteawan, he staggered backward and fell upon the cell cot. He covered his face with his hands and for a time could not be aroused.

Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, the prisoner's mother, and his sister, the former Countess of Yarmouth, were almost overcome at the news. After Thaw tried to comfort her mother, but the aged woman, who has battled so long and so untiringly for her son, showed plainly that the decision was a terrible blow to her and she is near a collapse.

FIND COAL FRAUDS IN ALASKA

Ballinger to Begin Prosecution in Seattle Shortly.

Investigations that have been under way for some time—which have been held before Secretary of the Interior Ballinger and Commissioner Fred Dennett of the General Land Office—will unquestionably prove one of the greatest scandals in connection with land fraud investigations ever brought to light by the General Land Office.

It is known that in the valuable coal fields of Alaska many thousand acres of land have been fraudulently filed upon and attempts made to force the department, through financial, political and even social pressure, to patent these lands. Secretary Ballinger and Commissioner Dennett have evidence showing that entries aggregating nearly 500 coal entries in Alaska, Commissioner Dennett, while in Seattle recently, is to make arrangements to have these entries would be canceled. To this end Assistant Attorney General and the General Land Office has assigned its best examiners and lawyers to Seattle to aid in the coming trial.

Several railroad corporations owned in New York, Boston and Philadelphia are making strenuous efforts to delay these land hearings, hoping that the next Congress will pass legislation to permit of another reconsideration of the entries or else pass a curative act legalizing the entries about to be attached.

House Passes Bill Prohibiting Sale or Shipping of Liquor.

In almost a frenzy the House members of the Alabama Legislature on Friday made a violent assault on the sale of intoxicants of all kinds, passing the Fuller bill, beyond question the most drastic ever offered in the South. By its provisions no liquors may be sold; no advertisement of liquors may appear in any paper or upon any billboard, and no train may leave a car that contains liquor upon any track. No place of selling any sort of goods may be called a saloon. Officers may raid any place under suspicion and destroy goods found. The presence of an internal revenue license, whether liquor is found or not, is prima facie evidence of guilt and the proprietor may be arrested.

WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.

Forming Their Lines For Attack.

We have received a marked copy of the Detroit Journal of August 19th. The marked article states that "an organization called the Law and Order League is being formed in many of the dry counties of Michigan." The additional statement is made that "it is drawing into its membership the business and manufacturing interests who see in it a powerful weapon for commercial betterment at home."

The league men state its purposes primarily as the rigid enforcement of the new Warner-Crampton liquor laws, the elimination of the objectional features of the saloon trade and the placing of the option issue squarely before the public. That there is a purpose going enough further than these to include the resubmission of the option question in the "dry" counties and the reopening of the campaigns therein.

The devil turned preacher!

The bold and flagrant lawlessness of the saloons, and the flaunting in the face of society their defiance of public sentiment, is what gave birth to the wide-spread movement that "cried havoc and let loose the dogs of war." Behind the saloons, financially, were the powerful brewery interests, and ergo, behind the "Law and Order League" just organized are the same brewery corporations, seeking the restoration of their aforetime enormous dividends, with the specious pleadings for "commercial betterment."

The wolf was driven to cover last April; the wolf now emerges from hiding, but he comes clothed in a garb of wool. In the Journal article we read that "prohibition does not prohibit," and that in the dry counties the people are overburdened with taxation as a result of local option; that by reason of these conditions public sentiment is rapidly changing, etc.

There is but one correct business method of striking a balance in the debit and credit book; of a business proposition—and this is a business as well as a moral question, but the two phases are co-ordinate. We must charge the cost and credit the benefit. We cannot concede that ultimate results have yet been reached, and therefore the ultimate balance cannot yet be brought down.

But it does not require a very critical analysis to prove profit even now, so far as Charlevoix county is concerned. We will, for argument's sake, concede that "prohibition does not prohibit," especially when wet territory is closely adjoins. This latter obstacle will soon be removed. We know that the open saloon has been abolished and in this we find the meat of the cocoanut. We know from personal knowledge and investigation that in the city of Charlevoix this elimination is worth many times more than the cost. We know that the fangs of the reptile have been removed. We know that the social "treating" habit, that filled the saloon coffers is a thing of the past, and we know that a good majority of those who formerly participated in these festive evening gatherings are glad of it.

The flag is nailed to the mast in Charlevoix county and it will remain there. We do not believe that the people will consent to a return to the conditions that existed previous to May first. "Please let us play; we will be good," is the way the "Law and Order League" appeals to the people.

"Let us resume our occupation of wrecking homes, breaking hearts and blighting hopes, and we will do it strictly according to law," is the true meaning of what Mr. J. Earle Brown, of St. Johns, organizer of the "Law and Order League," says from under disguise. "Local option retards commercial prosperity," says Mr. Brown, attorney for the brewers.

In Charlevoix county, and we believe in every other dry county in Michigan, Mr. Brown, of St. Johns, will find the true "Law and Order League" in the trenches, well prepared to meet the enemy whenever they see fit to attack.

"Commercial betterment," from the brewers' standpoint is not the sort of "betterment" that is desired in Charlevoix county. We expect except that kind of "prosperity" for many years, and we want no more of it.

The Home.

Home and home life must never become commonplace. The little surprises, the remembrance of the birthday, the unexpected treat, the pleasure earned for one by the exertion of another—all these bulging under our feet of spiritual exercises. Nor is there any sense of our life which so demands such exercise as this familiar scene of home, which has to be reset every day.—Edward Everett Hale.

Terms In Use by Old-Time Carvers.

At the banquets of the eighteenth century the man who carved needed to know words as well as the use of knives. Venison he "broached," the pheasant he "allay ed," the rabbit and woodcock he "unlaced" and the crab he "tamed." Dismembering a swan was "lifting" him and the crane under his knife was being "displayed." The peacock was "disfigured."

Her Remarkable Escape.

A young woman was recently caught in a cave in in a railway tunnel near St. Gall, Switzerland, and after remaining without food for ten days was finally rescued. She suffered agonies of cold and hunger during this period, but managed to sustain life by sucking moisture from her clothing, on which water occasionally trickled. She continued calling for help until she finally was heard and rescued.

Try the Laughter Cure.

If laughter is good for the body well being it is equally good for mental health. We are beginning to realize this. Anxiety, fear, worry and kindly emotion to the mind. Fight against them and against every inferior thing tends toward mental degeneration as you would fight against a temptation to dishonesty.

Local News.

—Hon. A. J. Stroud, of Horton's Bay, was in the city Monday.

—Mrs. W. S. Ely, of Syracuse, N. Y., is visiting her brother, Capt. P. D. Campbell.

—The steamer Cummings broke her shaft Friday, but was repaired and on her run again Sunday.

—Bert VanAlsburg is entertaining his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Engle VanAlsburg, of Berlin, Mich.

—W. A. Dennis went to Cheboygan Tuesday with Capt. Sam Hone's outfit and will do several days submarine work on a wreck.

—Miss Gale Cruickshank, who has been in Europe this summer with a party of young ladies, reached New York Saturday, and is expected here as we write.

—The somewhat protracted drought which was threatening the fate of crops in this section, was broken Friday night by a bounteous rain, which put everything out of danger.

—A potatoe inspector was here last week investigating the question of leasing the new VanDett building. While nothing can be said definitely, there are reasons for believing that the outcome will be as the people of Charlevoix desire.

—Bath for another rumor that the Baltimore & Ohio railroad is to take over the Pere Marquette is found in fact that the C. H. & D. has been taken from the hands of a receiver, and William Cotter of D. M. has been selected as president of that system, and will divide his time between the two.

—We again call attention to the lecture by Frank M. Leonard, C. H. S. to be delivered at the Charlevoix Theatre Friday evening, Sept. 3. Admission will be free. The topic of the lecture will be "Christian Science." Mr. Leonard is a distinguished and scholarly member of that society. We may expect an instructive talk.

—The U. S. Beaver Island cutter, which was broken last week by the dredge, was raised and spliced by J. H. Martindale, assisted by the life saving crew last Saturday, and communication with the Island is now fully restored. The landward section was found to be buried fully five feet in the sand, and it required the services of the tug Taylor all day Saturday to release it.

—One of the prettiest spots in the entire resort domain is the Lake Michigan end of Dixon Avenue, with its well paved and curbed roadway, its walled terraces, splendid lawns and beautiful cottages, the splendid grounds of the Beach Hotel, and fronting them the auntie oral flower-bed in the street center. Whether she is in a turmoil or as placid as a mill-pond, the view from the bluff is grand beyond description.

—The fall apple harvest will be fairly under way next week. Apple buyers are numerous, and a good many orchard contracts have been made at prices ranging from $1.00 to $1.20 per barrel. The crop in this section is large and the quality will average good. The winter apple prospects are good, but the farmers are backward about contracting this early. Apples of October and November gathering promise to bring in the this neighborhood of $1.50.

—H. Richards, of Bellaire, was in town Monday.

—The U. S. inspectors were here yesterday and got some of the boats through their paces on fire and boat drills.

—Our old friend Geo. O. Scott, who for the past few years has been living in Tennessee, is due here on a visit as we write these lines.

—Lee Hoskland has the contract for building the curb and gutter on Petoskey and Michigan avenues, and has begun the work.

—Misses Lillie and Pearl Brown, accompanied by their sister, Mrs. W. H. Caler, arrived from Chicago Monday, joining their father, U. S. Brown, at the family home on Mason street.

—The Misses Felix gave a very pleasant reception and ball at Bank hall Friday evening, in honor of their guest, Miss Cox, of Hamilton, Ind., at which there were seventy five couples present. All agree that it was a most enjoyable social event.

—Judge Brown, of Hay City fame, arrived Saturday from Southern Michigan, where he delivered several special lectures. He will remain here all this month, and enter upon his Ipsenia lecture engagements October 1st, which will occupy fully seven months.

—The gray stone trimmings and colonade columns for the Carnegie Library are on the ground, also the slate for the roof. Brick-laying will be commenced next week.

—Geo. H. VanDett will this fall tear out the front of the present post-office building from the ground to the roof and replace it with an entire new front of elaborate design, to correspond with that of the new building across the alley.

—William Kanagy, a pioneer of Banks township and for several years a resident of Charlevoix, is here visiting his two sons, Drs. Elder and Elton Kanagy, and his brother, Dr. L. M. Kanagy, of Atwood. Mr. Kanagy left Charlevoix about fifteen years ago for Ohio, where he now resides.

—It is a pity that a larger audience was not present to enjoy the splendid concert given last Saturday evening at the Charlevoix Theatre by "Vanos Enos and Her Girls." It was one of the most refined and artistic musical events ever produced on that stage. It was a musical feast that left the parlaker still hungry at the closing number.

—A marine dispatch states that the schooner Jura, owned by Ole Hansen, of Milwaukee, was in a collision Wednesday with the steamer W. G. Pollock, owned by the Valley Steamship Co., of Cleveland, the boats coming together near the Skillagallee lighthouse, Lake Michigan. The schooner lost a large portion of her stern and was towed into Manitowoc City harbor by the Pollock. The schooner was loaded with eslpings bound from Cross Village to Chicago.

—There is a family reunion at the home of Mrs. John Nicholls this week. Among the guests are Mrs. Crites, of Wisconsin, a sister of Mrs. Nicholls; Mrs. Chamberlain, another sister, and her brother Geo. Esterly (and wife) of Washington, D. C. These nieces make up the total. Mrs. Crites will be remembered by old timers as Mrs. Frank L. Abner, who lived here in 1869. Mr. Abner was manager of the lumber plant that is now operated by the Charlevoix Lumber Company.

—Capt. Irving L. Evans, former master of the U. S. dredging steamer Gen. Gillespie, is here visiting his brother, T. A. Evans, first assistant engineer on the Gillespie. Capt. Evans resigned the command of the Gillespie three years ago to enter the law department of the Michigan University, from which he will graduate next June. He intends to make a specialty of practice in the admiralty courts. Capt. Evans holds master's papers that cover all oceans and seas and the great lakes, and is a first-class pilot for the harbors of New York, Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia. He was navigator of the battleship Minnesota on her trial trip, in the employ of the builders.

—The U. S. dredging steamer Gen. Gillespie completes her work here today, leaving a good nineteen foot channel from Lake Michigan to Pine Lake. The recent survey and the more recent discovery that the Beaver island cutter was covered to a depth of five feet, establishes the fact that there is a continuous undertow from the outer bay across the mouth of the channel. The recent dredging of the ground south of the pier is explained by the above fact.

—Linus Parmelee and young son, of Flint, are here on a visit of a few days.

—The gray stone trimmings and colonade columns for the Carnegie Library are on the ground, also the slate for the roof. Brick-laying will be commenced next week.

—Mrs. Charles S. Bromwell, of Milwaukee, United States engineer, has returned from an inspection trip of the lighthouses in his district. Good progress is being made on the White Shoal lighthouse, now in process of construction, he says. This lighthouse will be the largest on Lake Michigan, and probably the largest on the great lakes. It is being built on a reef a short distance west of the entrance to the Straits of Mackinac. This lighthouse is being erected to displace a lightship, such as has been urged for Milwaukee harbor. It was found that there was a time each spring and fall when there was no warning lights at all at that point, the ship having to leave early for fear of being caught in the ice, and not being able to return early in the spring for the same reason.

A Record Storm.

The record for weather of the year cut loose on us Tuesday afternoon. It was a forty-mile breeze and it stirred Lake Michigan to its utermost depths. The steamer Beaver came in from the Island while the gale was at its height and the swells were throwing clouds of spray over the piers. Many reporters were down the brave little boat from the Straits as she mounted the waves and entered the harbor as if it were an every day affair.

The steamship Manitou came in soon after, bound north, with a large number of Mackinac and Harbor Springs passengers, many of whom left the boat here to continue their journey by rail.

Two accidents occurred on the Manitou during her passage to this port. A big trunk got loose and ran amuck on the main deck, knocking down an employe named Sowerly, badly injuring his back, legs and face. He was taken ashore here unconscious. A lady passenger, name unknown, had her wrist broken in the shake up.

It was a nasty blister of wind, and a boisterous and ill mannered way of bidding farewell to August. But with the first September sunshine, Tuesday morning, Nature smiled, and we have summer again at the threshold of autumn.

Recent Wedding Bells.

On Tuesday evening, Aug. 17, at the Baptist parsonage, Mr. Joseph Monsington, of Charlevoix, was joined in marriage by Hev. F. Dewey Bible to Miss Lottie M. Mullen, of Detroit. They will make Charlevoix their home.

Also, on Monday evening, Aug. 30, Miss Sadie Murphy, of East Jordan, and Mr. Albert Staley, of Charlevoix, were married at the Baptist parsonage Hev. Bible performing the ceremony.

NEW FISH LAWS

The Regulations Now in Force a Compromise.

Beginning next month, when the new fish and game laws become effective in Michigan, commercial interests will undergo considerable change. The new law changes the size of net mesh and provides for several innovations in equipment not carried by the commercial fishers today.

Because the change in equipment is so sweeping the law gives the fishermen two years in which to use up their old nets. At the expiration of that period every net will have to be in accordance with specifications of the statute.

While the new law puts something of a handicap on the fishing interests and gives the game warden's department of the state better facilities for enforcing the law and detecting the violators, the fishermen are not entering any objection. The new law clears up some difficulties encountered by the fishermen in conflicting sections of the statutes.

The law is a compromise of the demands of the fishermen and the game warden's department. The commercial fishers of the Great Lakes are awakening to the necessity of preserving the fish and are making less objection to the strict enforcement of fair laws. There was little difficulty getting them to agree with the demands of the game warden at the last session of the legislature and the new law was the means of getting these constitutional enemies together for the first time in the history of the state.

The principal change provided by the law calls for an increase in the legal size of the mesh of nets. This is reduced from four and one-fourth to four and one-half inches, in the existing law the sentence relating to the legal size of mesh used, are minimates. In other words, a legal net would support great quantities of undersized fish. The fishermen wanted the new law to provide that all fish taken in legal nets might be marketed, but this the game wardens pointed out, would defeat the whole purpose of the law. So a compromise was agreed upon by which the mesh is made larger. The size of legal fish has been changed from one and three-fourths pounds, dressed, for whitefish and one and one-fourth pounds, dressed, for lake trout, to one and one-half pound in the round for trout and two pounds in the round for whitefish. This change was in accordance with the demands of the commercial interests.

Each fishing vessel is obliged to hold a state license under the new law and each of its nets must be marked by buoys bearing the license number of its owner or the fishing vessel. This, obviously, is to facilitate identification of nets. It simplifies the work of the game warden and makes it an easy matter to identify and prosecute the owner of any net or illegal size or illegally set. That the fishermen really agreed to this feature of the law is in itself evidence that they are determined to lend their efforts to the perpetuation of fish in the lakes.

The new law cuts down the closed season. Under the present statute, fish may not be taken between Oct. 15 and Dec. 15. Under the new law the closed season will be only from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15. But during the spawning season, each fishing vessel will be obliged to carry an extra man whose work it shall be to stalp and fertilize the spawn as the come in.

This will be turned over to the state and will do away with a lot of the expense attached to the work of propagation under the present law. It will give the fishermen more opportunity to market fish at a season of the year when they are comparatively scarce and command good market prices. All spawn not needed by the state will have to be deposited on the natural spawning beds of the fish in the lakes.

Important Real Estate Change.

A real estate transfer of more than usual interest occurred Saturday when M. J. Stockman sold to J. C. Hoge and H. F. Edwards, both of St. Louis, a large portion of his holdings adjoining the grounds of the Charlevoix Improvement Home Association on the west.

The sale includes five acres of the wooded portion on the south end of the tract, and a 60-foot strip running north and south on the east side of the cleared portion.

It is understood that the splendidly wooded portion will be cleaned up and preserved as a park. No doubt the property will be improved and beautified.

SEPTEMBER FIRST

This is When You Better Begin to be Careful.

If the supreme court never seen fit to change the amended liquor laws which become effective September 1 and regulate the sale of intoxicants in local option counties, the thirsty one will have to stay up nights to find a loophole through which their parched tongues may be relieved.

For the legislature has put the lid down tight, double locked it on every side and provided punishment for the person who attempts to pry it up.

After September 1 all the old timers in local option counties who have been patroning the drug store keeper, and whose names have appeared at the county prosecutor's office with much startling regularity that those affiliate believe that many sections of the state are in the throes of a sickness, relieved only by clear whiskey, will have to visit the wet zones to quench their thirst.

The illosh has been put on the old plan of making a sour face at the drug clerk and then telling him that they need aches" and later walking out with a bottle of booze with only a record which gave the name and address of the purchaser and "medicinal purposes" left behind to tell the tale of a thirst that could not be controlled.

And besides this the physician must have a personal knowledge that the "patient" is really sick, must state just how much and what kind of intoxicant will fill the bill, must write the name of the purchaser on the prescription and practically make oath that the booze is a necessity as a means of cure for a condition that requires medical attention.

Of course, there will be other ways—wholly within the law—to secure intoxicants. One provision in the amendment provides that superintendents of hospitals, medical and educational institutions may issue an order for the sale of intoxicants, if such liquors are to be used for scientific purposes. An oath must accompany the order.

Intoxicants may be sold for "sacramental purposes," but the purchasers must in those cases swear before a notary public concerning the use to which the liquor is to be put.

The search and seizure clause in the law is broad and contemplates eradicating evils which have in the past jeopardized the force of the unamended act. A substantial suspicion that intoxicants are being sold in all but will be necessary to secure a warrant from the court for the confiscation of the liquors and a careful search of the suspected premises by an officer.

The law also provides that a person found in a drunken condition may be summoned into court and compelled to tell how, where, when and why the fluid that contributed to intoxication was secured. Prosecutions for drunkenness after a confession has been made are impossible, the law contemplating that the thirsty one shall assist the authorities in getting at the foundation of the violation rather than the prosecution of the victim.

All drug store keepers will be compelled to make a weekly report of the sales of intoxicants, the purchasers and the physician writing the prescription, to the prosecuting attorney. In addition to this a monthly report of the purchases of intoxicants made by the druggist will be required.

The law also contemplates that the lawful handling of C. O. D. shipment of intoxicants is guilty of carrying on illegal business.

Briefly, the lid will be on tight in dry zones after September 1.

Traverse City Eagle: George E. Cowe made a trip out on the peninsula Sunday, and while there looked over the orchards with a view to making an estimate of the crop at the present time. He found that most of the fruit has been contracted for on the ground, and the average price the apples have sold for is about $1.60 per barrel. Some of the growers have been lucky enough to sell their crop already barreled for as high as $3.00 per barrel, but these are in rare cases. According to Mr. Cowe's judgment the entire crop on the peninsula this year will run upwards of 160,000 barrels, which will give us a low estimate to the growers a sum of $250,000 for the crop, while in order to get the fruit packed it will take an additional expenditure of at least $100,000, which being placed at a very low figure, will mean that a sum of at least $250,000 will be left on the peninsula this season for the apple crop alone.

TWO AUTO RACERS HURLED TO DEATH

Driver and Mechanician Crushed When Car at Indianapolis Skids and Upsets.

THIRD MAN DIES OF INJURIES.

12,000 People See Bourque and Ellis Aid Thrown Over Fence to Their Doom.

With three lives sacrificed in the speed carnival, the first day of the automobile races at the new Indianapolis speedway closed with two more annihilating records smashed. On the fifty-fourth lap of the 250-mile race for the President's trophy, the feature event of the day, death in a terrible form came to Oliver Hourigan, driving an automobile driver, and his mechanician, Harry Hudson, when their big racing car suddenly left the track while plunging along at a speed of seventy-five miles an hour, turned a complete somersault and landed both men against the fence which surrounds the course. Both were almost instantly killed. Their bodies were terribly mangled. Twelve thousand persons, gathered in the grandstand and around the track, witnessed the accident. Scores of women fainted at the sight. Others became hysterical and rushed screaming about the grounds.

Just why the racer left the track is a mystery. Whether Hourigan lost control of the machine or made a mechanical blunder will never be known. The wreck shortly after left the track, and with undiminished speed struck a small ditch which broke the steering knuckle, broke wheels and the axles gave way, and the car turned completely over. Hourigan and that comb were sent flying through the air, and landed in the middle of the track and his skull was fractured and both legs were broken. Hudson was thrown out of the frame. His skull was also fractured and his legs broken. The third victim life was forfeited was Gilbert Lithendl, mechanician, who died from an injured hip while on his way to the pen speedway for practice. He jumped from his own car and was run down by one behind him. Driver Cheyrolet had his eyes seriously injured by dust and far.

AUTO KILLS THREE AT RACE.

Three persons were killed and three injured by an automobile accident in the minor speedway in Indianapolis, Saturday. This makes a total of twenty-one killed in the speedway since the opening of the tournament which declared the new speedway recently constructed at a cost of $2,000,000 and supposed to have been accident proof. Two of the persons killed Saturday and one of the injured were spectators. The other person killed was a mechanic in the race. The spectators were one boy and a girl who were playing through the air, when a tire burst and the car left the track, pounced through a fence and into a crowd gathered near the speedway side.

When the National Six, driven by Charles Merz, a local pilot, burst the tire of the right front wheel while cresting through space at a rate of seventy miles an hour, there was a crash and the car smashed against a turtle, whirling like a gigantic rocket into the fence around the course. Over the barrier, jumpiug a bridge and on through space the car traveled like a projectile, leaving a trail of blood behind.

Fifteen minutes after this fatality another car skidded near the same place, hit a portion of the bridge, killed the driver and mechanician were injured. Following this, Referee Evans stopped the race, which was for the Wheeler and Schebler $10,000 trophy, and with the leaders had completed 255 miles. This brought the meet to an abrupt end. The fine prospects for a successful winding were brightest. With such a heavy beginning of blood it is thought by the big speed way, representing an expenditure of more than $400,000, will meet again the scene of motor contests.

MANY OF THE INJURED MAY DIE

Eight persons are known to have been killed and many wounded, at least ten of them fatally, in a strike riot at Schenlevie Pa., Sunday night. Like an eruption of a volcano, 4,000 Pressed Steel car workers let all their barred, pent-up bitterness and fear of blood come to the surface, and with missiles thrown to the winds, made a battlefield out of the Scheneville district. Four dead men were killed—one State trooper, one deputy sheriff and six strikers and strike breakers. Scores were injured by bullets. The battle resulted from an attempt of the strikers to storm the barricade around the Pressed Steel Car Company's plant, where hundreds of strike breakers have been quartered for the last six weeks, during the strike and which has been marked by much bloodshed.

Following the battle deputy sheriffs and troopers broke in the doors of many houses suspected of aiding the retreat of the strikers and wholesale arrests were made. Scores of persons were arrested and placed in local cells in the mill yards. During the early morning hours the prisoners were released, some of them were armed, others effectively used clubs and knives in the battle. They, all foreigners, Russns with tzars, were mainly responsible for the battle, but refused to submit to the constabulary.

The battle was the climax of a series of riots that have been occurring almost daily since the beginning of the walkout more than five weeks ago, at the Pressed Steel Car Company's plant. The conflict between the strikers in the wrest in the history or Allegheny County since the bloody Homestead strike, in which over forty were killed, and one of the most sanguinary in the history of the State.

When Sheriff Gumbert heard of the battle while he was at the county jail he called for fifty men to serve as deputies at the strike zone. Outside the jail he met a crowd of men who had come to serve as deputies at the strike zone. Outnumbered by the mob, he was unable to the scene of the rioting. He took with him ten riot guns and two boxes of ammunition. By the time the sheriff arrived the constabulary had dispersed the crowd. The riot guns were pitted into position ready for use in case the battle should be renewed.

TRAINS HELD BY WATERS.

Great Delay and Inconvenience Due to Heavy Rains.

Trains blocked in lonely mountain passes, tracks washed away or in some instances washed clean from the foundrds of feet below, people driven from their homes to seek safety with little belonging in hisher places—these were the scenes presented during the overflowed Arkansas River in Colorado.

The famous Royal Gorge, walled in by rock 1,000 feet high, was washed by a torrent for seven fortnight hours, and the railroad tracks have been destroyed. Trains on the Colorado Midland, the Denver and Rio Grande and other railroads, most of them carrying tourists, have been stalled in various over circumstances. One road had to detour its trains 300 miles to reach Colo. in the southern part of the state, a distance out of the regular travel of more than 100 miles. Not only the Arkansas River, but almost all of its tributaries are overflowed.

Roberts and Marion Roberts, brothers, and a Mexican named Gomez. In the 100 peso notes, was contained in a heavy, brown paper package. Gomez declared that had his numbering and perforating machine arrived when he expected it he would have gone back to Mexico a week ago, with most of the money, which, he said, the counterfeit notes are excellent imitations. They are said to have been made in Louisville.

EXTRA SESSION COST $500,000.

Uncle Sam Pays Out Large Sum to Pass Tariff Bill.

Further investigation of the cost of passing the tariff law shows that before Uncle Sammel gets through footing the bills of the lawmakers incurred during the special session he will have to pay out close to $500,000. The principal item of expense is the mileage, because every member of both houses is allowed 20 cents for the rate of 20 cents a mile from his home to Washington for every session which he attends. By the time the Senators and Representatives from the Pacific coast put in their bills this account is pretty big. Members of the House get just $14,000, while Senators took away from the "tranny $17,000 for traveling expenses. Every pay for the employees of the Senate amounted to something more than $23,000, and so there are many more clerks, messengers and other workers on the House side. It is estimated, if that the pay for extra services of the employes was about $100,000. This urgent deficiency bill carried an item of $25,000 for general expenses, and it is said that most of this was used for expediting the passage of the tariff bill. The official reports of the two houses got about $10,000 to pay extra clerk hire and other expenses.

MEN IN MINORITY IN CHURCH.

Standing out as a conspicuous feature of a bulletin issued by the census entitled "Census of religions bodies," is the fact that out of a total membership of 45,397,000 in the States in 1906, of nearly 32,000,000 men and women, women lack less than 1,500 in the total. Of the total church membership reported by the various religious bodies, women number 16,000,000, 46.1 per cent were men and 56.9 per cent were women. Among the Jews the difference was greater, only 29.3 per cent of the Jewish men, 40.7 per cent of the Jewish women. Among the Catholic Church the men formed 49.3 per cent of the total membership. Female communicants outnumber the male by the Latter Day Saints, the Lutherans, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Unitarians and Protestant Episcopalians, the percentage of men members decreasing in the order given, and ranging only 25.5 per cent men among the Episcopalians, Jews and Christian Scientists, only 27.6 per cent were men, and of the Shakers, only 21.3 per cent, but in the Greek Orthodox church, 54.9 per cent were men.

FORTY-FIVE SAVED AS STEAMER BURNS

OFFICERS STOP A PANIC

Forty persons, half of them women and children, narrowly escaped death the other afternoon when the steamer, Fred Swain was burned to the water's edge in the Illinois River near Peoria. Two men were seriously injured. With the flames sweeping over the deck the passengers became panic-stricken and threatened to crowd each other into the fire or into the river to escape its raw boats, which were put out. To add to the confusion and danger the ropes supporting the gang plank were burned and fifteen persons, most of them women and children, were thrown into the water.

The steamer belonged to the Peoria and LaSalle Packet Company. With Captain Verne Swain in command it left Peoria for a trip down the river with 40 persons on board. At 5:20 o'clock the flames were discovered burning from a stream on the second deck. Captain Swain, realizing that the vessel was doomed, decided to run it ashore and to beach the boat and instructed his crew to do all in their power to extinguish the flames meanwhile had been observed from the shore and a score of men had hurried to the scene. Women were shrieking and children were crying as they ran for the boats to take them away from the burning inferno.

The packet had been piloted into four feet of water in a patch of sand when the crew, who were cool, discovered that dumped fifteen persons into the water from the gangplank. The men and women were able to make their way to safety, but four children were crying as they would have perished but for two men, who hurriedly and half-awed with them to three stumps, which protruded from the water, to await the arrival of the rescuers. Captain Swain and Engineer Cerriber were the last to leave the boat. After guarding against an explosion Cerriber went to his pumps and remained there until the flames had reached the engine room. He had a row boat had been left behind, but he had to finally abandon it when the boat had caught fire. He got into the boat, and, beating the Nemo from the shore, rowed to the Swain and managed to get to shore.

The Swain was valued at $25,000, of which $20,000 is on the vessel. Several passengers lost all their personal belongings. The Fred Swain was built at Clear Water, Minn., nine years ago, and was one of the most popular of the Illinois River.

ALABAMA TO BE VERY DRY.

CHICAGO.

Dunn's review of local trade conditions says: Evidences of the improved state of trade generally become more distinct. The most notable feature is the rapid accumulation of forward work in the principal industries. Some complaint exists that supplies are not promptly delivered, and there is also some fear that transportation facilities will be found inadequate to handle the increasing freight offerings. In both the volume of payments through the banks and the record of business defaults are found sustaining indications of a healthy condition in credits. Heavier movements appear in grain, raw materials, factory outputs and general merchandise, and there is more production in iron, steel, wood and leather working. The general demand for money has become extended, and the discount rates for choice commercial paper are firm at 4½ to 5 per cent, with the fact that many large concerns as yet seek no accommodation.

Hot weather raised some alarm as to the fruit and vegetable crops and forced a moderate rise for the leading grains, but flour has remained weak and the general tone of the trade assumes now favor agriculture. Visible supplies of grain increased among the jobbing district, and there is considerable activity in dry goods, footwear, hardware, groceries, furniture and house needs. Bank clearings, $1,145,000,000, exceed those of the corresponding week by 19.6 per cent and compare with $1,221,172,655 in 1907. Failures reported by the Chicago district number seventeen, against twenty-one last week and twenty-four in 1908 and fourteen in 1907. Business with Mexico for the past month six, against seven last week, six in 1908 and two in 1907.

NEW YORK.

Jobbing trade and manufacturing industry tend to expand as the vacation season wanes and harvest prospects grow more satisfactory. From a number of markets, however, come reports of complaints that purchasers take hold conservatively and that retailers are still cautious buyers. Manufacturers adapt to the country are enlarging and money correspondingly firmer. Something like a selling process has been witnessed in the security market, which is lower than a week ago. Perhaps the most encouraging features reported this week come from a few of the leading industries. Iron and steel business has become more confident, railway purchasing has been in better volume and offerings offered for early deliveries of materials intended for manufacture. Wheat prices have gained over several, particularly winter wheat, has been in better demand from the farms, and the number of idle cars has decreased, yet there is a slight shortage before the close of the year.

Business failure for the week ending Aug. 12 were 203, against 217 last week; 209 in the like week of 1908, 183 in 1907, 154 in 1906, 186 in 1905—Bradstreet's Commercial Review.

CHURCH FALLING TO DECAY.

Crime-Stained Battle Ram Building Stripped by Relic Hunters.

The Battle Ram Methodist Episcopal Church, located in Columbus Township, and the scene of the terrible crime of January last when Rev. J. H. Carmichael murdered Gideon Hawkins and then buried his body in the church stove, is fast falling to decay, many of the stained glass windows have been broken and are now boarded up, while in the interior seats are splintered and the place is completely stripped of its former neat decorations. Relic gatherers are responsible for this and there are many of the people visiting the church each week to see the place where the crime was committed. The church was built in 1874 and was one of the most extensive of the Methodist Episcopal denomination in this section of the State, a distance out of the regular travel of more than 100 miles, only the Arkansas River, but almost all of its tributaries are overflowed.

DARE "GRIPS" OF NEGRO LODGES.

Georgia Law Also Wipes Out Colored Lodges of Knights of Pythias.

A recent act of the Georgia Legislature prohibits the by negro secret societies of the Indigola, Titiani, Sons and Daughters of Ham, composed of whites. The act legislates out of existence the organization of Elks and Knights of Pythias, but the negro Masonic and Odd Fellow organizations may continue to operate, managing their badges, rituals, grips etc., as the latter have been slightly different from the white Masonic and Odd Fellow organizations.

MOSQUITOES SCOURGE TEXAS.

Stampede Cattle Into Gulf and Drive Railway Passengers Frantic.

Telegrams from Galveston and other Texas gulf points say a plague of mosquitoes is afflicting the gulf coast, and that cattle in large herds have traveled many miles to the gulf to escape the pests by getting into the water, where they stand around, the only dry spot in section hands were forced to flag a train to escape the mosquitoes.

Silver Dollar of 1798.

Cautiously asking a Kansas City conductor if a dollar he was tendering was "good" an old man paid his tariff with a silver dollar dated 1798. On the date side is a Liberty head with thirteen stars.

Stick Was Sinker's Tail.

William H. Hosh at Greenwood Lake, N. J., shipped eggs when he thought a stick, but it was the tail of a snake, and the reptile wound itself around the calf of his right leg. The snake measured nearly six feet in length and was big around as a man's wrist.

Perry Slater, employed at High Falls as an engineer, is dead as the result of taking a dose of strychnine under the impression that it was quinine.

Fred A. Bunnell, an India merchant, has filed voluntary bankruptcy proceedings in Federal court. His liabilities are placed at $3,387, with assets nothing.

Richard Phelps, aged 15, son of a Chicago retired man, was arrested at Covert, charged with four attempts to wreck trains on the Fruit Belt railway.

Battle Creek faces a "working girl" famine. Not a single girl applies to the effect that there are places of employment for at least 200 girls in the local city.

While fooling with his father's 22-caliber revolver Leslie Tyrrell aged son of W. G. Adams, a Ludington meat dealer, accidentally shot himself in the abdomen.

Ten-year-old Loyd Gyson, son of a farmer near Dowagiac, was thrown from a load of wheat under the wagon wheels and fatally crushed, dying a few minutes later.

South Haven will likely secure a $200,000 appropriation for the new harbor which has been tied up by the government owing to the fact that certain conditions have to do with the matter. The body of Mrs. Hulda Hill, aged 12, was found in an abandoned work. ing of the Nelson mine which had been pumped out near Houghton. The balance of the mine will be pumped out to near the end of September, he was a prisoner under charges. This he was brought before a court-martial and tried. It is a peculiarity of the administration of military justice that, after his trial, the accused is not permitted to learn the fate until a long interval has elapsed, when the order of the commanding officer is published, reviewing the case. This painful interval lasted, in Turpin's case, till December 15. Then the order of General Isaka was promulgated, confirming the proceedings of the accused had been tried for mistakes before the enemy, disobedience of orders, cowardice, and failure to do a good order and military discipline, and sentenced to be shot to death. The charge, and was sentenced "to be shot to death with musketry."

Charlevoix County and the State Senatorship.

Whether, in that legislative game of foot-ball in which Charlevoix county was landed "over the fence and out" of its former companions ship the deed was done by Wetmore, Ming, or "manifest destiny," tirse has not yet disclosed. The fact remains that we were rocked to sleep and awoke to find ourselves in bed with Emmet, Cheboygan and Alpena.

But Charlevoix county's still on the map of Michigan, and must be reckoned with when it comes to senatorial representation. In the primaries Charlevoix county will be heard from with a candidate, and that candidate, will, we believe, receive the united support of the republicans of the county.

Leonard F. Knowles, of Royse City, is one of the strongest men in northern Michigan. In the constitutional convention Mr. Knowles made a record that was not only approved by the people of the old senatorial district, but marked him as most promising material for political advancement. Whether or not a state senatorship may be considered as an advancement is an open question; but when he returned from Lansing his Charlevoix county constituents booked him to go back as a senator—there is no mistake about that.

The reapportionment has since somewhat changed the political map and the political situation, but it has not abated the desire of Charlevoix county to further honor Mr. Knowles—a clean, brainy, useful citizen, and the peer of any man in the district.

There is not a shadow of doubt that Charlevoix county republicans are united on the candidacy of Mr. Knowles, and his name will be upon the ballots in the primaries.

A Very Pleasant Affair.

Judge J. W. Harris was instrumental, Monday evening, in bringing together twenty-seven lusty good chaps, including ourself and several other newspaper men, at a Baker's Inn banquet, in honor of Judge Davis, of the 8th circuit, who is holding court here this week.

Judge Harris presided at the foot of the table, while the guest of honor beamed upon both the banquet and the banqueters from the other end. The distinguished guest, who had Judge Mayne upon his left as a gastronomic counselor and guide, entered into the enjoyment of the occasion with a charming combination of judicial dignity and good-fell-swhip.

With the cigars came a talk by Judge Davis, and a general exchange of brain-product between the twenty-seven bully good chaps. The banquet was served in the beautiful tea room of the inn, and was faultless in every feature.

Two and one-half hours were spent at the table, and every minute of that time was brim full of unalloyed enjoyment.

Night on Bald Mountain.

On a lonely night Alex. Henton, of Fort Edward, N. Y., climed Bald Mountain to the home of a neighbor tortured by Asthma, bent on curing him with Dr. King's New Discovery, that had cured himself of asthma. This wonderful medicine soon relieved and quickly cured his neighbor. Later it cured his son's wife of a severe long trouble. Millions believe its the greatest Throat and Lung cure on earth. Coughs, colds, croup, hemorrhages and sore lungs are surely cured by it. Best for hay fever, grip and whooping cough. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

George Martell, of Elk Rapids, was detected in the use of illegal methods and drew a fine of $25 and costs

The Consert company at Elk Rapids is using about fifty cars per day in and out. The company's freight bill runs $5,000 to $6,000 per month.

The barn, on H. E. Pearsall's farm in Wilson township was destroyed by fire Tuesday of last week. Forest fires were the cause and the loss was $300 with no insurance.

Died, on Thursday, August 26, at his home in Bay township, about one mile from Horton Bay, George W. Smith, aged 67 years, of Bright's disease. Mr. Smith was well known to many in Charlevoix county, being one of the pioneers of this northern region.

Traverse City Eagle: The company which was recently formed for the purpose of making an extensive excavation of the ground south of the city in order to discover if the vein of coal reported is a myth or a reality, started work Tuesday morning. Fred Light being employed to mak the shovel. He is now at work on the farm of Albert Dion and his first day's work showed a depth of 30 feet.

Elk Rapids Progress: We know of one orchard not far from town that sold for $2.25 per barrel, fruit on the tree and at its roots. The buyer does his picking, furnishes his own barrels and does the packing, etc. It will readily be seen that after paying for the picking, packing, barrel, freight charges and commission he must realize $1.00 or better per barrel. We quote this simply to give an idea of the reputation and market value of northern Michigan fruit in the Chicago market.

Petoskey News: Daniel J. Bigelow of Toledo, O., who is stopping at Charlevoix during the present season, was in the city yesterday. While here he paid a visit to Col. George W. Dickinson, as both had served together, in the same regiment, during the civil war. Horace Tarbee was also a member of the same regiment, the 6th Ohio cavalry, and it is needless to add that the three enjoyed a very pleasant time during their brief visit, recalling old incidents of the time of the nation's greatest struggle.

W. E. Gordon, of Traverse City, president of the Michigan Union society of Equity, has called a meeting of Michigan potato growers at that city for Sept. 5th. In the call he says: "The prospect now is that Michigan will raise the largest crop of potatoes she ever produced. Reports from other parts of the country, covering the whole 70 crop beginning with the early crop in Florida, show large yields and excellent prospects. The indications are that the crop in the United States will break all former records. So large have been the yields in southern producing sections that prices in some markets have already reached an unprofitable level. This condition is not assuring for the large Michigan crop, which will soon be seeking a market. The gravity of the situation is fully apparent to thoughtful potato growers."

F. J. Brown, a fruit farmer near Archie, Grand Traverse County, Mich., has a red raspberry patch that has brought more than enough returns to pay for his farm. He has kept tab for the last eight seasons and the gross income from this patch, which is but little more than an acre in size, has been over $2,000, which is more than the original cost of the twenty-one acres in his place. This is an average return of $250 a year.

Traverse City Record: About 2 o'clock Wednesday morning fire destroyed the plant of the Traverse City Manufacturing company and the headquarters of the Pere Marquette at Boardman Junction, inflicting a total loss of the buildings of both concerns. The fire in the lumber piles and which threatened to destroy the Kelley Lumber company's mill and millions of feet of lumber on Tuesday afternoon was overcome by the prompt action of the department from the city and other measures adopted by the employes of the plant and the company in the vicinity.

Petoskey News: Official notice of a number of homeseeker's excursions to be run from Indiana points this fall to northern Michigan, has been received by least G. H. & I. authorities. These excursions will be run from points between Richmond, Ind., and Sturgis, Mich., to Petoskey and other points in northern Michigan, with a time limit of 15 days, but selling date of sale. Special rates have been offered, and advance dope has it that a large number will take advantage to look over the best region in the country. The dates of the excursions will be: September 21, October 5th and 19th, November 2nd and 16th and December 7th.

Elk Rapids Progress: Here's some thing for some of those southern Michigan farmers who think this an unproductive, worthless region to try and equal (we know they can't beat it). Will Bissett, who lives about 3 mile and a half south of Alden, just across the line in Kalkaska county, on a farm that is considered more than ordinarily sandy and below the average in fertility, threshed the wheat from three acres of ground last week and had 105 bushels, or an average of thirty-five bushels per acre. It's getting along time of year for us to begin patchwork crop statistics of this region that will keep the southern Michigan farmer guessing to meet them, or even approach them.

Petoskey Record: The news of the removal of Rev. Ulric Feirl, O. P. M., from the pastorate of St. Francis Catholic church was received on Monday. Father Ulric comes to Petoskey a year and a half ago and it fell to his lot to complete the interior, decorate and furnish the new church. The excellent taste shown in the main decorations, the massive and very beautiful altars with their finest finish, all in most perfect harmony of coloring, all be a lasting reminder of the faithful, loving care of the pastor. Father Ulric is a quiet and very retiring man, but those who have come to know him most intimately not only respect an honor him as a good and holy priest, but value and love him as a friend. He will be followed by many good wishes to his new work in Chicago. Rev. Bruno Torka, who has been a missionary here for many years, succeeds Father Ulric as pastor, and the members of the congregation feel that they have an old friend, whom they have known and loved long, to go in and out among them.

It was once said that the man who emigrated to western Michigan went to a Godless country. Without regard to how much, or how little, truth there may have been in the statement as used in the past, it cannot be employed today without a disregard of the underlying principles of veracity. At the time of the last census there were 927 church organizations in western Michigan that owned places of worship. These buildings had a seating capacity sufficient to care for 237,140 persons. There were better than one-half as many parsonages owned by religious organizations as churches, and these parsonages were valued at $578,465. A world-be settler today can buy land in almost any part of western Michigan with full assurance that neither he nor his family will be deprived of church privileges. Many of the church buildings erected in the last few years are well-built structures with considerable architectural merit. They furnish visible evidence of the prosperity of the region and the sentiment of its people.—Development Bureau Circular.

At a meeting of the Charlevoix grange, held at Maple Grove, a few days since, D. S. Payton, one of the directors of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, explained the work of the bureau and asked for the co-operation of the patrons. A committee was immediately appointed to visit the granges in that district, for the purpose of securing the best of the farm products and such information as will advance the interests of Charlevoix county. It was also decided at this county meeting that the Master of the county organization shall proceed to make arrangements for the transportation of 500 patrons from Charlevoix county to the meeting of the state grange to be held in Traverse City Dec. 14-18. In making inventory of the grange in Charlevoix it was found that the order had a membership of 900 and that it has property valued at $11,000. During this county meeting the fifth or persona degree was conferred upon a class of 30, by the Marion Center crack degree team. This was a record breaking class for Charlevoix county.—Development Bureau Circular.

CHAPTER II

At the moment when Stephen was sounding the horn in summons the young minister in his supper, a prodigious crime of violence with clubs (if not worse) for half of the village haven received a shock. They heard the shouts of men in the distance, and looked to the direction of the disturbance and saw a cloud of splendid rolling black house dust, formed a curious and white a strange cable that rose into the sun.

There came two extraordinary men on the front seat of the wagon. The driver was a tall, stalwart man whose continuous muscular exertions in cracking his whip and urging his team to emphasize the terrorism caused him no little distress. He was a handsome gentleman, concealed his mouth. Nature had endowed him with a generous one, but he had made it a thin line by long habit of compressing it. Nature had given him a pair of blue eyes, which in a part of eyes which showed so brightly that they seemed to be black though they were so deep-set that they could scarcely be seen.

The fierce and instinctive pressure, accompanied by the tightening of the hands, imperative voice, flung into the reins, seemed to have the effect of the conquering of a giant. She gasped for breath and looked at the man in California as a good nature.

Brother and Elder Corbin, said the villain who was from the rear of the grand and sip wear a will shout of laughter.

"Quakers preacher. Young fellow—20 years old."

"Are he—I—faith?"

"Faith! He talks a mile into a course issue in leaves three minutes."

"He's an—man!" exclaimed the driver, as when the second blasted again.

"What are—he looking at?" he asked, turning upon them savagely, his face "Corbin." Corbin was stunned by frightening tissue who stood second to the top, extremely sinister, leaning a pace or two.

"Do—Corbin—he," said one of them, "tell you certain? get thee life's plum."

"Hiram. What do I—?"

"Well, there have plum Quakers are not in their—business. He's not in for you, sir," said the taller, for there's quite enough in the world for business, and he'll speak for you as you know. If you want to."

"I'll be there. Hiram and dot-dot-you forget to—I'll look him! Gosh! one thing I couldn't forg if I had a little of the pig-proof stuff about me!"

"I say, Job, that dangerous of yours. Never let his when it comes to taking fortunes," ventured a young, dandy, whose hand had been turned by the poem's beauty.

"D-D-dangerous!" snapped the quack, turning sharply upon him; "she's not my daughter, I'm not her father."

In order to comprehend the relationship of this strangely mated pair, we must go back five or six years to a certain day when this same Doctor Amphlett was made stately down the main street of a small city in Western Pennsylvania, and then out along a rugged country highway. A couple of miles brought him to the group of a band of gypsies.

A crowd of gypsies was a picturesque group of persons, all of whom, with a single exception, were dressed in the gay colors of the stranger. The man who stood his ground was a truly amazing figure. He was tall, thin and angular, his clothing was stained and ragged, his face bronzed with exposure to the sun.

"Hand reading, Balisaur," said the visitor.

"Go back with this horse," the traveler added, without appearing to notice the gypsy's rebuff.

"If you will not lay perhaps you will—that! Hey? Hey? Hey?"

"Come," was the laconic response, and so serious was the tone of the man, the gypsy turned his head toward the forest which lay just beyond the road. "Come!" he said, a moment later he found himself in a secluded spot, where there was an impressed shadow, and a dozen or more gypsies, who had been lounging, had assumed a welcome.

"A city reader, he says thirty pulls, and he has from the miracle of it where she had been gathered in the gypsy band, and how long she had been there, and what she had been worse off, and you also be a great deal better." They stopped and looked at the speaker, the first I should be wonder if they head you answer now." Bid the gypsy looking now worse. You shall have a little pony, and a cart, and lots of fine and pretty clothes, and everything that little girls like. Do don't know what they are, but whatever they are you shall have them. Do don't know more. What a pretty name Pepsin is that they, commonly always have a pace or two.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE HEART OF THE UNIVERSE.

by Henry F. Cope.

"As the hart pantheth after the water brooks so pareth my soul after thee, O God."—Ps. 22:2.

As soon as you take one God away from man, he puts another. The hunger for an infinite object of love and confidence, for the life to which life explains itself, is common to all. The aged show it to be implanted in the heart of man. Men have signified in the joys of fear or worship, in the grief of man, indeed it is the search for a personal center to the universe.

Look since we have outgrown the old theologian's God, the mighty man who made the earth with his fingers and gabbed the stars with His hands, who sitting on the throne of His glory, ruled human affairs, as arbitrary, awesome, omnipotent sovereign, we have outgrown the Jesus Christ, that phrase once conceived man because, as a rough power in contrast with the sounds from the harp and animated his strings, "Thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness." Man's heart is a celestial harp. The strings of the harp would not have been created if the harp finished. Let us let God alone our life in thankfulness and in the joy of the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our consecration to the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our service to the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our worship of the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our hope of the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our faith in the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our love to the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our obedience to the Lord. Let us let God alone our life in our prayer to

A Squeal From Traverse City.

Deputy Warden Allen Smith has been talking to the reporters again. The Traverse City Daily Eagle of the 27th contains an article fresh from the lips of the loquacious deputy. Deputy Smith flies high. There are two other things that fly high—an aeroplane and a balloon. An aeroplane is non inflatable and dirigable. Deputy Smith is unlike an aeroplane in being inflatable and non-dirigable. A balloon of these latter days is both inflatable and dirigable. Again Deputy Smith differs. He is inflatable but non-dirigable. Balloons are also puncturable. Deputy Smith's balloon has been punctured, and what we hear from Traverse City is but the noise of escaping gas.

We know nothing of the general efficiency of Deputy Smith; that is a matter that is locked in the bosom of Warden Pierce, and we have no desire to dig it out. We only know that Deputy Smith talks too much, and he talks when silence is golden. The following from the Eagle is a couple of the oxygen that escaped from the Smith balloon.

"At the time the fire in question was started from Mr. McCann he stated to a citizen of this town that he did not blame Deputy Smith for setting the fire and that he was perfectly satisfied with the arrangements that had been made regarding the case."

Within the hour of this writing we have personally cabled this extract to Mr. McCann and he authorizes us to state emphatically that he never made the statement in Traverse City or anywhere else. He has twice, to us personally, characterized the seizure as "an outrage." This is not only his opinion but that of everybody else who knows the facts. No man who knows James McCann ever questions his word.

Now we hope Deputy Smith will get down to earth and use an automobile—one of the still kind. With this sort of a vehicle he can move just as rapidly and will not have so far to fall with only a tire to puncture.

So far as the SENTINEL is concerned, the bare fact of a wrongful seizure of fish belonging to James McCann would have been passed up. Our criticism of Deputy Smith was solely prompted by the well known love of Deputy Smith for newspaper notoriety, and our own personal knowledge of his propensity for blowing his bugle. The discovery that he made a mistake in the seizure, and pecuniary reimbursement for the loss and expense by no means compasses the notification experienced by Mr. McCann in seeing himself branded in six daily newspapers as a "heavy inland law-breaker." We d'smiss the question as to whether or not it requires an expert to distinguish between a whitefish and a menominee. It is entirely irrelevant to the proposition that—Deputy Allen Smith talks too much.

LIVING HORRORS.

Men Made to Look Like Beasts by Chinese Methods.

To transform a man into a beast would at first seem to be impossible. It is accomplished, however, by the Chinese, to whom nothing seems to be unknown. The skin is removed in small particles from the entire surface of the body, and to the bleeding pores bits of the hide of living animals, hoofs and claws, are usually applied. The operation requires years for its full accomplishment. After the person has had his skin completely changed into the comes a man-bear or a man-dog in human form to complete the illusion and also deprive him of the means of informing the public as to intended scenes of his long torture. A Chinese journal, the Hupeen, prints a description of one of these human animals exhibited in the Kiangsi. His entire body was covered with dog skin, the hind feet (although sometimes the feet are so mutilated that the beast is forced to walk on all fours), could not utter articulate sounds, rise and sit down—in short, make the gestures of a human being. A mandarin who heard of this monstrosity had him brought to his palace, where his hairy skin and beastly appearance caused quite as much terror as surprise. Upon being asked if he was a man the creature replied with an affirmative nod. He also signified in the same manner that he was world weary. A pencil was given him, but he could not use it, his hands were so deformed. Ashes were then placed on the ground in front of him, when the man-dog, leaning over, traced in them five characters indicating his name and district. Investigation showed that he had been stolen, imprisoned for years and subjected to long torture. His master was supposed headed and condemned to death.—London Spare Moments.

A CHEERFUL OUTLOOK.

Making It Pleasant For the Studious Traveler.

An English tourist traveling on foot through one of our mountainous regions studying the people, asked a man whom he met to direct him to a certain cabin at which he had been advised to stay overnight. "Guess that's" said the man. "Well, Tom's a first rater, take the first right, he's a mighty queer."

"What do you mean?" asked the traveler.

"Well, it's like this," and the man looked at the stranger for a calm, impersonal way, "you'll be setting outside most probably, and he'll see you coming. He'll take a good look at you, and if you don't suit him he may just up and shut on you.

"If he don't and you get to talking with him and say anything he don't just like he may throw you down and throw on you. But if you're too careful in your talk, on the other hand he's liable to take you for a spy and use his gun first and listen to explanations afterward.

"But if's no use trying to get by without stopp'n," concluded the man, with cheerful relish of the prospect he was opening up to the stranger. "If you was so undertake that 'twould be all up with you, for he'd think you was proud and bigotty.

"If you want to come out of the mountain whole, don't go past Tom's cabin without stopping, whatever you do!"—Youth's Companion.

The Unemployed.

Lack of employment is not a new question, says the Liverpool Mercury of Feb. 14, 1842. It is of the highest importance that a committee of the legislature should immediately inquire into the causes of the present wretched general answer the inquiring classes and whether means might not be found in a nation of which the Excess, is immense by which a succession of public works," etc. There were at that time 10,000 unemployed in Liverpool. The same writer after asking "Is war the only employment that the state has to give the poor?" goes on to show that in the episodes of Troy and the "elegant edifices of Greece" were built with the object of giving continual employment to the laborer."

Women's Work and Infant Mortality.

In eight industrial towns, where the proportion of married women of child bearing age is at work in the factories was 45 per cent, the infant mortality rate for two years averaged 182 per thousand. In eight industrial towns of a different type, where the proportion of married women at work was only 9 per cent, the infant mortality was only 150 per 1,000. The excessive rate in the first group is not due to bad wages nor to bad conditions, but to the absence of the mother.—London Post.

A Financial Genius.

"Say, will you please tell me what a financial genius is?"

"A financial genius, my child, is a man who can spend money that he has never had and which the people who think they are going to get it will never see."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Music.

Mrs Nagger—The order you make at night is very amusement music. Mr. Nagger—Do you call snoring music? Mrs. Nagger—I should say so—sheet music arranged for the bugle.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Talleyran's Reply.

Napoleon once said to Talleyrand, "I wish I had the keys to hell, for I could then put you in there." The reply was, "Sire, would he better, sire, that I should have them, for then I could let you out."

He who knows little soon tells It.—German Proverb.

Where Milton Wrote.

The last years of Milton's life were spent in a house in Artillery Walk, Bunhill Fields, London, Eng., where he wrote mind, eyesight, and dictated to his daughters "Paradise Lost," "Paradise Regained" and "Samson Agonistes," and where he died in 1674, at the age of 66.

Gardening.

Country-Bred Boys Win.

Fully 90 per cent of all the famous Americans have been country-bred and all of them acknowledge their fame and success due to the foundations they laid as boys on the old farmstead. There are one hundred country youths who succeed and strike their mark in the world to one city-born and city-bred. For every country boy who fails in the race of life more than a thousand failures can be laid to the city.

Beekeeping in America.

Bees were unknown to the Indians, but they were brought over from England only a few years after the landing of the pilgrim fathers. It was more than two centuries after the first white invasion of New England, however, before modern beekeeping began. The industry of the present day dates from the invention of the movable-frame hive by Langstroth in 1852.

Daily Thought.

A man is only happy when he believes himself to be so, in whatever way the proposition is turned, and no man believes himself so happy but what he might be happier.—F. Marion Crawford.

Shoes Like Rams' Horns.

In the reign of William Rufus of England, in the eleventh century, a great "swell," "Robert the Horned," used shoes with sharp points, stuffed with tow and twisted like rams' horns.

—Emmet Coulter and wife attended the State fair in Detroit last week, and, indications are, will visit relatives in that city for a few days.

—Regular communication of Charlevoix Chapter, No. 72, O. E. S., Sept. 15th. Annual meeting and election of officers. All members are requested to be present.

—Owing to the quite serious illness of prosecutor A. B. Nicholas at the Hotel Elston last week, the remaining criminal cases will be heard next week over to the next term of court.

—The State anti-Saloon League have secured the service of E. S. Stacks, of this city, to open local oppo campaigns in wet counties. He left for Cheboygan Monday to begin his work.

—Judge Fred M. Adrich, of Detroit, and G. M. Ferris, of St. Louis, Mich., were in the city Friday, making an effort to consolidate the Grand and Portland Cement Co., of hallowed memory.

—The old Fountain City House will be overhauled again next spring, and many improvements made, its capacity increased, and modern conveniences installed that will convert the house into a good medium grade summer resort hotel.

—The apple market is beginning to show considerable life. For fall stock buyers are offering from $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, and several contracts have been made for winter fruit at $2. In all varieties and grades the crop is large, and speaks volumes for Charlevoix county as a fruit producing section.

—Forrest Bartholomew spent the week end here, returning to Chicago on the Manitou Sunday. Mr. Bartholomew came on business connected with the construction of the Van Pelt block, of which he is the architect. He is now engaged on plans for a fine new residence for H. N. Faulkner, at the west end of Dixon Avenue.

—Travis has been vindicated, and Tarvis will go into the Charlevoix street commission. The council committee that went to Traverse City and Mackinac to investigate reports concerning the material found it all right. The trouble that was experienced at Traverse City was due to defective preparation and application. When properly handled Tarvis appears to be effective road material.

—Will Nordrum, of the Booth Co., made a business trip to St. Ignace this week.

—Mrs. T. H. McInerney, of Rochester, N. Y., who has been visiting here, for two weeks, returned home Tuesday.

—E. A. Sheldon, of the Cottage Restaurant, is entertaining his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. Z. Sheldon, of Greenville.

—The steamer Beaver brought over the first load of Beaver Island peas last Friday—600 bushels. They are coming now every day.

—The Carnegie library is growing apace. The basement walls are completed and the outer walls of hewed stone and brick are rising.

—The school board last week bought the house and lot on Clinton street building the high school building on the west, for a janitor's residence. The consideration was $1,000.

—At the common council meeting Tuesday evening very little business was done beyond the auditing of bills. Final action on the Michigan and Petoskey avenue paving was taken, and the work will be rapidly pushed to completion.

—An important real estate transaction last week was the purchase by Capt. Brown of H. S. Harris, of the 15-foot frontage on Bridge street adjoining the Masonic lot on the south. Within a year Mr. Brown expects to erect a good cement block thereon, to be used as a harness store and shop.

—Mr. A. T. Washburn died at the home of her father, Wm. Crosby, in Marion township, Tuesday evening of this week, after 18 months illness. The funeral will be at the home today (Thursday). Interment in Brook Side Cemetery with brief services. Remains had interment under Christian Science auspices.

—When it came to the front test in Charlevoix county, the peach law has always been the boundary line between certainty and uncertainty. Note this fact, you of more southern latitudes, who are fond of calling this section "the fright north country." Bushels and bushels of peaches grown in Hayes, Charlevoix and Norwood townships, within ten miles of Charlevoix are in the Charlevoix market, and they are coming in every day.

—George H. Van Pelt sends us the following, under the head of "A Word of Advice to Reporters:" "Sometime between the 20th day of August and the 5th day of September we always have, in this section, a not'weather which brings with it a few days of cold, nasty weather, which is always followed by the most delightful weather in the whole year. September, October, and many times up to Thanksgiving, are truly beautiful in this neck of the woods. Moral:—Hog the fire during the first cold snap, and then remain to enjoy the magnificent weather which always follows."

—State street is the most complaints street in town. It is conspicuous because it is just as old nature made it. Slawson left it in 1868 (minus the stumps,) when he made the plat. It is the widest street on the plat and, geographically the most central. It is unscathed and unpaved, although it intersects four other streets that are paved. We understand it is booked for improvement next year. L. H. Bartholomew, a resident of the street, has submitted plans to the council that we hope will be adopted. The plans contemplate eight-foot side-walks and drives either side of central shrubbery parks. The street is amply wide enough to permit the adoption of these plans, and if they are adopted State street will indeed be a beauty

—A Traverse City special says: "Knocked senseless with a stone, bruised and injured by being kicked, William McSandy, an Indian at Suttons Bay, last night got up and silently followed his assailants in the dark ness until he found an officer and caused their arrest. Through carelessness of the officer, the prisoners, illegal and intimated discussion took place, questions being fired at Mr. Dayton from every direction when he proved himself fully prepared to answer. The question of co-operation of the granges was brought up and L. L. Olney and Martin Rhuling of the executive committee and Glenn D. Dalton, pomona lecturer, assured the business men present that the grange was the pioneer in the movement and would lead the procession. At the conclusion of the discussion President Squires assured Mr. Dayton that East Jordan was prepared to pay over the sum asked for and perform her share of the labor involved.

The weather bug was forgotten in the clash which bound the East Jordan, Charlevoix and Boyne City's business men's associations together with the farmers, all working together for her share of the labor involved.

—Ellsworth Dutton has bought the residence of Henry Monroe, on Clinton street.

—Lavinnia's store will be closed from Wednesday, Sept 15th, 6 p. m., to Friday, Sept. 17th, 6 p. m., on account of Jewish holiday.

—H. I. McMillan, of East Jordan, who has been in the city several days on business at the Argo mills, was called to Marcellus, Mich., Tuesday, by the critical illness of his mother.

—Just before the U. S. dredging steamer Gen. Gillespie left here last week the captain received notice from Washington that the name of the boat had been changed to Gen. Geo. G. Mead.

—Great damage by frost is recorded, embracing counties as far south as Muskegon. In many localities entire crops were destroyed. Except in the particularly exposed spots, the Grand Traverse region escaped.

—D. S. Payton took photographer Priest in an automobile through Marion and Norwood township Monday, and secured some fine views of farm houses and barns, also several good crops of fields of growing beets and other crops. The views, which are wonders, will be used in illustrating Western Michigan Development Bureau advertising matter.

—Duck hunting is in full swing and many miserds are out after the birds. Some sportsmen are aware that according to law revised game laws quail are protected for five years and it will not be until 1914 that they can be hunted. The laws were passed during the closing days of the last legislative session and very few seem to be aware of the laws passed by that body. Partridge may be shot from October 15 to November 30, but a dozen per day is the limit.

—Our fourth and fifth pages this issue we publish in full the lecture delivered last Friday evening at the Charlevoix Theatre, by Mr. Frank H. Leonard, an eminent Christian Science scholar and lecturer. The lecture was a most full and lucid exposé of the teachings of that rapidly growing cult, throwing the bright light of intelligent and careful scrutiny upon questions that have long been subjects of skeptical criticism. The speaker proved clearly that neither magic nor mysticism are woven into the fabric of Christian Science principles.

—An entirely revised and new production of Uncle Dan'l or the Messenger from Jarvis Section, the beautiful rural New England melodrama based on the widely read novel of that name, will be the attraction at Charlevoix theatre one night, Thursday, Sept. 9. The life-of and enduring interest of this well-known play made so famous by Mrs. Fiske and the late Harney McCafferty, has been demonstrated in the past, but this season it comes up stronger and better than ever. The story is one that can never grow old. There is great interest and a fascination which clings and it has been truly said, "Uncle Dan'l is a play that will live when others are forgotten." With the same scenery and cast which made such a hit in New York and throughout the east, the production promises to be one of the features of the theatrical season here. Prices 25, 35 and 50.

Charlevoix, East Jordan and the Grange Hold Confab and Banquet to Discuss Development of Our Resources.

Last Friday evening, says the East Jordan Herald, the board of directors of the Charlevoix Board of Commerce and a few other gentlemen interested in the developing of Charlevoix county, accepted an invitation of the East Jordan Board of Trade to visit that town, at an informal banquet and over the plans of the West Michigan Development Bureau and plan for systematic work in preparing the exhibit and advertising from this county.

The bunch from Charlevoix were met at the dock by the East Jordan committee and escorted to the Hayes House dining room, where the Board had a banquet prepared for their visitors. After the sumptuous feast disposed of the meeting was called to order by President Squires, of the East Jordan Board of Trade, who explained the purpose of the meeting and called upon D. S. Payton, one of the directors of the Bureau, to explain what the plans of the Bureau were, according to asked of East Jordan, and what had already been accomplished in collecting statistics etc.

Mr. Payton said that statistics had been gathered of the schools, churches, secret organizations, telephones, rural routes, lands, etc., and that what the Bureau now wished was the collecting of farm scenes and the produce of Charlevoix county. A very interesting and animated discussion took place, questions being fired at Mr. Dayton from every direction which he proved himself fully prepared to answer. The question of co-operation of the granges was brought up and L. L. Olney and Martin Rhuling of the executive committee and Glenn D. Dalton, pomona lecturer, assured the business men present that the grange was the pioneer in the movement and would lead the procession. "There are Green Hills Far Away"—Yes, and Near Home.

Always the faraway hill is greenest—until you get up to it. The hard-worked Michigan farmer reads of the great crops they raise on irrigated land in the far western states, and he looks out on the acres where he has toiled all summer and realizes that his hill is not so green as the hill of which he has been reading. His crops will not bring $1,000 an acre. He has heard of regions where such yields are common—and he sells the fields every foot of which he has come to know, sweeps the tear that blurs his vision from his neighborhood in which he has lived for long, and he goes a-hunting for an irrigated farm out west.

Out there gray sagebrush stands idly on burning sands, and where the desert's dismal silence is the only music of the wilds, he finds—well, he finds land sassy in Michigan. Productive, developed land costs him all the way from $100 to $1,000 an acre. And he must irrigate early and late, or the numerous insects will swallow every blade of green, and his harvest will be lost. And labor is scarcer and costlier. If he buys wild land he must pay from $10 to $50 an acre, according to irrigation possibilities. And if there are no stumps to pull, there are knolls to level—for irrigated fields must be made perfectly level so that the quick spreading of the precious water brought by the inch. Soon the green fades from the hills. There are drawbacks from pests, market slumps, high expenses and other causes. And the irrigated farm's expense bill can never stop without total loss.

The story is different in Michigan. The rain falls freely. Droughts are short and rare. Land is cheap, measured by far western prices, and the crop costs far less to produce, bringe good prices and sometimes up the score. An illustration in point is furnished by the statement that the apple crop of the Lake Michigan Fruit Belt Traverse counties will this year bring to the growers $1,750,000. The growers didn't have to pay for the water that kept the trees alive all summer. They didn't have to put in practically all their time and money on irrigation of the trees. They perhaps sprayed them in the spring, and then went about their ordinary farm work, and mature possessors of land worth nearly two millions in easy money.

Land can be bought in parts of Michigan for from $25 to $50 an acre. By buy a farm under cultivation, with good buildings, for $35 to $50 an acre is possible. And whatever the size of the investment is considered, and the expenses of production are cast up, Michigan can put it all over half a dozen states in favor of the West, and a few to some eastern ones.—Detroit News.

The drought in their town is reaching a climax, and a crowd of disreputables, who are not entitled to consideration at home and should not be given any here. Central Lake is a good place for good men who come here on bona fide business and behaves as he or she should, but the large class, who have acquired an idea that this is a boom town, and inclined to view with indifference the rights of others, are much mistaken, and should take lined test they fail." Any man or woman who cannot observe the common decencies, whether resident or not, should be severely dealt with, and I am informed that the officials are determined to put an abrupt stop to some of the objectionable features recently enacted here. The Torch will, after this week, publish the name, residence, and offense of every person convicted in police court, and urges the vigilance of local police officers in supporting such exhibitions of depravity as have been recently witnessed on the part of a certain element coming from dry territory in search of refreshment.

CHAPTER III.

True to his determination, the doctor devoted the night following his visit to Into the little frontier village to the investigation of the Quaker preacher's fitness for his use. He took Peperita with him, the night habitues of the tavern sleeping on the porch and snoring immodestly as they started. The moonlit drive was one of those continental nature-beauty settings with which all travelers in the Western States are familiar. The ears of the tallow candles by which it was lighted were almost entirely consumed by the moth. The doors were open, and through them were passing noiseless, soft-colored and plain-robed worshipers.

Sitting close together, Peperita Hight and graceful the doctor peered unknown behind the shadows of the barrained, they ascended the steps on a boat and guide touch the ceiling of the gang-plank into the ark. They entered noiseless and stood in a row of the younger people who were startled suddenly stared the room and found their seats on the last bench. The Quaker meeting was "moved" at time to find were visibly excited and began to open themselves as little deeply right have done if a kind of paradise had suddenly fallen among them. The doctor felt happened to be seated next for the sake of the girl, and felt the grace. His face and person were perfectly at ease, and he was in a state of uneasiness, discomfort and the contrast between his easy manner and the stiff reader then both self-conscious and uneasy in such other's presence.

The author did not know at all what to expect. He had been expecting anybody ever and have been astonished or awed by anything else. Self-conscious and reflection on these points which prevailed. If the whole meeting had been disturbed by a dozen consecutive, then would not have been surprised, but the five minutes in which they thus sat holding stupidly at the pulpit and then to resume the memorize power, feel gradually subsided, the rite of a "chained" on his seat, and it was only by a great effort that he pulled himself together. Again Peperita to the arm and drew her out into the open air.

For a few moments they walked in silence and then the doctor exclaimed: "Peperita, I have found him at last!"

"Found whom?" she asked sharply, irritated by the question, for she felt such a yearning contrast to the one still echoing in her ears.

"Found whom?" As if you didn't know! I mean the man on earth for me! He is a snake charmer, Peperita! He just fairly charmed me! Why, I was beginning to my shoes and savior to my soul. He is a missionary, Peperita, but he can't be a Christian to me! When he up and did it! Two minutes did it! And I'm one hundred one, he can hardly be a Christian!"

"Did you understand what he said?"

"Understand? Well, I should say not! Not between you and me and the Ware Peperita, it's all the better, for if he could find the people with that kind of g-g-g-ibberish, he can certainly find them with the tongue of the Hi-Ho-Jewed Israels! First time I was ever tongue-tied in my life. Fact! Quaker, Our fortune's made, Peperita!"

His triumph and excitement were so great that he could not wait for the science and observation of his wife. His author had pulled invariably excited. A chained into which it proved its [illegible] dancing on bed or step at to run on momentum of everything else. Vanishing in the presence of attention to himself a companion as gifted, never continued for a moment that he could cancel with a bell, free demonstration [illegible] and with downcast eyes.

"Good morning," said the doctor.

"My name is Dr. Ascelepiads."

"The Israelite."

"I was over in the morning meeting and I thought I would like to speak to you. Didn't understand a word, but I am a stranger—may take a United States Senator."

David gazed into the blandishing "I came over to make you a proposition. Wasn't quite ready to do it in meeting. Wasn't sure of the H-ll-Babes of the Blessed Islands! You can see the Blessed Islands and I'll run the hobbles loose, are? When do you go away?"

David, shocked, the young Quaker answered: "I think there, friend, for that time, subject matter mean a reason, but I must decline the offer."

"Decline my offer! Are you crazy? Why do you disappointed my offer?"

Although his answer was addressed to the man, his eyes were directed to the woman. His reply, simple and natural, seemed astonished the quaker.

"What?" he exclaimed, "Do you mean that you prefer to stay in this hole-in-the-ground of a town to become a citizen of the greatest country on earth?"

"I do."

"Don't listen; I will pay you more money in a single month than you can earn by a dozen years. Don't you want to be a man? Don't you want to be a man? Don't you want to be a man?

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE "Demonstrable Religion."

A Lecture by Frank H. Leonard, C. S. B., of Brooklyn, New York, Member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., At the Charlevoix Theatre, Friday, Evening, September 3rd.

Introduction by Mr. J. D. Balch, of Kalamazoo.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

We are invited tonight by the local organization of Christian Scientists to hear a lecture on Christian science, delivered by a member of the Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, Mass.

Probably many of you are unfamiliar with the teachings and the method of healing the sick and destroying sin as taught in Christian Science, and those believers who are here for the purpose of correcting the wrong impression that the public may have as to the principle involved in this religion, and on the limited time that our speaker has tonight, he will explain as far as possible, the teachings of Christian Science as given in our text book "Science and Health."

Thinking people in all parts of the civilized world are investigating the religion which claims to heal the sick as well as the sinner. Many of us are finding this religion an "Ever present help" in our daily lives, and my own experience during the past fifteen years has proven to me the truth of Christian Science, for, by its help, I have been changed from a sick and a wretched man into a healthy and happy one.

In our business we find that, with the better understanding secured by the Christian Science, we can transact our affairs successfully with out fear or worry, and at the same time peace and happiness are brought into our homes.

I give one great pleasure to announce to you Mr. Frank H. Leonard, of Brooklyn, New York, from whom I ask your careful attention.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

There is nothing in the world today which is so occupying the thought of the people as Christian Science, and there is a vital reason why, regardless of all the misunderstanding and misrepresentation, so alive to the subject, people should still insist on knowing the truth about it.

Until within a few years, to the average person religion was something which requiring no thought, no investigation, it was to be accepted simply because this was believed to be the right thing to do, without ever having any well-formed idea as to what it taught; but today, as a result of the increased mental activity that is now apparent in all directions, people are no longer content to accept any thing as true simply because some one has said that it is true. In fact, more and more the demand is for some one that proof shall be given of the truth of every statement made.

People are awakening to the fact that the one great problem in life is that of individual salvation, and the more they think about salvation, the more they are convinced that they want it now, and not some either time or to wait for it until after they have passed through "the valley of the shadow," with its accompanying fear and doubt surrounding that passage, therefore people have turned to the Bible today to see what it is; and the result is an awakening which carried with it the conviction that many things formerly believed to be real, essential, God-created and God-given, are now seen to be mere misconceptions relative to God and what He creates; misconceptions which need to be corrected so that freedom may be attained from that bondage whereby a mistaken belief has held mankind.

Salvation

People want to live, they do not want to die, and yet their whole training has been that the first breath drawn by an infant is the first step toward death and the grave. The teaching has been universal that life is a brief span of existence given man, wherein he may prepare himself to be saved from sin that he may find God on the other side of the valley of the shadow, for with the devil with this eternally in the kingdom of heaven. The cemetery, its tale and its cry for the dead we see, has frequently been referred to as "God's acre," thus indicating that God is responsible for death, that it is a part of His plan of salvation, as service performed by His infinite wisdom through which man must go in order to reach heaven. This teaching has been almost universal, and has been accepted by all as the truth, in spite of the fact that Christ Jesus said in so many words, "If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." When one is brought face to face with this statement, it does not take as instant to realize that a service entirely has been made, in placing the responsibility for death upon God, for we all know that to follow the teachings of the Nazarene brings us to God, and in no way whatever shute us out from access, putting in way of those good and perfect gifts which our Bible tells us come down from above.

Eternal Life

Concerning this we have all fallen into the error of thinking that eternal life will begin for each of us when our eyes close in death, and that thoughtful consideration makes us know that eternal life never began and will never end, that it is the same yesterday, today and forever. The fact that life is and is eternal, and that it never ceased

RAILWAYS ARE READY FOR CROP MOVING

BIG DEMAND WILL BE MET

The crop moving season in the Middle West and in the great grain belts will not find the railroads supplie. According to the fortnightly report of the committee on relations between railroads of the American Railway Association a great supply of surplus box cars already is in the section of the country which will first feel the demand for cars and in which the most serious car shortages occur. The latest report of the committee records that throughout the country there are 158,424 surplus cars, a decrease of 9,572 from the corresponding period in 1908. The largest decrease was in box cars, in which class the surplus was reduced 21,141. The surplus number of this class of cars at the present time is almost 40,000, and half of these are in Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and the Dakotas, known as grain ky, awaiting the call for crop moving purposes.

Before the crops really begin to move a still greater number will be sent West to meet the estimated demand. The report of the committee also shows a gradual increase in rail car business as measured by the demand for cars from April, 1908, when the surplus had reached its low ebb. On April 29, 1908, the number of cars in service exceeded the highest mark in the history of American railroads. At that time 2,000,000 cars were in service, also in cards and on sidetracks. By the following August, when the panic had spent its force, this number was reduced to 253,003. During the last year the situation has been normal, and it is estimated that in the latter months of the year the crop movement will call for one-ninty-ninth idle car in the country.

If John D. Rockefeller lives till his 80th birthday, and he has said he will reach it, he will become the first billionaire in his country. In the last two years Standard Oil, the wonderful money making machine of the Rockefellers, has increased his fortune $100,000,000. The latest approximate accounts or estimates available place his fortune in 1905 at at least $550,000,000. In 1906 it was $600,000,000. This is an increase of $150,000,000. At this ratio the Rockefeller fortune will be worth about $700,000,000 in 1914, still at the same ratio of increase it will be about $850,000,000 and in 1919, when the oil king reaches his 80th year, it will have reached the phenomenal billion dollar mark.

Yesterday, the anniversary of his birthday, and he has said he will celebrate his 80th birthday in Cleveland, in September, 1907. It was estimated by Rockefeller's closest associates that his income was at least $20.25 a minute. Some figures placed it as high as $40 during the same space of time. The same rate would for him, Standard Oil alone, have been treasurer.

FINDS BIBLE NOT ORIGINAL

U. of C. Professor Says Pagan Beliefs Have Aided Christianity.

The Bible is not original with its supposed compilers, according to the opinions expressed by Professor Gerald B Smith of the faculty of the divinity department of the University of Chicago. "The story of creation and the deluge stopped long before the Bible was written," the speaker declared. "Both of these stories were received from the early literature of the Babylonian.

The Israelitan of to-day is acquainted as the theologians of former days was not, with the reality and vitality of non-Christian religion, and in the investigation of the Old Testament religion it has been found that many of its elements were derived from Greek contact with Babylon. The history of Christianity reveals the fact that Christianity has grown and changed as Christianity has met with the secular forces of its history. There are elements in every pagan religion which every Christian is compelled to recognize as truth. The question must be raised whether the contact with oriental paganism, long before the Christian era, is a factor in the near future, will not mean that Christianity will be Christianized and modified as it has been in the past."

TAFT TO URGE POSTAL SAVINGS.

Will Ask Congress to Keep Party's Pledge as Soon as Possible.

President Taft has indicated to talks with callers that in his message to Congress next December he will strongly urge the early establishment of a postal savings bank system. The President realizes that there is strong opposition to such legislation and while he does not propose to rush Congress into an action without due consideration he will ask that the platform declaration of the Republican party in favor of postal banks be fulfilled as speedily as possible. Informal statements of the Senate and House are urging that the matter be left over until the monetary commission made its report and ensuing financial legislation has been disposed of. It even has been said that the reaction between the subjects to be dealt with by the monetary commission and the postal banks is so close that the two should be handled together. President Taft believes this several hundreds of millions would be placed at the disposal of the government through postal savings bank.

FATAL CRASH IN AUTO RACE

Leonard Cole, a mechanic of the Stearns car in the twenty-four hour automobile race at the Brighton Beach track, was killed and Laurent Grimm, the driver of the car, was perhaps fatally injured in an accident. The crash happened just beyond the stands and Cole was thrown from the car and killed instantly. Grimm was thrown out and his skull was fractured.

The fatal accident came a moment after a minor sensation. The score for the first hour had been given, when it was found that the Alco-Kingston came into collision. The latter machine caught fire, and the flames spread in the stands and a thrill, as it appeared to them, had occasioned panic in the house. Announcement was made as quickly as possible that no lives were lost, and the spectators settled down again when the fatal collision occurred. The Stearns car was a complete wreck. Cole was found under the wreckage and was pulled out dead.

The Indianapolis motor speedway commission is held responsible for the deaths of William Tourque and Harry Hilbrand, driver and mechanician of a car thrown off the automobile races in that city recently, in the finding of Coroner Hackwell. Tourque and Hilbrand were among several persons killed and injured during the three days' racing. The coroner in his report says the speedway was not properly built for speed.

ALABAMA TO BE VERY DRY.

The drastic Fuller prohibition bill passed the Alabama legislature with even the possession of liquor except under certain conditions made a felony. It passed senate prove his own innocence before a prohibition district has a chance to be heard. It makes the use of the word saloon a crime, bars the advertisement of intoxicants, bars the signs and signs and beds that even the possession of a Federal liquor license is an absolute proof of guilt in selling intoxicants.

RAIL KING RETURNS.

Harriman Shows Feebleness as He Leaves Liner, but Is Optimistic.

Two pounds lighter than when he left America nearly two months ago, but with his spirit unbroken and breathing a sentiment of optimism, E. H. Harriman came on the Adriatic to take what he quitkanny calls the "after cure." Though Mr. Harriman looked feeble as he left the steamship "pretty well," he showed in every movement and in the expression of the face, that he is a sick, tired man, a disjaunted spirit. He is sallow, almost yellow, and his face seems to be pinched. Dark pouches have formed under his eyes, and the skin of his face is wrinkled. He walks with a stick, but he is not bent, he walks with a firm step, and he carries himself erect. The power is a gift. The man who will go without his power can create it in the man lacking in it.

What a power for good is such a richly gifted personality! Yet he has usually have these brilliant gifts proven not an opportunity, but a temptation, a foil and a snare. The sadder chapter of literature is the career of the sons of genius.

Over against these exceptionally gifted souls our parable presents the benevolent man. He is dull, not prodigiously endowed. What he gets must be by toil of brain and of heart. Yet these inequalities seem to be part of God's plan, and are no doubt seen for a wise purpose. Just as mountains and plains enhance the beauty and promote the life and fruitfulness of nature. As a level earth would mean a good deed, so social life at a level of conditions would mean social stagnation.

Nevertheless, the contrast man feels sorely his disadvantage, and is tempted, as he is prone, to compare ideals and charitably sit down and attempt nothing. This tendency, the great teacher by means to reprove, He shows that God rewards men not in proportion to their gifts, but in the honesty of make of them. To the one who doubles his one talent the very same power is given as to the one who multiplies his ten talents.

Well done, then good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things.

The duty of the person not brilliant is to be at work in his own sphere to the highest point of efficiency. And the same is true of the adviser he is not a disciplinee often more valuable by far than quick natural parts. How often the best school, manured by his very facility, area him left behind! Well is it if he has doubtless trained and applying gospel. And the same fact is illustrated in business life, every sphere of life.

This parable concerns the great majority of us. The conditions which are really of far more importance than the few of genius. For it is by means of the great company of mediocre minds that the chief work and judgment of the world must be established.

"This seems very certain," says Professor Hyslop, "that the world is to be better and richer in the future, not by the magnificent gifts of exceptional minds, lifting great few, but by the patient faithfulness of the one-talent man."

It is by common men and women realizing the importance of common and lowly tasks that the welfare of every home and the general well be. The world can be so far promoted. And, none the less, is it by those that God's wise and blessed purposes in the rare are to be completed.

Let us, then, bear in mind that usefulness, success, happiness and the eternal blessing depend not upon our talents, but upon our use, patient, earnest use of such capacities as we have.

"The race is not to the swift or the battle to the strong," but to the faithful and deserving.

In life we have had an infinity of natural powers and who in spite of all opportunity, have made themselves a help and a blessing who have failed in life, and who shall be the brightest in the kingdom of heaven.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE LIFE OF FAITH.

By Henry F. Cope.

"The just shall live by faith."—Romans, 1., 17.

There can be no faith without freedom. It is not faith to attempt or pretend to believe the things which you are told you must believe. Even to seek to comply is to prove your fear rather than your faith your approximation of some dread consequence attendant on failure to conform. To say, "I believe," but a catastrophe attend the honest denial of such belief is to play the liar and the coward.

It never better to have no faith at all than weakly to submit to the doctrine that the universe lies in the hands of a creature so unjust as to condemn some our eternal damnation unless we subscribe to statements we cannot believe, or blindly to insist on the historic accuracy of incidents which we would discredit in any other relation.

The real difficulty in religion for the average man, however, lies in the credibility of the historic statements of the faiths, not in the logic of their apologiaus; he is even willing to take many such things for granted, the difficulty lies in seeing any particular value or use in such articles of creed and history; he cannot see why their acceptance should be regarded as the most vital thing in life.

At least every man who lives above the brute is religious—that is, he desires to realize some ideal of truth and character ideals that grow within him and will not down. The ideal, deepest need, one often unconscious and seldom formulated, is the desire for the ascendency of ideals which will clarify his ideals, strengthen his resolves, and secure their realization.

He will be satisfied with no faith that falls here or on the other side. He cannot see how the performance of acquiescence on his part with the formal statements of the creeds would aid in this end. Suppose he throws aside every consideration and accepts the Mosaic cosmogony — what light will that throw on the struggle in his own soul between the dust and the divine? In what way will that help him to attain?

The truth is that "the faiths" are of yesterday, while faith is always of to-day and tomorrow. Faith is forward looking; it is confidence that life holds better things farther on; it is the assurance that the future is with God; it is the conviction that the universe does not stand as a mere mockery of our aspirations that burn within us; it is the assurance that the right will prevail, that the universe does not end in a blind alley, that the hopes and aspirations that burn within are true reflections and potentialities of the life of the world of the life that runs through all the creation.

The faith that there was once a perfect man is an empty phrase until it becomes the power that pushes me to be a man, and it is worthless unless the facts of the past become for me the prophecy of the future. The history of the soul has value only as it is a prophecy of what is yet reserved for its promised country. I believe the past whenever the past shows the requements that are necessary to advance from lowlier levels.

The formal statements which men call faiths are commonly but the dead shells that once contained living souls; we can see like photographs of a sunset; the form is there, but the glow, the color, the life has gone from it. Each age has its vision; faiths are crises, looking forward with high hopes. It was the promised land; then come the contractions. We find nothing ideal that has so long as they make its maps. They draw lines and lay on colors; they describe preexisting bound; and limit that which their red eyes of hunger and hope have seen as a living, glowing glory. Thus from the visionaries with their ideals of creeds, our descriptions of yesterday's faith.

That which has been can never be enough for that which is. Religion is to creed as life is to a dead body. It is a works in physiology and anatomy. Religion is the love of life, the faith in its fulfilment and unfolding; it can find aggression only in terms of life, it can secure that life only in terms of spirituality.

It is the height of folly to quarrel over forms, descriptions, and analyses. It is but cowardice to listen to the crude lower voices of life that we must subscribe to their forms, must see through their spectacles, or be lost and undone. It were better to be doomed for loyalty to truth than to be at the cost of compromise with our own souls.

THE ONE-TALENT MAN

By Rev. Junius B. Remsenaydar.

And unto one he gave five talents, to another two and to another one; to every man according to his several ability.—Matthew xxv 15.

This parable treats of the self-evident diversity in the natural gifts of men. Some are two, five, or even, ten talented. They are quick, clever, resourceful. This power is a gift. The faith of the gifted or without the power can create it in the man lacking in it.

What a power for good is such a richly gifted personality! Yet he too usually have these brilliant gifts proven not an opportunity, but a temptation, a foil and a snare. The saddest chapter of literature is the career of the sons of genius.

Political Comment.

Still Reading Them Out.

The last issue of the National Monthly, the new Democratic organ established at Buffalo by Norman Mack, contains a lengthy arraignment of Senator S. D. McEnery of Louisiana.

Senator McEnery voted for protection on sugar, rice, lumber—in all of within his state is deeply interested—as well as a large number of items in which it is not immediately concerned.

For this reason the Democratic National Monthly reads the Louisiana Senator out of the party. All that is necessary to complete the ex-communication complete is the assent of Senator McEnery, the people of Louisiana and a number of other leading democrats over the country.

Now, we have no desire to meddle in these delicate questions which arise in the democratic ranks. However, we have our ideas as to what consistutes a sound policy for a large and powerful Democratic national organ as well as for Democratic national statesmen.

The idea is that the time has come to realize that nothing can be gained and that much can be lost by devoting too much thought and energy to the cultivation of a favorite occupation of a political party of the party. Thus many people by occasion when these distinctions may profitably be employed on. But that occasion is not now.

What Democratic national organs need most, Democrats should look for and pray for and study to attain is not greater proficiency in the art of making a formula of reconciliation and compromise. They should have more time for getting men in the party and less throwing them out.

It is difficult to resist the habit of years. Ever since Mr. Bryan came to the front the principle of proscription has grown and merely on Sometimes, as in the case of Senator McEnery, the period of the Bullitts, the proscription decree has been gradually revoked. Sometimes it has not. But it has always survived all chance and change.

As to whether Senator McEnery is or is not a democrat we express no opinion. It is not necessary. Compared with the important issues that confront the party, this question is of little moment. It is an subjunctive, that a national monthly which begins by a national statement of the right very profitably postpone it to some other and weightier matters are disposed of. This, from present prospects, will take some time.

The motto of Mr. Bryan's Commoner ought to be: "We read them out." The motto of a Democratic journal which aspires to do real service should be, though unexpressed in type, "We get them in."

COMPLETELY GOLD-BRICKED.

Iowa Farmers Will Lose $5,000,000 a Year on Free Hides.

It is settled that the 10 per cent duty which has heretofore been imposed upon cow hides imported into the United States is to be removed.

New England was similarly frantic to secure hides free from duty. New England feels justified now in the carrying on an anti-years campaign for tariff reform. New England undoubtedly, had free hides in mind in the old days when the reform campaign began. The results would seem to indicate that every man before entering upon the reform campaign had a particular purpose which he desired to accomplish. The threshing machine manufacturers wanted to get into Canada under more favorable circumstances. Foss, the Boston manufacturer of patented articles which were cheaper food products from Canada. Yes Clemes, the score builder, his articles being protected by patents, wanted cheaper iron ore. The end in all could be gone through with and a selfish reason found for the work of destruction. Some of the tariff reformers. Our Western friends went into partnership with them and were made tools of. The West left a duty upon hides and gained nothing. It take the place of the same. If the duty were taken off manufactured products of hides the proposition wen't look different. The shoemaker of Massachusetts will complain. Cow-boys have protection on their manufactured products. Our Western friends of the reform establishment years to have been completely gold-bricked. They had nothing to show for their work except that they had made tools of themselves known politically.

The State of Iowa contains almost 5,000,000 head of horned cattle. The removal of the hide duty, we should think, would reduce the price of every steer the amount of one dollar. It is true, free hides will cost the producers of Iowa $5,000,000 per year, but they will be given in return for this sacrifice.

Sunday School LESSON

Subject for September 5, 1909. Paul's third missionary journey—farewells.—Acts, 20-2-38.

Golden Text. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Phil. 4-13.

This lesson, strictly speaking, is not a farewell to the church at Ephesus, but to the elders of the church who came by appointment of the church to bid Paul farewell. There are some very touching passages in St. Paul was returning to Jerusalem from his last missionary journey. He had come from Miletus, a city about fifty miles from Ephesus, and was met by the elders from Ephesus on his way.

Verse 2 "When he had gone over those parts." He had just come from the persecution at Ephesus and went into Macedonia. At this very time he was full of anxiety at the divisions and dissensions in the church at Corinth. When he reached Corinth his borders were increased by the news of the backsliding of the Galatians and Paul's heart was stirred at Corinth and wrote the epistles to the Galatians and Corinthians.

7. "On the first day of the week." It seemed to be a practice of the early Christians to meet from a very early period on the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus. Gradually this Christian day supplanted the Jewish Sabbath, and for a time both days were observed.

18. "Ye know." These follows his farewell address. There are many suitable truths relating to the responsibility of the Christian ministry. Ministers.

"Overseer of the Lord." The preacher is to be servant of Christ. As such he ought to be a pattern of humility. Neither relations nor friends nor wealth nor hesitating to be the servant of the people. "With all humbleness." God has in from a ministry that has on real love and heart invested in the work. "Serving the Lord." I believe it was Luther who declared it took great faith and great prayer to make a good minister.

20. "Keep back nothing." O, what a preacher Paul was, ready to step into his casket at any time with no regrets, for truth held back. "Publicly and from house to house." Pulpit work and house visitation were the characteristics of this gospel minister. When spiritual religion runs low, neglected visiting gets to be among the lost arts.

21. "Testifying." It is as much the minister's duty to testify as it is that of the members. The pulpit ought to be a witness box.

28. "Take heed into yourselves." This is very important advice to teachers and preachers. You must look after your own spiritual nature. "Grievous wolves." Teachers of the members. The pulpit ought to be a witness box.

"Take heed into yourselves." This is very important advice to teachers and preachers. You must look after your own spiritual nature. "Grievous wolves." Teachers of the members. Christianity has been hurt more by false doctrines than by open infidelity.

30. "Of your own selves." The worst of it is that the evil men are men who have done the church the most damage have been hurt by their support from the church and have embroiled their time in quibbling and wrangling about the doctrines of the church. This is as notable today as in Paul's time. It has escaped higher criticism.

31. "Therefore watch." We are commanded to watch against false doctrines. "By the space of three years." He here refers to three years spent in Ephesus, while we have studied about his work in Corinth. "Warn in able to build you up." The word of God is able to build us up and to give us an inheritance among them that are sanctified, by sanctifying us in no other way can we obtain that inheritance.

33. I have coveted no man's gold." Paul was free from the love of the unseen world and there he lays up his treasures.

41. "Those hands have ministered." God intended that those who preach should live by the gospel and that they should be able to give all their time to the ministry of the word. He ordained that the people should support their teachers, in the Paul's case, ministers have to support themselves when they go as pioneers to new and uncultivated fields.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." One of the sayings of Jesus, not found in the gospels, but well said. This being true the man who has a chance to give to another is the favored party of the two. If we saw things in their right light we would long to give rather than to be given to.

36. "He kneeled down and prayed." While the books of the Bible were not confined to any one mode or gait, the Bible prays, yet they usually knelt when they prayed. This is a fitting posture of a suppliant.

37. "Fell on Paul's neck." This is a very pathetic scene and shows the love that existed between Paul and his people. Paul was evidently a very lovable man.

Rev. R. Harvey Lloyd, head of the great Brotherhood of London mission, the largest institution of its kind in the world, is coming to America for the purpose of studying the problems of the Bowery and the slums of New York. Lloyd, during his four he will study social settlements and missions.

The Francis E. Clark, founder and leader of the Christian Endeavor movement, praises the work of newspapers. He states that they educate people, that postmaster because of the murders and scandals they publish, but he approves of this sort of publicity, as he believes publicity tends to drive a way evil.

UNION IS ADVOCATED BY ROCK ISLAND HEAD

"FARMS OUR BEST DEFENSE."

Army and Navy Cost Too Much, He Tells Agriculturists of Oklahoma.

H. P. Yoakum, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Rock Island-Frisco system, speaking before the Oklahoma Farmers' Union at Shawnee, urged the farmers to organize, and believe in organization," he said. "It is the only way to accomplish good results. Talk is a method of organized interests and under proper management the country is better off because of it. When your products leave you they are taken by the railroads. Before you organized. They then go to the manufacturers, who are organized, and when they reach you again is a finished product they come from mercantile organizations. The producers of all this great wealth land wealth producing products respectively the only thing in the finish that is not strongly and concretely organized."

The address was given in a view to convince the farmers that what the country most needs is a chance to expand and develop. He contended that this opportunity will come only with a wise management of the affairs by the government, by cooperation between the farmer and the railroads in common interests in the administration of public affairs. "We should make more farmers and fewer dirty lighting ships," he said. "It is better to grow more farm products and make the prosperous the man who sows and harvests than to build more battleships to protect the idle. A moment is permitted to us on and our country to grow as it should we need not fear war with any country or combination of countries."

"The debt is not our national expenses." Mr. Yoakum suggested, "should be made to reflect economy and not by raising taxes to increase revenue." He declared that he was not speaking against the army and navy, but simply against the growing expense of maintaining them, and it would be better if we had less.

"Regarding government regulation of railroads, I believe it is a great mistake. Regarding government ownership I am not wholly directed. Mr. Yoakum called attention to the history of the government's ownership of transportation facilities—namely, the water ways. The report of the Department of Commerce and Labor shows, he said, that the government had built 4,500 miles of canals, and had given to the Erie Canal, this cost $9,000,000, had been abandoned. "The government has expended approximately $225,000,000 on the improvement of the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and last year the tonnage handled over it was one-third of what was twenty years ago."

He said, "Those hands have ministered." God intended that those who preach should live by the gospel and that they should be able to give all their time to the ministry of the word. He ordained that the people should support their teachers, in the Paul's case, ministers have to support themselves when they go as pioneers to new and uncultivated fields.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." One of the sayings of Jesus, not found in the gospels, but well said. This being true the man who has a chance to give to another is the favored party of the two. If we saw things in their right light we would long to give rather than to be given to.

36. "He kneeled down and prayed." While the books of the Bible were not confined to any one mode or gait, the Bible prays, yet they usually knelt when they prayed. This is a fitting posture of a suppliant.

37. "Fell on Paul's neck." This is a very pathetic scene and shows the love that existed between Paul and his people. Paul was evidently a very lovable man.

Rev. R. Harvey Lloyd, head of the great Brotherhood London mission, the largest institution of its kind in the world, is coming to America for the purpose of studying the problems of the Bowery and the slums of New York. Lloyd, during his four he will study social settlements and missions.

The Francis E. Clark, founder and leader of the Christian Endeavor movement, praises the work of newspapers. He states that they educate people, that postmaster because of the murders and scandals they publish, but he approves of this sort of publicity, as he believes publicity tends to drive a way evil.

Rev. Charles Total Abstinence Society of America, as represented in St. Paul, held a mass meeting, in which the nature of addresses delivered was that the saloon-keeper had no more privilege of the Catholic Church

The Farmer on Top.

Vast as are the productions of the factories and mines, the operations of the big corporations and the traffic of the railroads, all sink into insignificance in comparison with the enormous totals of the farmer's output. The figures of the new wealth produced by the farmers during the year 1909 are almost unbelievable, yet the Agricultural Department vouches for their truthfulness, and it is announced that the production for 1909 will be even greater—in fact, much greater.

The farmer turned out in dairy products alone last year nearly $900,000,000. His hens worked for him to such an extent that eggs and poultry were worth as much as the cotton crop or the hay crop or the wheat crop. He raised corn meal to the value of $1,645,000,000. With such figures to begin with, we are prepared to learn that the farm products of the crop year of 1909 totaled the tremendous amount of $7,778,000,000. As the crops of the current year are said to be almost universally larger than the year before, it would not be surprising if the total for 1909 should prove to be fully eight billions of dollars.

With such enormous productions by the farmers of the country there is no reason to fear that our farms will not always be able to feed and clothe the people. Great as are our productions at present, they can be enormously increased, as our farming methods are still wasteful, and millions of acres of fine farming land are yet unimproved. Intensified farming will in time vastly increase the production per acre of all staple crops.

Despite the tendency of the population to gravitate towards the cities, the farmer still remains the main producer of the national wealth, and will continue to hold that position. With the steady improvement of our transportation systems and the extension of suburban communication, life on the farm will become less isolated and, therefore, more attractive. Improved methods will also make tilling more productive and profitable.

Owing to the great diversity of our climate and the many staple articles that our soil can be made to produce there is no such danger of agricultural disaster which other countries are periodically compelled to face. While one or more crops may occasionally fail there is little chance that all will fail at the same time, hence we have less to fear from crop failures than any other nations. Our vast production of foodstuffs, moreover, makes us practically independent of the outside world. We always have a surplus of necessities to sell to others, but we never need other than luxuries from our neighbors.

Death of a Pioneer.

Deceased, with her husband, located at St. James, Beaver Island, in 1859. She was left a widow in the prime of her womanhood, but continued to maintain her home on the Island. For many years she kept the hotel and postoffice at St. James, and established a reputation for hospitality and generosity, alike kindness to those lodged under her roof. She is mourned by a multitude of friends.

She leaves three children—Will Gibson, of Petoskey, Miss Ida, of Mackinac, and Mrs. W. F. Gill, of Harbor Springs. The funeral and interment was at St. James on Friday, and nearly the entire population of the Island turned out to honor the memory of the good old lady.

Manistique Herald: George Hunt of Lewiston, was in town Saturday and reported intoxicated when he took the 7:10 evening train for home. He got off the train at Westwood or was put off, as he was on the train near the lumber yards adjacent to the depot. When the 8 o'clock fast train south struck him, throwing him a considerable distance, and he struck on his head and shoulders. He was taken to an undertaker's shop at Kalkaska, where he died about midnight. It is reported that a sealed bottle of whiskey was found in his clothing.

"The grape is a coming crop of this region," says George E. Howe, of the Western Michigan Development Bureau. "It comes on the market later than the grapes from the grape belt and stays longer. "Last year, an experiment was tried of shipping a car load of grapes to Seattle. The Michigan fruit came with a rush at a heavy profit, being much superior to the western varieties. I believe that grapes can be grown very profitably here and the more that are grown, the higher will be the price."

The fruit growers of the Grand Traverse Peninsula have formed a company for the purpose of raising funds for the erection of a dock on the west arm of Grand Traverse Bay at the S. S. Walker farm. The purpose is to shorten the haul by boat to Traverse City. A majority of the growers live on the east shore of the west arm, and instead of hauling to Old Mission and shipping from there, half the distance will be saved as the new dock will be but 16 miles from Traverse City and the lay boats can easily make all trains to Chicago the same evening.

Newberry News: The last legislature extended the close season on beaver until Dec. 31, 1912, and created a close season for four years from the first of May until the first of November. Beaver have multiplied so rapidly during the years they have been protected that they are now a nuisance in the woods, damming up streams and flooding timber lands and creating a great deal of damage to standing timber. There should be a bounty paid for the animals rather than given further protection. And why in the name of goodness it is necessary to protect bear passes our understanding, unless it is to furnish jobs for a few more deputies in the state game warden's department.

Central Lake Torch: An automobile party from any territory north of this village landed here Tuesday and of four passengers three landed in the cooler. They were brought up before Justice W. W. Greenman Wednesday morning, and drew fines of $5.00 and cost for two, and $8.00 and cost for one. The smaller fines were paid, but the $8.00 man was taken to the county jail at Bellaire to await the payment of the fine by friends. A young man from Charlevoix was arrested here Saturday night charged with drunkenness. He was detained in the lock-up over Sunday, and Monday morning plead guilty before Justice Greenman and paid fine and costs amounting to $5.25.

Boyne Journal: A warrant was issued this morning by Judge Hammond for the arrest of James Whitley, the North Park ferryman. Chief of Police Beach serves the paper bringing the respondent into court at nine o'clock, where upon his request an adjournment was agreed upon to one o'clock this afternoon when the case is to be tried before a jury demanded by Whitley. The complaining witness is Mrs. Ed. Chase and the charge is drunk and disorderly. The complaint alleges that she was maltreated by the respondent at his home last night while she was visiting his wife. She claims that she was pushed out of their house to the upper story of the block on Lake street and that she was pushed and thrown down stairs and then across the sidewalk into the street. That she was also struck and kicked. It is also alleged that Mr. Whitley was under the influence of liquor at the time. That he had been to Charlevoix yesterday and came home in an intoxicated condition.—[211]

Evidences of the existence at some time of a lost Adalific tribe have been found in some mounds near Grayling, Mich., which are being excavated by Rev. James Savage of Detroit, who is conducting researches in the northern part of the state. Attorney John McCurdy, of Owosso, has just returned from there where he saw the collection already found by Rev. Mr. Savage. In one mound was found chilled copper knives, some spear points and some flint state tablets about 5 by 12 inches in dimensions. On one side of one of these is engraved a Hebrew calendar. On others are representations showing the killing of the ark and the flood at its height, and the entombment, as pictured by the tribe. There are a number of smaller tablets evidently worn as breast charms. Evidences of charcoal in the mounds indicate that the tribe cremated the bodies of its dead.

The carving is something new to archaeologists, and it is the belief of those who have made a long study of archaeology, that the work was done by some Asiatic tribe long ago gone. The collection will be taken to Detroit, in all probability, and placed on exhibition there.

One of the most important deals in railroad circles for a long time is this city, says a Traverse City special, was the purchase today by the Pere Marquette, of the lease on the John E. Ott property, originally the Hannah & Lay sawmill and lumber yard property, which includes five docks in the Grand Traverse bay, with sufficient land adjoining for warehouses, offices and the like. In connection with this move, it is understood that the outright center of the city will be cleared and platted to the river. It is stated that the company will have tracks down on the docks by September 5, and will be ready to handle lumber from boats by that date. In connection with this acquirement of property it is rumored that the Pere Marquette company proposes to put on a line of car ferries from here to Escanaba, to offset the loss which it sustained when the Ann Arbor purchased the Manistique, Marquette & Northern, and cut off the car ferry business from Northport to Manistique. The new ferry line would tap all the timbered regions of the northern peninsula as well as the iron and copper districts and also get in line for the grain and flour traffic from the same sections.

Lieutenant-Colonel Townsend, of United States Engineers at Detroit, has notified Senator Smith that "The Inland Route"—famous throughout Michigan's resort country for its beauty and charm—is better adapted for power than for navigation. This is the result of the river and harbor act passed by the last congress. "I have made a preliminary examination of the waterway popularly known as the "Inland Route," between Cheboygan and Petoskey, Michigan, says the report, "and have reported that while the power companies would probably dispose of their locks at a normal sum, as the tolls they are allowed to charge scarcely pay for the cost of maintainance, their power rights are valuable, and could only be extinguished by the United States at a considerable expense. They supply the city of Cheboygan with light and power and create the principal industries in the town. "I am of the opinion that the waters of the Inland Route are more valuable to the community for power, with such incidental navigation as now exists, than if employed for navigation with the creation of power incidental thereto, that while the moving of logs should be regulated, the use of the various lakes and streams for commercial purposes should not be unduly restricted for the benefit of pleasure craft, and that therefore the improvement of the inland route from Cheboygan to Petoskey is not worthy of being undertaken by the United States."

Our summer resorters are all leaving on account of the commencement of their home schools.

Three Franciscan priests arrived Tuesday, and will remain as guests of Rev. Father Norbert for several days.

Misses Rea Donlevy and Annie O'Malley went to Chicago yesterday. Miss Donlevy will attend school there this winter.

Gus Haase and wife, of Davenport, Iowa, and Carl Hellpenstell, of Rock Island, returned home Tuesday, after six weeks stay on the island.

William Gibson, of Petoskey; Mat Bailey and daughter, of Mackinac and P. F. Gill and wife, of Harbor Springs, St. F. O'Donnell, of Grand Rapids; Mrs. E. Roe, of Harbor Springs; Mrs. John Donlevy, of Chicago, were here this week, in attendance at the funeral of the late Mrs. Julia Gibson.

There will be a marriage ceremony at Holy Cross church Wednesday of this week, (8th,) in which Rev. Father Norbert will be assisted by three priests in the celebration of a solemn high mass. Miss Ida B. Gallagher, daughter of W. J. Gallagher, is the bride, and Sy. Wm. A. Shearl, bookkeeper for the Beaver Island Lumber Co. The young couple leave at once on a short wedding trip.

Night on Bald Mountain.

On a lonely night Alex. Benton, of Fort Edward, N. Y., climed Bald Mountain to the home of a neighbor tortured by Asthma, beat on during him with Dr. King's New Discovery, that had cured himself of asthma. This wonderful medicine soon relieved and quickly cured his neighbor. Later it cured his son's wife of a severe lung trouble. Millions believe its the greatest Throat and Lung cure on earth. Coughs, colds, croup, hemorhages and sore lungs are surely cured by it. Best for hay fever, grip and whooping cough. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

—Mr. Turnbull, the expert accountant, expects to complete the audit of the city books this week or early in the next week.

—The Inn, Belvedere, Hallett and Beach Hotel are still open with a "sprinkling" of guests, but will close early next week.

—Dr. F. C. Warne, the well known East Jordan physician and druggist, died at Lake Geneva, Wis., Monday, of bright's disease.

—Lavinson's store will be closed from Wednesday, Sept. 15, 6 p. m., to Friday, Sept. 17, 6 p. m., on account of Jewish holiday.

—One of the greatest plays ever staged in the Charlevoix Theatre will be W. B. Patton in "The Blockhead," Friday evening of this week. Seats at Chapel's.

—The old lighthouse tender Dahlia recently bought by the N. M. Y. Co., has been partially torn to meet requirements and her name changed to Flora M. Hill.

—Probate Judge J. M. Harris was given a surprise birthday party at his home in Boyne City Friday night. His friends surprised the judge with a handsome leather traveling bag.

—Rd. Chadbourn, of South Haven, was in town one day last week. He had not seen Charlevoix before in twenty six years. He lived here in 1883 and did carpenter work on the old Fox residence and store.

—The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. French, of East Jordan, will be pained to learn of the death, Monday, of their daughter Genevieve, aged about twelve years, following an operation for appendicitis.

—Rev. Dr. E. A. Wright, the Methodist pastor, will leave for Grand Rapids Monday to attend the annual conference. Inasmuch as the church membership is unanimous for Dr. Wright's return to this charge and the assurance of the community feeling about the same way, there is no doubt about his coming back.

—D. S. Payton Monday received from Ithica's stalls a dozen 10x12 farm views taken recently in Norwood and Marion townships that should be placed on exhibition in some public place here before they are sent to Traverse City to be used in the Development Bureau. They will compare with any we have seen, and represent any locality of this great country.

—Patton Friday night, then "The Great Divide."

—E. J. Tuttle, Harry Gelean, Dell Pearsal and Guy Withers went to Grand Rapids Tuesday to take in the West Michigan fair.

—Manager Bridge has made another big hit in booking W. B. Patton in "The Blockhead" for the Charlevoix Theatre Sept. 17th.

—Both hose companies were out Friday on an alarm caused by a fire in Trimmer's smoke house. It was extinguished before any great damage was done.

—R. N. Faulkner arrived from Chicago Saturday and will remain here two months or more to superintend the erection of his new house on Dixon avenue.

—J. W. Cooper, of Chicago, and J. R. Cooper, of Los Angeles, California, are guests of their uncle, Capt. John Heathe. Both are accompanied by their wives.

—The barn of Bert Jones, with all its contents, was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning, partly insured. The Jones farm is in South Arm township, about eight miles south of this city.

—The cemetery board call attention to the fact that there are a large number of delinquents on its books in the matter of improvement and care of lots. The work of improving the cemetery cannot be continued unless lot owners pay up.

—Under the provisions of act 112, laws of 1909, there will be a special county school meeting held at the court house in this city on Thursday evening, Sept. 23. The State Superintendent and Commissioner Milford will be present. All school officers are urged to be present as important matters will be discussed.

—Tuesday evening a quiet wedding occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George Cook on Nichol's avenue. The occasion was the marriage of their daughter Cora to Mr. David Howard of this city. These young people are well known in Charlevoix and have the best wishes of a large circle of friends for their future happiness. Ceremony was performed by Rev. Holden A. Putnam.

—Capt. J. J. Bennett died at the Traverse City insane asylum last Friday. Capt. Bennett was, in his day, one of the best known vessel masters on the lakes, having sailed the vessels in the days of sailing craft. He also held enlisted master's papers for steam vessels. About thirty years ago he came here with the old schooner Watt Sherman and remained here. The old schooner ultimately brought up in the bone yard and Bennett settled down on a little farm in Marion. The poor old skipper was a cripple for many years, and finally was put under restraint as hopelessly insane.

—H. S. Harsha and F. N. Chapel leave this week for Seattle, Wash. They will be joined at Hay shore by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sly. Mr. Chapel will stop off at Minneapolis to visit his sister Winnie, who was at one time a teacher in the Charlevoix schools, while Mr. and Mrs. Sly will visit their daughter, Mrs. Ruth Pennell at the same place. Mr. Harsha will make a short stop at St. Paul to visit relatives. The whole party will stop at Kennewick, where they will visit Mr. Hilliard, H. Sly, who has a ranch at that place. Mr. Chapel will also visit his mother and two sisters at Spokane. They will return to Charlevoix about November 1st.

—Ben Gallagher, a Beaver Island boy, and the son of Neil Gallagher, is now master of a big steel trust steamer running between Buffalo and Duluth.

—The steamship Manitou was in Tuesday afternoon bound north on her annual Soo excursion, with 8 S. S. Chicago excursionists on board. About twenty joined here for the trip.

—The game and fish warden's steamer Chase S. Osborn, was in port over Sunday, proceeding up Grand Traverse Bay Monday evening.

—Improving the real estate transfer of Bridge street frontage from Harsha to Brown last week we neglected to state that the sale was made through the D. M. Gregory agency.

—The tow barge Middlesex, of Ogdensburg, tied up at Charlevoix dock Monday and Tuesday, waiting for her consort. She carried a cargo of 900,000 feet of clear pine lumber from the Howard mill, worth from $70 to $100 per thousand at port of destination.

—The small schooner Fournia, of St. Ignace, went on the rocks at South Point Tuesday night. The tug Taylor released her Wednesday morning, the life saving crew running the tug's line to the vessel. She was leaking quite badly, and will be hauled out here and repaired.

—If, in driving on the sidewalks street of Charlevoix, vehicles would keep the right hand side of the street, much benefit to the street would accrue. It would even up the wear on the street, and the mud holes and low spots in the center of the street would disappear. Where every vehicle takes the middle of the street the surface material cannot fail to be broken and transformed into either dust or mud.

—Concerning the potato pool that was effected at Traverse City recently by which potatoes are to be stored for spring shipment, there are things that can be said. If the farmers can get 40 cents this fall they should sell against the uncertain chance of 50 or 60 next spring. A prominent farmer of the Grand Traverse peninsula has said that potatoes at 40 cents in the fall is the most profitable crop he can raise. Forty cents per bushel for a good crop of potatoes looks better just ahead of a hard winter than a gamble on futures that are uncertain on the wind up of a "corner."

—Hon. L. F. Knowles, of Boyne City, in a recent interview with a Detroit reporter has this to say about the effect of local option in his town. "I don't care what you say about it in other counties, I know that in Charlevoix it is a success. I question if one could get enough signatures to a petition for resubmission. All the stills are running in town. I have 43 houses at Boyne, none of which are empty; no man owes me for rent and before we became dry, tenants owed me all the time from one to six months' rent. Collections are very poor, because there are practically no bills to collect. County prohibition costs me about $250 a year for the reason that for five years I carried the insurance on thirteen saloons, and secured their bonds from bonding companies and made a good thing from it. Business men all over town are pleased with conditions and would hate to see a return to the saloons. Is there any drinking in town? Yes, there is, but it is confined to drinking in the dark. Only one druggist in town sells a bit of liquor and he makes affidavit to me for those sales about eight a week."

THE S S S. 1909-'10.

What is Proposed in the Matter of Economy and Reform.

The steamship Manitou is on her last Chicago-Mackinac trip, and the Sentinel writes to catch a Mackinac Press-report. Taking advantage of this the scribe has had a heart-to-heart talk with Capt. Billy Finnegan, in the privacy of his room, on questions closely akin to the past, present and future of the Shiffless Shipmasters' Society.

In another week "the old man" of the Manitou will be ashore and relieve the pastime of splitting his shiner's wood and packing apples for Winter at a dollar per day, if Wilbur's proposition is accepted. Capt. Billy is number a referee decision following a contested election last fall de facto president of the S. S. S. He virtue of his rank and standing in the Society as president elect. Since the Sentinel scribe induced the president to call a meeting of the Society the last week in September, at the new office of former president Wilbur, ostensibly about amendments to the constitution, but, as a matter of fact, to patch up differences and unfriendliness between certain members—chiefly those of long standing between Capt. Billy Williams and Capt. Jack Campbell.

This personal quarrel, originating in a frolic over the Battle of Manila Bay, and later tied into a blaze by mild winter arguments concerning the relative trials of the Chicago and Beaver Island "runs," has been intensified by a recent warm argument over the Lake Michigan coal rate problem. Capt. Billy, in the heat of argument, "threw up" the fact that two years ago, Capt. Pete left for the Pacific coast practically a dead-beat. In the annual report of 1907 Capt. Pete, the retiring president, who is known to have assumed the functions of secretary and treasurer, was $2.80 short in his accounts. These funds are supposed to have been blown in at Seattle. Moreover, it is charged by Capt. Billy that Capt. Pete has, with malice aforethought, used the authority as president of the board of public works, to raise the water rate on the Beaver Island fire department property. In view of these unpleasant conditions, the last Thursday of September has been designated for an emergency meeting to restore harmony if possible between these two old shipmates.

Already Capt. Geo. Weaver, of the Cummings, has threatened to withdraw from the Society in disgust, and Capt. Jim Gaskill, of the Gay Taylor refuses to pay three years' arrearages of dues because of the unfriendliness between Williams and Campbell. It is hoped that a true regard for the philanthropic objects of the society will finally result in a friendly adjustment of these differences and the entire branch support the betaying pin.

W. B. Patton in His Most Successful Play, "The Blockhead."

The simple way and naturalness of the characters in "The Blockhead" helped along by a clever company, makes a most entertaining play and pleasantly in your memory. In looking over the press notices of the play at Saginaw, has appeared through this part of the state we find no one any more appreciative. W. B. Patton, the peculiar comedian, is the shining star, and as Fred, Henry Blackham Hodlington' he gives a remarkable portrayal of an unusually beautiful character. Fred is in fact a close comedy with a glut of much originality. A play of clean wholesome fun—and the novel way in which it is presented is in a way responsible for at least a part of its big success. The supporting company is far above the average and the scenery and costumes would be hard to excel. Manager Bridge announces the engagement here for one night only, Friday evening, Sept 17th.

HEAVY FROST CAUSES LOSS.

Corn in Some Localities Has Been Almost Totally Destroyed.

A killing frost passed over the central and northern portion of Michigan Wednesday night, doing hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of damage to vegetables and garden truck. At Muskegon the most severe early frost ever experienced in either Muskegon or Oceana Counties and the earliest in forty years was felt. Although slight frosts have quite often been felt a sheet time after Sept. 1, there has never been any heavy frost so early. Corn is now in most localities has been nearly totally destroyed, while potatoes are also heavily hit. Garden produce was damaged seriously, and figures now on hand show the total loss in Muskegon and Oceana Counties to be at least $100,000. Whitehall, Montague and Hart also report heavy damage. The mercury went down to 30 degrees.

At Grand Haven the mercury fell to 28 degrees, and large quantities of tomatoes, beans, and other vegetables were destroyed. Vassar reports a heavy loss: frost in that section which rolled great quantities of beans, while at Flint potatoes, corn and buckwheat were damaged. The big chemnber crop was totally destroyed and many farmers will lose heavily on this score, as they depended almost entirely upon it.

Extensive damage was done to the tobacco crop of Western Wisconsin by frosts. In one farm in the Genoa, Vernon, and Monroe Counties, the entire of 35 acres was nearly in that state, the loss is total.

Heavy frost caused much fear that corn in the Indiana lowlands was damaged. Vegetation was almost frozen and garden products rose in price to-day.

SWEPT BY A WALL OF WATER.

Flood Near Rawhide, Nev., Destroys 130 Buildings and Six Lives.

Sunshine Town, a settlement just south of Rawhide, Nev., was swept by a 10-foot wall of water following a cloudburst in the mountains Sunday and 130 buildings were destroyed. It is reported that two women and four children are missing. The cloud broke on the summit of the low hills north of the camp and in a few moments water was pouring down the slope.

Several structures were torn from their foundations and carried down the street, while the crash of falling buildings was covered with furniture, sandstone and debris of all kinds. Gathering force as it poured down the channel the water swept into and over Sunshine Town. In two minutes it was less than an hour it crashed into the structures. Before the wave had passed 100 persons were homeless and their property was heaped in the basin at the foot of National hill.

DR. COOK IS WINNER IN THE ARCTIC QUEST

NORTH POLE IS DISCOVERED

START MADE IN SUMMER OF 1907

Dr. Frederick Albert Cook, the American explorer, reached the north pole April 21, 1908, according to a telegram received at the colonial office in Copenhagen from Lerwik, Norway.

Unless the eskimos lie, unless Cook has been the victim of polar madness, unless he has perpetrated upon the world the biggest canard of a generation, the search for the north pole has ended in a manner as dramatic as it was unexpected. Almost simultaneously, by any great scientific association, his departure unannounced and unpublished, five years ago Frederick A. Cook entered the awful arctic wastes. Unheard and unannounced, he has returned to rekindle the spirit of adventure which civilization after 4,000 years cannot destroy. No capitals of Europe, no financier, no famous scholar, no of scientific renown, gave him any extract he took up exploration. When 29 years old he made his first journey to the north as a member of one of Peary's expeditions. The expedition lasted several other trips, gathering fame each time among scientists in many countries. Dr. Cook's home is in Brooklyn.

HORSE DRAGS HIM TO DEATH.

John Klug, a young farmer, was killed by a Union Pacific fyer near Central City, Neb., in all unusual way. He was hauling a horse across the tracks with the halter wrapped around his arm. The animal balked on the track and although Brooks was safely across he was dragged back and under the wheels when the engine struck the horse.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Boyne Journal: Postmaster Newville is in receipt of the glad news that Boyne City will have free mail delivery. The department has passed upon the report of the inspector who was here recently and the result is as announced. December first is the date set for its establishment and there will be three carriers at first with a substitute.

The Caldwell & Loudon wagon works at Traverse City, which recently burned, are installing machinery and as soon as possible the wheels will again be started to get out orders already on hand.

Charlevoix County Fair occurs at East Jordan Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 28, 29 and 30, and preparations are being made to make it the best ever. $225 has been hung up for the horse races of Thursday and Friday.

The Grand Traverse region is destined to be the greatest fruit district in the country" said Superintendent Theodore Bissel of the Pere Marquette railroad lately. "I spent a couple of days up there last week and the lowest estimate I heard of the apple crop was 150,000 barrels from the peninsula alone. The peninsula is only a little neck of land extending up the bay. It is a very small part of the district and if the peninsula can produce 150,000 barrels it can be imagined what the rest of that region will do."

Central Lake township, as far as solicited has given about 170 signatures for the submission of the local option question, to about eighty refusals. Banks we are informed, is the banner township of the county, having 53 signatures and but a few refusals to sign the petition.

W. T. Campbell, who for the past eleven months has been editor-manager of the Manistique Courier-Record, has resigned his position there and goes to Stambaugh, near Iron River, where he has a similar position.

The Central Lake Improvement league is a new organization at Central Lake for the purpose of advertising the advantages of Antrim county, and the literature they are sending out contains some very convincing statements about the value of the crops raised in that section.

It is estimated that the population of Antrim county has gained about 17 per cent. since the last census was taken. In that time the value of farm products has increased nearly eighty per cent. Since the census of 1890 the gain in population has been about forty per cent. The value of farm products in those sixteen years has more than trebled.

Mrs. H. E. Golden of the peninsula, who is the pioneer exhibitor of Grand Traverse fruit at Michigan state fairs, is engaged now in the preparation of an exhibit that will eclipse anything that has ever been shown from Grand Traverse county. Mrs. Golden is preparing exhibits of fine apples, pears, plums, grapes, quinces, vegetables and seeds from the peninsula that will doubtless excel anything in the West Michigan state fair. Mrs. Golden has conducted the peninsula and old Mission exhibits at the West Michigan fair for the past fifteen years. This year's exhibit will be something exceptionally creditable. The fruit on the peninsula this year is the finest in the history of that section of the state, and inasmuch as Mrs. Golden has taken first premiums for several years and that past two years sweepstake premiums, it is reasonable to suppose that she will again receive numerous awards of merit.

The value of good facilities for transportation as a developing force is well known. Highways do more than other things toward opening the country to the settler. They furnish the way for him to enter the region, and the way for him to send his produce to the overall markets. The argument is equally good for steel highways and dirt wagon roads. Western Michigan is well supplied with transportation routes. There are within the district, 1,700 steam railway systems with 1,640 miles of main track and over two hundred stations. There are two electric railway lines with 75 miles of track and 22 regular stations. As the back area of western Michigan is but 9,812 square miles and the total main track of railway mileage is 1,719, there is one mile of main track for every 5.7 square miles of land surface. There is not a point in the entire district that is over 12 miles from a railroad track.

Elk Rapids Progress: A pretty big affair is the town council and operated by the W. H. White company. It is housed about a dozen miles from the city in a southeasterly direction. Four thousand acres are in the piece and 600 acres are cleared and under cultivation. The company make a specialty of raising stock and large acres are kept which, however, never go to market for the reason that it is all consumed at the lumber camps owned by them. Every spring hundreds of western cattle are brought in from Chicago by the company's own boats and they are pastured on the farm during the summer and fattened for use in the winter. There is always a herd of from two hundred to five hundred head. Thirty roles of oxen are in pasture now being fitted for the work in the woods next winter. A large drove of horses is also on the farm, running in pastures and these are all for use in the company's operations in the lumber woods.

Petoskey Record:—At a supper held in Charlevoix last week Monday evening, the Hon. Lorenzo E. Knowles of Boyne City was formerly put in the field as a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator in the primary election next summer, to succeed Senator Frederick R. Ming, of Charlevoix. Mr. Knowles was one of the prominent members of the state constitutional convention, and is one of the most popular and strong republican leaders of Charlevoix county. It is early to nominate a candidate for the primary election of next summer, but Charlevoix county republicans are an early riding population, and they would probably nominate Mr. Knowles just the same no matter how long they might study the situation. If it looked at all probable that Charlevoix county can get there, having a habit of putting Charlevoix's best foot forward at the very first step. Senator Ming is himself a pretty formidable getthere body with a big home backing, and this district seems certain to be a genuine wide awake one next summer.

Intellectual Competition.

Where intellectual vitality is pervasive, intellectual rivalry is natural and inevitable. To induce intellectual competition among college men and to make real mental endeavor a ground of coveted distinction, would be a superfluous task if the college were disharging its legitimate functions.—New York Evening Post.

Laugh and Banish Sorrow.

Shakspeare says: "A light heart lives long." It serves to weighing heavily and pressing you down, make no effort to shake it off. Try laughing and you will find it will tremble at the sound and finally disappear, for sorrow and laughter have no affinity; the one hates the other.

Note.

A correspondent writes us to inquire where the cows originate that he is a successful author, but a "more in every back." He's too modest. No mere back could murder things the way he does. He's a literary assassin.—Exchange.

Little Ones.

"That boy of mine doesn't earn all his salt." exclaimed Farmer Dumkins indignantly, when he returned from holding down a cheese-box at the grocery. "I told him to milk the cows, slop the pigs, weed the onions, hoe up the sheep, feed the horses, cut the kindling wood, draw the water and get the meat for breakfast, an' here the good-for-nothin' rascal has finished up and gone to bed without waiting to put my horse in the stable!"

Original "Biscuit."

"Biscuit" was until the eighteenth century spelled "bisket," as still pronounced, the current spelling being merely a senseless adoption of the modern French spelling without its pronunciation. "Bisket" originally meant a twice-baked bread of the kind alluded to by Shakespeare in "As You Like It," where the melancholy Jacques informs the duke that his "brain is as dry as the remainder biscket after a voyage."

Measuring Brains.

The cephalic index of old Athenians was a wee, wee bit better than ours. Squibbs force means volume of brain. It is found by filling a skull with peas and then measuring them. Ancient Athenians have a few peas on us. The Greeks never lasted bloodshed like the Thousand and Juns of us moderns.—New York Post.

Hollyhocks.

The hollyhock resembles a tall nodding maiden. The air of aloofness and aristocratic sufficiency veils beauty and charm. Friends have had fits of fragrant hollyhocks, but I have yet to meet one, while knowing full well that with a generous supply of honey and weevil there should be perfume hidden deep in the heart of the flower.

Comment by Bachelor Cycle.

"Don't propose to a girl until you have known her for a year," says a German philosopher. Short of this advice probably lies in the fact that a woman who wants that long is in danger of being married.—Exchange.

Her Discovery.

A fair maid from the city saw a queer thing on a tree; she said: "Oh, ain't it pretty! Whatever can it be?" With a parasol she poked it to her friend's edification, for she it proved to be a hornet's habitation.

In Some Cases, Probably.

In some cases matrimony might be compared to autumn, which is preceded by much warmth and followed with frost and storm.—Exchange.

Offense Unpardonable.

If any woman were to hang a jacket for stealing her picture, although it were set in gold, it would be a new case in law; but if he carried off the setting and left the portrait I would not answer for his safety.—Colton.

In Memoriam.

We, your committee, appointed to draft resolutions of respect in memory of our dear friend and sister, departed, submit the following:

No one beats the door that opens wide; When thy door is open our call, Soft as honeyed leaves of rose

It is with deep sorrow we announce the very sudden death of Lady Alice McCarthy, who without a moment's warning was called Home August 12, 1909.

"God's finger touched her and she slept." In those hallowed moments when the white winged messenger has passed the guarded doors of our fond room and beneath the golden chain, there comes to us these words of consolation—"I am the Resurrection and the Life, whosoever liveth on Me shall never die." Whereas, we hold our deceased sister in loving remembrance for her sterling traits of character and unassuming manner, be it

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and grief stricken family and may the Heavenly Father, who cannot err in His great love, bind up their broken hearts and give them strength to say "Thy will be done."

Resolved, That our charter be draped for thirty days, that these resolutions be spread on record, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and the local papers for publication.

Clara Todd, Committee.

Ants' Ears.

Strange as it may seem, each ant has at least six ears. Aside from this much plenty of ears, they are in doubt as to just about the number they imagine they have. The sensitive ears that feel that they will detect the impact of a small blanket dropped on a table from a height of twelve inches will almost feel that a man on an artificial nest placed at the other end of the table.—St. Nicholas.

Its Own Pure Food Law.

There was no chance for complaint in the old-fashioned salt cod. A butcher was the handiest weapon for shopping off a supply, which was soaked overnight. The fish was sold while fresh from the briny and it was dried in the open air.—Boston Post.

Willing to Be Fair.

"Think wife't than for you behind the door, but of you are ready it will meet you half way or my than."

Education Capital and Interest.

Watercress for Dyspepsia.

"What the poor man eat is have," said the man just back from London. "In a watercress market. Granted cure for all kinds of stomach troubles you ever saw. Over there they have a regular place where they sell Watercress early in the morning. I've seen all kinds of people buy potfuls of watercress and eat it with a lot of bread right on the spot. Guess they say it is an infallible cure for any stomach ailment."—New York Sun.

Some Criticism.

"I'm glad my children are all boys," said the mother of seven young boys with "because why?" queried the principal friend. "Because none of them is doomed to grow up and marry a man like their dad," she answered with a sigh.

THE WHAT-DO-YOU-THINK.

Wonderful Animal That Can Be Made in the Nursery.

Look at the funny animal in the picture. Can you guess how he is manufactured? The performer, who should have black kid gloves on, places on his head a paper cap worked up with the aid of the nursery paint box into a rough semblance of an animal's head. This being securely fastened on, he goes down on his hands and knees and a shaggy fur rug is thrown over him and secured round his neck, when the animal is complete.

When all is in readiness the exhibitor laughs in proper showman style "Ladies and gentlemen, I have the pleasure of exhibiting to your notice the celebrated 'What-do-you-think' or giant mule eater. You have all probably heard of the ass eater. This is, as you will readily perceive, a member of the same family, but much, much more. Observe feet from the tip of his snout to the end of his tail, eight feet back again, five feet around the small of his waist and his four feet of his own, measuring twenty-four in all, to his natural state he lives chiefly on thistles, tin and street pickings, but in captivity it is found that so rich a diet has a tendency to make him stout, and he is now fed exclusively on old champagne corks and back numbers of the daily paper. His voice, which you may perhaps have an opportunity of hearing (here the 'what-do-you-think' brays dismally), is in the key of B flat and is greatly admired. Perhaps you would like to see him bray in it, and when they have heard it they seem to say that they never heard anything like it before."—Philadelphia Ledger.

MODERN METHODS

WESTERN MICHIGAN DEVELOPMENT BUREAU TO PUSH PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The people of eleven counties in Michigan are planning their faith in the Western Michigan Development Bureau. They expect to do great things for the northwestern part of the lower peninsula. It must be admitted, however, that the bureau has strong competitors, that other regions have given it a good start, and that it will have to work hard to make headway. Nevertheless, the bureau has strong support from the other counties in other parts of the state, and it has strong in that competition. Tourists in passing by in just as fast as they can.

"Hardly any part of our country has secured the continuous public spirit which seems to make Kalamazoo or city boom something really substantial." Now Kansas City, Los Angeles, Seattle, the Pacific Coast, the Gulf Coast, and the inland South have used publicity in manufacture and development and have given attention to their individual advantages.

"Our inland Empire is manifested but, as would be natural with an eastern folk, but it is strictly a case of the best first, after all.

"Spokane, Washington, is the capital and source of supply of the Inland Empire. They call it the best eastern Washington. The Inland Empire includes a land area not one-fourth larger than Michigan, but it contains the equivalent of 10,000 square miles of territory Washington, northeastern Oregon, and northwestern Idaho, and reaches over a little more than two degrees of latitude, and includes British Columbia. The publicity work has been done with the support of the Chamber of Commerce and the Inland Club. About 10,000 were spent in 1908. They had 3,000 inquiries, placed about 23,000 settlers in the empire, and added about two million dollars to the district. Bank clearings increased $17,000,000, manufacturing output increased 10,000,000; 8,000 acres of land were added to the irrigated lands, 300 miles of railroad were built, and in developing some distinct industry of the empire, apple raising, 1,000,000 trees were set out. Further to emphasize this apple industry, the National apple Show was incorporated with $100,000 capital, and the first show last December, was most successful. The Inland Empire is expected to spend $100,000 to advertise itself this year. Twenty-five cities and twenty towns have associated themselves in the League of Spokane Inland Commercial Clubs, with headquarters at Spokane, and are conducting an extensive campaign.

"In the Northwest coast it is the Seattle and Puyallup Valley, in southwestern Seattle issued building permits for $17,000,000 in 1907, $12,000,000 in 1908 being between 8 and 9 per cent of the total. In 1907 in Portland, the Oregon Development League was formed, and it is made up of 82 associations, including organizations, with 1015 secretaries in fifty cities, which annually have employed, and a highly competent has employed in India induced out Mr. Tom Richardson, the manager of the Portland Commercial Club, and the through advertising campaign had been attracted to the state of Oregon and had increased the state of dairy production some one hundred million—from $7,000,000 to $15,000,000 in the past five years. In 1908 Portland's annual permits represented a value of $18,115,950, giving it rank as the fourth American city in building in that year.

"Reaching up into Canada, perhaps the most notable success in city advertising is found. Winnipeg, through its Development and Industrial Bureau, has created an advertising campaign for two years, in that time the bureau used 32,772 lines of advertising, much of it in magazines. They report 19,371 inquiries, communications; 3,874 actual requests for information from manufacturers; 33 manufacturing establishments brought to Winnipeg, and 10 industrial and commercial companies incorporated, with total capital of $12,616,000. Winnipeg's bank clearings increased over eighty million dollars, one Canadian city.

"Vancouver joined it C., also got the spirit, and spent $4,000 for publicity, and the result was that the city did spend $12,000.

"Coming back to our own country we find the following:

"The Seattle has been an energetic advertiser. It has been said that more people have been advertised in Seattle than in any other city and in any other state in the Union. Advertising is the same principle of Indian. They received 22,000 inquiries, and the result was that eleven strong industries the first year, and $2,000,000 worth of land within a radius of twenty-five miles of Dallas, Texas, and the Dallas Chamber of Commerce attracted by the advertising, created branch banks in the city. Manufacturers are still below the line in the matter of publicity, and Houston, Texas, has a campaign now country in magazines and newspapers. The Matacordia water district in Texas cities which are using publicity. Texas cities which are using publicity are Fort Worth, San Antonio and Galveston.

"In the state of Maine, seeing the advantages of its wonderful coast line and its enormous harvest of potatoes and apples, has also taken notice of the value of publicity and is to be inaugurate a bank. A net return of $1,415 an acre a year, ought to be good enough for anybody. Suppose a man had 40 acres of such Alexandria land. His net profits for the season would have been $56,600.

"The moral to all this is that there is big money to be made in intelligent fruit growing in the Grand Traverse region, conclude the Eagle, and the quicker that we set our lands to producing fruit the quicker the Traverse City will become the commercial center and one of the most prosperous and progressive sections of the entire state.

"Every thoughtful man in western Michigan knows that the conclusions of The Eagle about the Grand Traverse region are equally applicable to this entire portion of the state. In this big world outside a contrary impression has grown up, and to correct this error and to spread abroad a knowledge of the real opportunities to be found here is the object of the Western Michigan Development Bureau. The bureau deserves the support of every man who wishes to see western Michigan grow.

HIS VOCABULARY.

It Was Real Literary, According to the Wily Stenographer.

The beautiful typewriter girl puffed out her golden pompadour nervously, says the Philadelphia Bulletin. "My! I'm burning, Mr. Meer—excuse me, Wellington—my speed 'll increase 20 to 30 per cent anyhow."

Broker Wellington frowned. The girl had taken his dictation slowly and in a stern, sheptical voice he said, "Here so?"

"It's your new vocabulary that puzzles me," she explained. "I had Mr. Meer's vocabulary down pat and his contents noted, 'the same'—he only says that one word. Why, he fairly lay awake warmed the man like a sunbeam. "But you, sir, say a real literary style. Why, he schedule 'our best attention,' 'slumpy' 'bullish,' 'hypothecated' and 'sorry to be bothered.' I'm sad of course I can't rattle them off fast at first, but I'll get right along, tell day after tomorrow. Then you'll see."

The business men have different vocabularies that their stenographers must get accustomed to, of course. A lawyer

"Yes, sir, some large, some small. Again her smile fastened him. "Your's is larger than most, I should say it has thirty or forty words larger. Real literary, I call it."

"Miss Hodkins, if there's—er—any supplies you need all you've got to do is ask," said the literary broker fatly and coyly.

Early Psychotherapy.

In the Epistle of James we find the earliest Christian rule of psychotherapy. It was adopted by the early church and for many centuries was a vital faith and practice in the Christian church in all its branches. It is still a rule of conduct in some of the older churches, and still there are those who believe that God has lapsed begin to plead for its revival and for the assumption by the church of what we called its legitimate powers. St. James says: "Is any man among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up. And if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him."—Boston Transcript.

Sand Hill Cucumbers. Perhaps most forward of all the cucumbers in the state are those of Mr. Sand Hill, who has a patch of cucumbers which he is growing for the Chicago market. Mr. Sand Hill has found that the cucumbers are not blighted by the fungus which is so destructive to cucumbers in other parts of the state. Mr. Sand Hill says that he

Having studied industriously onward for a few years, he was discovered by a few people, who had followed him, that his self-denial, and sacrifice, and turning his back upon the world and its pleasures, could be only to yield up to pressure him. Let us leave the matter to the reader, and let us remember the old proverbs, "some solid, old sense." "Good wine needs no bush."

He possessed through the earthquake, and through the storm, and through the ground and fire and equally immobile of mention. Good and evil, these passing notes such other's cross. He was nothing and they was old. That brief glance was freighted with destiny. It was a brief glance, but it takes place between them, although they had not spoken, for the first time in a lifetime of years.

What was the meaning of this glance? What was the emotion that gave it birth, or what did it know? It told us each story. To their dying day, each knew that the other was remembered that glance with rapture—yet with pain.

Pained, yet pleasure, intensely and anxiously. What the meaning of this strange and sudden glance? Did it reveal hope?

"I said there is a light that lightens every man that cometh into the world."

"And what did you see in the quick. There is only a negative?

"I saw a light, I saw light that shines from the soul itself and that is the light of a life, which shows it walks in it, walks safely. He need no guide."

"Never? I do not understand. It is beautiful, but it does not seem natural."

"Dupette" called her husband, impatiently.

She turned away, and David watched her glorious form, and her lithe, graceful, impressive gait, and lingering, "I am coming, Dupette." Dupette, the idiot, blind, and upon that natural but unnatural instinct which doubtless natural. Something seemed to draw him after her. Dupette, the idiot, blind, idiot, and returned to his lamp.

But it was in a strangely altered world that he went to its glow, but now blended with shadows and sighs, or so fancied, the sounds of the inner world, as it was his nature and habit to do, to be one with the world, the element had taken place.

"Dupette" which he had always been able to expel from his mind before, like red with flattered mania, and again tasks the wisdom of his soul, that this he unpeopled himself, and sate to discover that at the very moment where he regretted that he had been tempted of all, he also regretted that he had not been tempted.

All day long his agitated spirit alternated between sensuous joy and remorse, elevated such a smooth in his soul. He was conscious of a new life, but he could not whether he had conquered or been defeated.

He heard again the mocking laughter of the stock pull the singing words of his central philosophy made more real to him. Where was the course which had said was true, there? Much of his life had already passed, and he had not as yet tested the only philosophy, which he had accepted as genuine, solution, lower life felt that he had been described and defeated.

A contempt for his old life and its surroundings and associations, he felt, yet in despite the simple country people, among whom he had grown up, and those provincial ideas which they cherished in the world, which they stagnated.

During a long time he had been the current of his life, which he had been in a state of thoughts, which he had been in a state of thoughts, which he had been in a state of thoughts

THE JUVENILE COURT

On July 20th a party of boys employed as caddies on the golf grounds in the city, for some real or fancied grievance, overturned the caddy house damaging it to such an extent that it had to be rebuilt. The Golf association had presumed to this suffered the loss of another building on the same grounds, destroyed by boys, though, probably none of the boys involved in the act of July 20th were concerned in the first destruction: but the officers of the association felt that they were entitled to protection from malicious or mischievous destruction of the property of the association and July 24th filed a complaint against three boys, whose names they had ascertained, with the police court of the City of Charlevoix, and on examination, it appeared that the boys were under the age of seventeen years and that therefore the Police Justice had no jurisdiction and acting under the provisions of the juvenile court law, transferred the causes to the juvenile court.

The juvenile court thereupon notified the county agent, who investigated the matter and reported nineteen boys as having participated in the act. One of these boys so reported to the juvenile court was over the age of seventeen years and his case was reported to the police court of the city. Of the others, thirteen upon being notified, came into the juvenile court and admitted their participation in the wrongful act; three admitted being there but denied any participation in the act and one was excused as being too young to be responsible. One boy had left the city and has not yet reported.

Section five of the juvenile court law provides that upon finding of delinquencies, the court may impose a fine; or if the offense be trespass, the court may require the damage to be made good. If the offense be larceny the stolen property be returned or the court may require it to be paid for by the child, if he is capable of earning the money.

The juvenile court, acting upon the provisions of the above section, caused an examination to be made of the damage done in dollars and cents and from such examination determined that the damage done was at least forty dollars and explained to the boys interested the nature of their offense and that by the payment of two dollars apiece, substantial reparation would be made for the damage done and to the credit of the boys, it may be said that ten of them promptly responded and that more would have done so promptly had it not been for the mistaken parents and others in encouraging them to avoid making reparation for their part and also in encouraging them in breaking their appointments with the court and later in answer to a summons issued from court appeared, and now esteem of them have made reparation.

It is a matter of regret that parents and others, some of whom have the prestige of holding appointments as city officials encourage boys in wilfully destroying the property of others, and by their own falsehoods and prejudicial statements also encourage delegation upon the part of the boys that the law makes it the duty of the court to help.

For instance, one parent comes to the court and says that the caddy house blew down after this number of boys had assisted the court that they love it down. A city official says that it was an attempt upon the part of the officers and the court to take money from poor boys for rich corporations, and other parents said that the purpose of taking the money from the boys was to turn it over to the officers of the court as graft. The money collected amounts to $52 and has been turned over to the treasurer of the association and his receipt therefore taken less the amount of costs which was $1.35 paid to "Gam Driggett, and made necessary only by the acts above.

Ordinarily the court would pay no attention to these criticisms in a public way, and the excuse for doing so this time is that people and officers indulging themselves with statements prejudiced and known to be untrue hamper the court in that work that it is created to do, and that we're in first to ameliorate the condition of dependent and neglected children and to do the best thing for the good of the children thus found delinquent.

YANKEE WIT.

Lincoln Said He Always Admired and Coveted It.

"Yankee wit was mentioned at one of the sittings, and Lincoln said, 'That is something I always admired and coveted.' Some one said, 'Why, you certainly have the credit of possessing it in large measure.' 'No,' said Lincoln, 'not the genuine. I don't remember that I ever got credit for it but once.' Then he told how, hurrying once through a courtroom, he was ordered by the judge to defend a prisoner accused of assault and battery. A witness was just testifying that the complainant had been fought all over a field. On cross examination, said Lincoln, I asked him, 'How large was that field—twenty acres?' 'No,' he replied. 'Ten acres?' 'No.' 'Were there two acres?' I persisted. 'Yes, just about two,' he agreed. 'And you saw him fight this man all over the field?' pointing to the prisoner. 'Yes, sir.' 'Well, sir,' I said, 'did you ever see a fight before that turned out so little to the acre?' The witness admitted, with a grin, that he had not, the judge smiled, and the jury acquitted. So, saying that as this crop was so poor it did not seem worth further cultivation, I submitted the case. Some of my friends said it was Yankee wit, but that was the only time I ever got credit for it. I wish I had it."—McClure's Magazine.

What the censor cannot do is to give a certificate of approval to the public, and unless the public approves his license is of no value at all. TO POOL POTATOES

A Traverse City special of the 8th says: Three hundred potato raisers of Michigan at a meeting held here this afternoon agreed to pool their crop and hold it until the price agreed upon is reached. A committee was appointed to fix the minimum price and they will report in the morning. The meeting was called to order by Walter E. Grettick, state president of the Farmers' Society of Equity, who made no address, but introduced J. A. Everitt of Indianapolis, national president of the Farmers' Society of Equity and founder of the American Society of Equity. Mr. Everett outlined the equity plan as devised by himself, telling of the success the society was making and its work in "training." The idea of this week grew the Farmers' Society of Equity, with which Michigan is allied. His plan in brief amounts into the pockets of Michigan potato raisers was for each raiser to pledge himself to peel his crop. This pool will be graded and the exact number of bushels available of each grade will be reported to the state union. The potatoes are to be stored in warehouses owned and controlled by county unions. The state union is to be the selling agent and buyers will deal directly with that, no sales being made until the price agreed upon has been reached. All orders will be divided among the counties in proportion to the potatoes in storage. The entire cost of selling, etc., is to be assessed to growers in the pool. If any potatoes are left at the end of the season the loss is to be shared by all. The label to be used by the society is to be a guarantee that No. 1 potatoes are No. 1. Any grower needing money does not have to withdraw his potatoes, but can borrow it on a warehouse receipt.

The growers favored this plan and appointed a committee consisting of James Greason, Kalkaska county, William Bennett, Antrim; E. W. Van Fleet, Oceola; D. C. King, Leelanau, and James Hoover, Charlevoix, to arrange the details. A committee consisting of William Dennison, Leelanau; H. H. Pratt, Grand Traverse; A. J. Albright, Grand Traverse; W. O. Street, Benzie, and E. M. Redman, Manistee, was appointed to fix the minimum price at which the crop will be sold.

Another meeting will be held in the morning, when the committees will report. According to reports made this afternoon, Michigan potato crop is much less than last year's. The drouth and early frosts have done much damage and in many localities potatoes have not grown at all in the last two weeks. Promising plants have been pulled up, disclosing no potatoes on the roots. Nineteen counties were represented.

—Several of the finest Charlevoix cottages have been leased again for next summer by prominent resort people, several of whom yet remain to enjoy our beautiful autumn weather. Several families will remain well into October. All new comers this year, and there are many, express their admiration for Charlevoix and will come again, bringing others with them.

—Outside of Mackinac, Charlevoix has the largest summer tourist facilities of any Northern Michigan resort town, yet the fact is patent that another summer house could be filled. And another fact has been proven. Residences for summer rental are profitable investments. The demand for cottages in late view localities exceeds the supply,—in fact modern residences on attractive streets anywhere in Charlevoix are in demand.

—Peaches are coming from up the shore in special consignments, and boats are arriving with tons of the luscious fruit. The fact that Charlevoix county has peaches of her own has a tendency to keep prices down. This is emphatically a peach year, and everyone who has a few trees should be within the reach of all. And applies:—well, there is no case so poor that cannot eat vegetable soup and red apples every evening the coming winter.

—Art. Wait has conditionally resigned his position as miller at the Argo flouring mill, and conditionally accepted a more lucrative position in a Manistee mill. He left Monday to try it two weeks, and will remain if satisfied with conditions; otherwise he will return here—the place being held open for that period. We shall not barter any ill will against Mr. Wait, but it is a mean trick to leave Charlevoix for the matter of a few hundred dollars a year raise of salary. It worth $1,000 per annum to be permitted to live in Charlevoix.

—The U. S. lighthouse engineer's steamer Hyacinth was in port again Friday night and sealed.

—Probably the greatest dramatic attraction of the season, at Charlevoix Theatre Friday evening, of this week. —"The Great Divide."

—Charlevoix Pomona Grange will meet with Pine Lake Grange, Boyne City, Oct. 14th. Grand Master Hull is expected to be present.

—Miss Lous Stiles, of this city, brought away from the Emmet county fair, four first prizes and one second prize on oil paintings.

—Realizing that quick and easy transit is an evidence of prosperity, the Block creamery today receives a fine auto-truck with which to gather milk and cream in the country.

—Mrs. Ben. Holmes, of Mississippi, who has been spending the summer with her father, Robert O'Neill, and her grandfather, Capt. Harrison Bergan, returned to her home Thursday.

—The secretary's job office is this fall better equipped than ever for doing plain and fine work. Our stock covers a wide range in variety and quality and our type is fully up to date in style. Call in and see samples.

—To-day, (Thursday) the editor goes to the country as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Mills, of Marion, not among the magnificent fields of that magnificent township, of which he will have something to say next week.

—A Texas editor refuses to publish obituary notices of people who, while living, failed to advertise for his paper, and gives this pointed reason: "Persons who do not take this home paper are dead anyway, and their passing away has no news value."

—The work of paving Michigan and Petoskey avenues was begun Tuesday morning, with Civil Engineer W. H. Caldwell, of Traverse City, in charge. The work is seriously injured for want of rain. If you know of rain that will wait work, send them to Mr. Caldwell and help out the city.

—Alex Cameron has begun the erection of the Chicago club grounds, a fine cottage for John H. Wilson, Jr.—one of the best on the premises. Mr. Cameron also has the contract for the erection of a residence on the E. H. Walker farm, north of town. Work on both will be commenced at once and will probably continue through the winter.

—While in previous years the annual fall excursion of the steamship Manitou to the Soo have been unprofitable, the one last week was a winner by a big margin. Every room on the boat was occupied. The Charlevoix contingent are constituted in their praises of the boat and her officers, and especially of the dining room service. The trip was a most enjoyable one in every respect.

—Manager Bridge, of the Charlevoix Theatre, seems to be successful in securing "The Blockhead," which was presented last Friday night. As a drawing attraction it is one of the best we have seen anywhere. The house was fairly good. And now comes another winner in "The Great Divide," booked for Friday night of this week. The company carries a carload of scenery and the play is one that has been given the approval of the best metropolitan audiences.

—Another good old pioneer has departed home to the death, on the 15th, of Patrick Cullen, of Andrew Mudge. Deceased who located in this section in the middle sixties, and resided in Charlevoix for many years, left here for California about fifteen years ago, and was living with his son Hugh at the time of his death. He was a mild a member of Charlevoix Lodge No. 262, F. & A. M., and was therefore buried with Masonic honors. He was a good man and a good Mason.

—Geo. Sandler, of Asheville, N. C., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Bedford.

—Judge Mayne was called by telegram to Hemerdon, N. Y., yesterday, by the critical illness of his father.

—At the Congregational parsonage, this city, the marriage ceremony was solemnized between Mr. Edward Kake and Mrs. Ella Marshall, of East Jordan, Saturday the 18th, inst. Rev. Holden A. Putnam officiated.

—Thursday the G. A. R. veterans of the Grand Traverse region held their annual reunion at Traverse City, and several of the "old boys" of this city said vitally attended. They all return with loud praise for Traverse City hospitality.

—Miss Winnifred Bartholomew, who has been in Chicago the past year, is home for a three week's visit, and will return with Forrest Bartholomew and family, who are also here on a visit. Miss Bartholomew will spend the winter in Chicago and Atlanta.

—Eugene Gallagher, letter known as "Montana," died last Friday at the Traverse City asylum, where he has been the past year. He claimed Beaver Island as his home, where he had a son and other relatives. For many years he travelled extensively as a peddler of spectacles.

—The apple market is active at $1.50 to $1.75 for fall stock. Some very fine fruit is coming in. Contracts for winter stock are being made at $1.75 to $2.00. The orchards give promise of a very heavy November crop, there is very little probability of fluctuation from prices given.

—The finest load of apples that has come to town yet was that of A. A. Stafford, of Norwood. It consisted of 72 bushels of Wolf River fruit, any crate of which would make a good showing at the county fair. While the Stafford orchard is not one of the largest, it is one of the best, and will yield 150 barrels.

—The annual thank offering meeting of the Congregational Ladies' Missionary Society will be held at the residence of Mrs. John Nicholls Friday, Sept. 24, at 2:30 p. m. The following program will be rendered: Hymn, service; vocal solo, Mrs. Burdick; reading, The Missionary Birds; thank offering messages; piano solo, Miss Mutter.

—The north side, and especially Michigan avenue, is booming this fall. Dr. A. M. Wilkinson is building the foundation for a residence, Frank Lamphear is grading his lot preparatory to erecting a fine cottage; and John F. Wilson, of the Chicago Club, who has 100 feet front on the avenue, is planning to build a cottage for his daughter. The Greenwoods are now receiving the finishing touches. Forrest Bartholomew is making the Lamphear plans. He is also making plans for the new front of the VanPelt building, now occupied by Levinson and the postoffice.

—A. B. Fletcher, proprietor of the city drug store, and his brother in-law, H. A. Starr, of Lufington, have formed an equal partnership and went to Santa Barbara, Calif. Mr. Fletcher has made two trips to California within the past year, evidently seeking an opportunity. He will not be entirely lost to Charlevoix, however, as he will return to this place here and give it his attention in the summer. Whether he will spend in California, leaving the Charlevoix store in charge of Mr. Frank Metcalf, whose ability and high Charlevoix standing is known and appreciated by Charlevoix people. While we are sorry to see Mr. Fletcher fix up his allegiance, we can assure the people of Santa Barbara that they have to be congratulated on gaining what we partially lose—a skillful, pleasant and honorable gentleman.

CORNER STONE LAID

Without blare of trumpets, clang of cymbals or pomp of processional; amid the beautiful maples, in the warmth of the genial autumn sun; with quiet, dignified ceremonial, the corner stone of the Carnegie Library has been officially placed at the point in the structure which Solomon's artisans selected for the chief stone of the temple, and from which the architects of succeeding ages have never yet departed—the northeast corner.

In the barley barley at the resort season wind up, and as the walls of the building were finished, this important function was overlooked until the middle of last week, when the Board of Public Works and the Board of Education put their wise official heads together Friday and mapped out the program that was so successfully carried out Monday afternoon. Following is the program:

Male Quartette—S. A. Marting, F. H. Wilkinson, Hubert Kirby and A. M. Wilkinson.

Invocation by Rev. H. A. Wickes.

Remarks by Hon. E. Langworthy.

Lay one of the corner stones by Hon. John Gaskill, Right H. Grand and M. J. Stockman.

Remarks by H. B. Green.

The stone is white Bedford, approximately two feet square. On the north side, in a panel is deeply chiselled the historic name "Carnegie,"—the philanthropic library builder; the industrial Napoleon; the friend of humanity; the "Laird of Skibo." In a cavity of the stone was deposited a sealed box containing:

Copy each of city papers.
List of city officials.
List of county and township officers.
List of Board of Education.
List of staff of teachers.
Names of architect and contractor.
Blue print of plans of building.
Have collection of coins.
Mr. Carnegie letter of bequest.
List of donations for site.
Hand Army badge, presented by M. J. Stockman.
Collection of stamps.
By-laws Charlevoix Lodge No. 262, F. & A. M.
By-laws and roster Pine Lake Lodge No. 127, K. T.
Facsimile post cards, by F. N. Chapel.
Papers of A. F. Bridge, treasurer library committee.
Charlevoix Historical Society year books.

Square to the lines of construction; plumb and true the stone was placed, there to remain through the ages, until, perhaps, another Babel shall be builded, all tongues be again confounded and Volapuk be spoken by all God's mortals.

Already the beauty of the structure begins to unfold itself. The first of basement story of concrete blocks and white Bedford stone presents itself; the stone water table is being placed, upon which, this week will begin to arise the gray and white walls of pressed brick and stone, every square foot of which will be a thing of future years, silently testify to the philanthropic generosity of the builder and the co-operative enterprise of the community.

Amid the rich, green foliage of the magnificent maples the temple of enlightenment and uplifting—dignified, commanding, harmonious in blending color, beautiful in outline. When the leaves have fallen and the frosts shall tinge not the sleeping twigs, the cupstone will be laid, and when the buds shall again burst they will salute the finished work.

Couplets.

"Hello, George!"
"Hello, Billy!"

Two lands shot across the table in the Camp Milliken mess tent at dinner time yesterday, and two comrades arose to their feet and saluted. Both were the lodge of the Eight Michigan Cavalry.

Forty-four years and more had passed since they had last clasped hands at the close of the Andersonville prison, 44 years full of changes; yet instantly one recognized the other, the intervals he had not seen in all those years.

Since shaking hands across the table, George E. Scott of Port Orange, Fla., and William Rogers of Albion, Mich., have not been apart a single moment.—Traverse City Record.

CHAPTER VI.

Early the next morning the two adventurers took their departure. The jovial quack latished his good-byes upon the landlord and his little staff who gathered to welcome the coming or speed the parting guest of the pride of the country tavern. He drove a pair of sensitive, spirited bronchos, and had the satisfaction of knowing that he excited the envy of the hostler, who he took the ribbons in his hand, swung out his lash with a crack, and started off.

If her business trip was unsettling with pride, Deperia's mood was with anxiety. An inclined which she did not understand had prevented her from telling her father of her interview with the quaker. Long before the farmhouse was in view she began to gaze from the landscape for the figure which had been so vividly impressed upon her mind.

The swift horses, well fed and well rested, skirted the tight wagon along the road at a rapid pace, and as they passed the humble home of the Spaulds, Deperia, with her face turned driving the cows down the long lane, and a young man standing by her, with the flowers in the garden, but David himself was not to be seen.

A tear fell from her eye, and her cuddle-colored. With an impulse that she did not dare resist she reined her restless horses to a sudden halt, and with the eyes of the driver as if to inquire what ailed the girl, who could hardly see for the tears that blinded her eyes. She was soon at the gate, and the young man was at her side. The tears had broken out afresh, and she was sobbing like a child.

"Deperia," she said, in a voice that sounded like an echo of a long-dead past, "they say that the sins of the parents should be visited upon their children, and I have suffered for what has tormented every hour of my life. I have wrestled there and prayed for thee as no one but a mother who had drunk the bitter cup to its dregs could ever do. I have trembled as every drinkdam. In every little fault I have beheld a miniature of the vices of thy mother and thy father—thy father! Oh David, my son—my son!"

The white lips parted, but no sound issued from them. She raised her white hand and clutched at her throat as if choking. Then she trembled, grasped, reeled, and fell forward into his arms.

In a moment more the agitated heart had ceased to beat, and the secret of her life was hidden in its myriad-fold retreat. The sudden, inexplicable and calamitous nature of this event gave the sensitive and highly organized youth "feeling as it did upon the very heels of the experiences which so thoroughly shaken his faith in the old life, he felt himself to be the victim of some evil arrow in the quiver of misfortune.

"Countless drives her to death," the newspaper headline proclaimed. Thousands of people read the item that followed, but only one of them was told in three hundred words. She was a young woman—early in the thirties, we guess—a school teacher in a small city, happy with work and friends, but finding it difficult to support herself upon her meager salary, and accepted a position as governess for a firm in a large city several hundred miles from her home. The work was not difficult and the salary was ample, but she missed her friends. She wrote the newspaper told the sequel a year later.

It was a pitiful case. Many convicted persons, reading of it, respected themselves that such a thing could happen in civilized life, but after all, were people to blame?

In that city were over three hundred women each with its own social organizations and opportunities. The city was crowded to its core, as one of the first Saturnalia in the city. As it happened, it was a church social through the church, for its splendid Bible classes and happy church life. She was cordially welcomed and invited to join them, but she never went a second time. She told one of the few people to whom she spoke of her life that "somehow she wasn't interested."

It was in the city an active Young Women's Christian Association, with numerous classes and social events each week. She went down there one night and looked over the schedule; she found but one class she felt interested in, looking for a Bringadier General.

They are wonderfully hard to kill. On our way up the river to Fort Hill, on the steamer passed the lower end of Prophet's Island, upon the long, sandy point of which a huge alligator lay basking in the hot sun. From the boat a dozen rifles were fired at him. The bullets struck the water, the sand, and the alligator, some of them rattling against the side of mail. He lazily rose, waddled to the water, and slipped in, apparently not wounded.

"The stars in their courses fought against Sisera." President Lincoln was fond of quoting these words from the Scripture, as suggestive of the secret, unrecorded influences that enter into the great game of war.

Much counted up the great evils and sufferings of the Union soldier in overcoming nature herself and withstanding the attacks of the reptiles and the insects of the South, ought not to be overlooked.

History deals so little with these things that the world can not know the extent of the evils and sufferings of the American soldier.

Of the great campaigns and large movements; it tells how many were killed and wounded in a battle, but you look in vain for some account of the dreadful sufferings of the men who traversed the Chickahominy swamps, who held their ground on the Mississippi, amid an epidemic of malarial fevers and fevers, who hung resolutely to the territory acquired by hard knocks, in "the Louisiana low lands low." The Florida campaign, for instance, is full of tragedy of a woman's life the comrades know, but it is hard to gather the same information elsewhere.

These men simply illustrated the strength of the American citizen-soldiery. At a time when a dangerous revolution was demanded—a soldiery that would not accept a position as tall on some necessary service in an emergency, but a soldiery that made volunteer for one that was wanted. The proud record of the American soldiery is that it always rose to the occasion, and that it never failed in the cause.

Yet honor to him!—James Franklin Fitts.

Gen. Lee in Wilderness Campaign.

From an illustrated description from the Battles and Leaders of Civil Century, we quote as follows: "General Lee held so completely the advantage of the position of his men that his conduct of a campaign was more criticized. Few points present themselves in his campaign from the Wilderness to Petersburg, where the critic Sherman can lay hold, when all the circumstances are considered. His plan of striking the flank of Grant's army as it passed through the Wilderness has been criticised, but he was found only with its execution. The two divisions of Longstreet at Gordons ville, and Anderson's division at Chilly corps left on the Upper Rapidan were not sufficiently strong from the rest of the army, and, as the event showed, should have been in support.

POSSIBLY FREE WOOL.

The farmers of the agricultural States are afraid that the next movement toward free trade will be the removal of the duty from wool. Wool is called a raw material. It is a necessary article of clothing. If the American people were not producers of wool, it might reasonably be argued that wool should be put on the free list. But wool is a great American product. The farmers raising it are hard pressed and its existence depends entirely upon the protective tariff. Putting wool on the free list would mean the American farmers would go out of the sheep business and the sheep would be managed with great economy and with great productiveness in Wyoming, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico. Among the older States Ohio is the leading producer of wool. In none of these States or Territories can sheep be grown and cared for as cheaply as in many other parts of the world. America has a monopoly on raw cotton, and we defy the British lion has no monopoly on raw wool. If it is decided that we are going to make a move toward free trade in the production of sheep, then the duty should be taken off from everything and every article that is made of wool. We have often said that possibly it would be a good thing to try the experiment of free trade as between the woolen manufacturers. Of course, the carpet mills in Pennsylvania would stop. So would the woolen mills of Massachusetts and New England. But it could be argued that the people would be benefited by the removal of the woolen mills could find useful employment on the farms and farmers would be benefited. If the woolen employed in the woolen mills were thrown into idleness, families could be benefited by the enforced idleness. Whether or not these changed conditions would be satisfactory I will not undertake to say I do not know. We are not suggesting free wool nor free trade in any other form, but we are free to do so. But if the experiment of free trade is to be attempted, to satisfy a number of many thousands of people who can see nothing but evil in the tariff, we think the people would give the best possible illustration or demonstration. There seems to be a considerable sentiment against the tariff. No man can treatise or argument, but he can. Has listened to the arguments of the politician against the tariff. Hence we said something done besides argument. The removal of the duty on one hides has had no effect whatever on the price upon hides, boots and shoes, or upon the price of leather. If free hides go successfully, there will be those who will say, "Why not try free wool?"—Iowa Homes Capital.

William Howard Taft.

The yellow journals and their yellow correspondents continue to annoy Secretary Taft by attempting to compare Taft's six months in the presidential chair with seven years and a half years in the same office. But the American people are growing to be pretty well satisfied with their yellow correspondents continue to annoy the public by attempting to compare Taft's six months in the presidential chair with Roosevelt's seven and a half years in the same office. But the American people are growing to be patient. At least more patient than they would indulge. President Taft is discharging every duty in a creditable and in a judicious manner. He is not acting hastily, nor is he acting in a manner that ignores the rights of others. He is President of the United States and he will hold the office to the best of his ability, regardless of a second term. He realizes, doubtless, that it is a great honor, and he is anxious apparently, to be President for one term. But we predict that he will not be President for a second term. The people will come to take his measure. They will come to find out that he hesitates when he has nothing to say in regard to the presidency as he does when he has something to say. We have often said that Roosevelt was not having too much to say in regard to the presidency and that Roosevelt was having too much to say in regard to the people.—Des Moines Capital.

Political Comment.

Mr. Bryan and Mr. Taft.

Editor Bryan must have been out of fresh and interesting material when he wrote the leader for the last issue of The Commoner. He must do not have harked back to the letter he wrote President Taft at the time Congress had voted to submit the income tax amendment to the States, calling upon the President to submit the income tax amendment for the election of senators by popular vote. The President's reply was that he was not prepared to urge the submission of such an amendment as an administration measure, and thought it should be presented to Congress as a party question but as a matter of individual opinion.

Mr. Bryan knew full well when he wrote his letter that not even the most paralyzed appeal by the President would have moved Congress, or at least the Senate, to submit to the States the amendment in question. Congress does offered a joint resolution covering the subject, but it was referred to a committee. There it slept, and will sleep. The only way to secure the adoption of the new revenue law is through a constitutional convention. When a few more States shall have joined in the call for one the necessary twothirds will have been obtained and Congress will be in a position to act.

Mr. Bryan knew all that last summer when he thought he saw a chance to put the President in a hole, for the Nebraska Democrat in his campaign that he was personally inclined to favor the direct election of senators. He did not say, however, that if elected he would waste himself by urging Congress to do what he knew it would not do.

Mr. Bryan is a man with much intelligence. It was hardly fair to hold out such hopes during the campaign to the people of Nebraska when the election is over. We were afraid of it. We thought he would do it. We thought Mr. Taft would be was inclined to favor the election of senators by the people. They put him to office because they thought him a safer man than Bryan, and he listened to the arguments of the politician against the tariff. Hence we said something done besides argument. The removal of the duty on one hides has had no effect whatever on the price upon hides, boots and shoes, or upon the price of leather. If free hides go successfully, there will be those who will say, "Why not try free wool?"—Iowa Homes Capital.

Why He Could Not Talk.

A commuter, says a writer in the New York Times, hired a Swedish carpenter to repair some blinds on the outside of his house. During the day the commuter's wife looked after things, and once or twice came out to see if the man was getting on all right.

"Is there anything you need, Mr. Swenson?" she asked, on her second trip.

The carpenter gulped once or twice and pointed to his throat.

"Why, what's the matter with you?" she asked, in alarm.

"Sore throat," he croaked, with great effort.

"Why don't you answer me, sir?" she asked, indignantly.

The Swede turned and looked down at her gravely.

"My most is full of sawdust," he said. "I cannot speak until I swallow some!"

ROBERT ADAM.

He Created a New Era in English Architecture.

Robert Adam (1728-1792) was the English architecture what Benvenuto Cellini was to that of Italy. He was architect to the king, beloved in court, a member of Parliament, and it was said of him that he "could not help adorning all that he touched." Those of the English people who dwell in Adam houses prize them as rare jewels.

Chinese Secret Societies in Java.

An ordinance just issued in Java falls heavily upon Chinese societies in Netherlands India. A fine of 100 guilders or three months rigorous imprisonment is the penalty for every Chinaman found in possession of secret society documents or emblems or caught wearing the distinguishing marks of these organizations.

Those who participate in meetings of such societies, allow meetings to be held in their houses or fail to inform the authorities of such meetings being held incur similar penalties. The latter also fall upon Chinamen who recruit for these societies, supply them with money or give them help in any way.

CUTICURA CURED HIM.

Eczema Came on Legs and Spread—Canadian Chief of Police Could Not Walk—Was Miserable—Had Scaling and Itching.

"I have been completely cured of dry eczema. I was inspecting the removal of mushroom weeds from the edge of a river and was wading in the dirt from the weeds. At night I commenced my legs to feel a peculiar sensation. I paid no attention to it for two years, but I noticed a seam on my legs that was dry. I was ashamed to it until it came to be troublesome and scaled and itched and running sores. My ankles were all sore and swollen and I could not wear shoes I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In less than ten days I could put on my boots and in less than three weeks I was free from the confounded itching. Capt. George H. "I never carry any but safety matches," said the orator in the red, white and blue. "It's a matter of conscience with me."

"Why so?" inquired the drum major.

"Because," said the orator, "when the world uses safety matches exclusively I want to be a patriotic citizen. You know what phosphorus is? Well, phosphorus is the soul of patriotism. Without it there isn't a grain of it, and so in safety match factories phosphorus is unknown.

"I always scour in my conscience," concluded the orator, "when I scratch a strike-anywhere match. I feel it helping to give some poor girl or boy worker phossy jaw. But when I scratch a safety match I feel like Phosphorus Job Rockefeller Institute or Metchnikoff in his laboratory—in his helping to rid the world of disease."

PRESSED HARD.

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in North Carolina says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that weak all over feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago, I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I hunted a package to carry home with me, and had my wife prepare some for my mother. The whole family liked it so well, that we discontinued the use of tea and coffee for almost a year.

"I had always been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general health was improved. This continued until she was as well as she had been for years.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

HIGHER REGISTRY FEE ASKED.

Soon to Cost Ten Cents to Register a Letter—Five Cents for Package.

After Nov. 1, 1909, it will cost 10 cents instead of 5 cents, as at present, to register a piece of mail. An order to this effect was issued by Postmaster General Hitchcock Monday.

The order increases the maximum indemnity paid to the owner of a lost or rifled registered letter from $25 to $50, thus doubling the department's liability for valuable articles intrusted to its registry trust. This additional insurance of $25 for 2 cents is granted at a much lower rate than is offered for a similar amount by any private concern.

The changes ordered constitute the first move toward making the postal service self-sustaining. The registry system is expected to be conducted at a loss, and in order to make it pay its way radical measures are necessary. New features being considered by the Postmaster General include the establishment of a parcel registration not justified by demand in a small indemnity, and a preferred class of registered matter of high value with an increase in the fee not indemnity and to 20 cents and $100, the limits fixed by law.

It is pointed out that the parcel necessary will meet a public demand for a cheap and safe means of transmitting Christmas packages and other gifts of the character, and that the graduating of the fee in accordance with the value of the parcel the amount of care necessary to insure safe transmission is to record with sound business principles. It is to be seen that the suggested that the fee be carried a step further by asking Congress to raise the limit of fee and indemnity, in order that the department may assume the liability for all matter presented for registration, and may impose an additional charge for the responsibility undertaken.

In addition to these changes effecting the amount of fees and indemnities, the Postmaster General's council is considering a plan which, if it is adopted, will be a great saving of time and expense in the business of the registry system that should lessen the cost of operation without any lessening of the efficiency.

NEW YORK BANKER A SUICIDE.

J. W. Castles, President of Union Trust Co., Gets His Throat.

John W. Castles, president of the Union Trust Company at 80 Broadway, committed suicide at the Grand Union Hotel in New York by cutting his throat with a razor. He had been ill for several months with nervous prostration as a result of overwork. The bank is one of the big New York financial institutions and has deposits of over $50,000,000.

Castles was elected president of the Union Trust Company in December, 1908, and assumed office early in January, after he had been associated with the Chemnitz Trust Company. The post at that time was a thing of recent passing. Castles found a heavy load of work awaiting him. As a result of this heavy work his health suffered.

3 CHILDREN FIEND'S VICTIMS.

Theresa Trovendo, 7 years old, was found dead in Utica, N. Y., with a bullet wound through her head. Fanny Infusino, 6 years old, who was with the child, was shot in the stomach and cheekbone, and a little brother of the Infusino girl is in a serious condition from loss of blood caused by a wound in the arm. The children, who had been playing since 7 o'clock Sunday evening, were seen shortly after walking with a strange man about 40 years old. After an unlight search the dead child and two others were found in a deep hollow, over which several streets cross on masonry arches. Fanny Infusino, whose father is a grocer in the Italian quarter, was able to give a meager description of the man who killed her companion and wounded her brother and sister.

BLACK HAND BEATS TEACHER.

Nicholas Accomando, Italian instructor and school teacher at the Fletcher Place Methodist Episcopal Church, in Indianapolis, was badly beaten by a masked man armed with a club. Accomando's cries finally frightened his assilant away. Accomando declares the Black Hand was responsible for the assault. He says he has been threatened repeatedly by certain Italians.

Fifty Poisoned by Ice Pond.

Fifty businessmen of Harrison, O., are ill, some seriously, from eating oysters or lobsters at the business lunch of C. Harbier in Harbierton Thursday night. Among the sufferers are six doctors. The trouble has been pronounced ptomaine poisoning.

Estimate on Canada's Wheat.

An official estimate by the Canadian Department of Agriculture and Statistics places Canada's wheat crop at 105,356,000 bushels. If this is estimated 149,585,000 bushels will be produced west of the great lakes.

Prohibitive Monster in Pound.

Portions of the skeleton of a prehistoric animal of great size have been unearthed on the Orville Hiller farm, sixteen miles from Pendleton, Ore. One of the teeth is fourteen inches long and has a masticating area of twenty-five inches.

Beat Swamper; Outer Drowned.

Overloading of a canvas canoe intended for one, or at most two passengers, but which was carrying three, resulted in the drowning in the Hudson at Newburgh, N. Y., of John Florence, of Susquehanna, Pa. John McKeever and Robert McKeever, each about 15 years old, were saved by the prompt action of Daniel Carroll.

One Thousand Horse Power Gas Engine.

It is difficult to say when a gas engine becomes a large gas engine. A few years ago 300 horse power was considered the starting point, then 500 horse power, and now in a recent article published in a German paper 1,000 horse power seems to be taken as the maximum. The list gives the names of twenty-eight makers, three in the continent, four in England and five in the United States. Also together it adds up a total of 625 engines, giving a combined output of 1,005,200, or more than 1,000,000 horse power in large units.

CASUAL OBSERVATIONS

Scientific, Reminiscent, Political and General—Honors Unrecognized.

We are living in an age of extremes—great triumphs and great disappointments. Dr. Cook quietly sneaked to the apex of the globe and returned to modestly tell the story. Commander Peary went also, and a year later, stood at the pole. When Cook heard of Peary's success he exclaimed, "Hurrah for Peary!" When Peary came out of the gloom and learned of Cook's victory he exclaimed, "Cook is a liar!" Well—we are for Cook.

Talking about discoveries and mountain climbing, we are reminded that Dr. Cook was the first to reach the peak of Mt. McKinley, in Alaska. It may not be generally known that the editor of this paper is the first white man now living in Charlevoix to scale the heights of Mt. McSauba, and he had no injun-company. It may be that Morris Stockman and 'Lance Aldrich will dispute the claim but we stand ready to produce original notes and observations. The writer also, discovered VanFelt place, and was mired up in the discovery of VanFelt himself, at a remote period. The scribe has never put forward a claim for a gold medal for this latter glory. He also discovered Covell's congressional boom, but claims of priority have been made from obscure sources.

As the steamship Manitou was landing along came Lou See and remarked to the scribe that a steam boat trip these days is not what it was in the old days. The splendid Manitou, Missouri and Illinois with the wireless telegraph, steam steering gear and new-fangled dining room gear, are a striking contrast to the old fashioned comforts enjoyed on the Lawrence, Champlain and City of Charlevoix. The innovations that come with modern progress are necessary, and they can be gradually absorbed by an old-timer who is not a clam—but as we scan the beautiful gold and blue menu-card in the palatial dining room of the Manitou we harkback to the time when we sat with Capt. Gibson at the head of the long table in the cabin of the old Fountain City, or later were accorded the same honor with good old Capt. Bishop, in the Lawrence and City of Charlevoix. There were no finger bowls then, and there was a scramble for seats when the bell rang, that in these days would be called rude. There was no gold lace on the bridge and less formality in the cabin. But it was the informal evening gatherings of congenial spirits in the smoking room—"by forfeit," the yarns and the seven-up, with now and then a penny ante session in the Captain's room, that banished dull care. A trip to Chicago then took in every place on the shore, wherever was a hole in the woods and a dock. Now,—but why linger?

Pat Kelly, lieutenant governor of Michigan, and who has a lee in his bonnet that sings sweet little songs in his ear, is out and around at the farmer's gatherings sowing seeds, which he hopes to see spring through the fertile soil and yield abundantly at the November harvest time next year. Pat is a smooth proposition at the seeding business. He never uses a drill—just sows broadcast. He has the "moral influence" of the administration, but he is not frost proof, and down from the north will come a cold wave that will make the Kelly field resemble a cow pasture.

Already the demand of Charlevoix county for a respectful hearing in this sensational matter is eliciting favorable comment from other counties in the district. The claim for recognition is given force by the standing and record of Charlevoix county's candidate for honors—Hon. Leonard F. Knowles. There are always, in organized bodies of men, those who make themselves "conspicuous" in debate, but who are on the short side when it comes to constructive wisdom. In the constitutional convention Mr. Knowles was conspicuous in a way that made his conspicuity weld itself into the lines of the constitution. His work in the convention was never spectacular but always forceful and effective. Few men went home from that convention with a better record behind them than Leonard F. Knowles and this is why there is force and justice in the claim of Charlevoix county to name the next state senator.

WARDEN'S NOTICE

Change in the Game and Fish Law is Pointed out.

The last legislature made a change in the fish laws that is of great importance to the commercial fishermen of the state and which the wardens want all in this section to thoroughly understand in order to avoid trouble in regard to the enforcement of the new provision. The law in question is contained in section 7, page 252, of the Public Acts, and is as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to ship or transport within this state, any fish in packages or fish cars without plainly and correctly marking each package or fish car with the names of consignor and consignee, and the kinds of fish and the number of pounds of each kind contained therein. It shall be unlawful for any railroad company, boat line, express company or other transportation company or common carrier or any agent of such company to accept for shipment, or transport any package or fish car containing fish unless it is properly marked as prescribed in this section. The presence in any package or fish car of 10 per cent. or less of any fish that is illegal to ship shall make the entire contents of such packages or fish car subject to seizure as an illegal shipment. Provided that any package or car of fish in transit opened by the warden or his deputies, if found to be a legal shipment under this act, shall be repacked in lieu in as good condition as when opened: Provided further, that no package or car of fish legally shipped shall be detained in transit by or for inspection."

The One Appalling Menace.

It is truly said that 'every cloud has a silver lining," yet the axiom may be reversed, at times, in the general average of good and evil that falls to us all.

Dame Nature has smiled upon us in this year of our Lord 1909. The earth has yielded up abundantly of her products, the orchards groan with their burdens; the granaries are full and the silos are bursting with food for the kine. The squashes and pumpkins repose under the hay; the turkeys are strutting in the barn-yard, unconscious of coming trouble, and the fat shoats gorge themselves, ignorant of man's inhumanity to pigs. The cider barrels are being filled and the beeclouts are hot awaiting a frost to yield their exculent tribute to the expectant kid.

The urban human—philosopher or laborer—shacks with the producer all these components of Nature's cornucopia in the ratio of his physical demands and his ability to gratify them. The happy city home sits with that far serene look fields in joyous anticipation of Thanksgiving day and the Christmastide. But an evil day is coming.

The skunk season approaches. With the frosts and the early snow comes the fragrant pole cat. In this country he has room to ramble in the wood lot or the corn stubble and laughs to scorn the perils of outlawry. He lays tribute by the light of the moon and by the same token he hies himself at early dawn to a hollow log or the stump fence, leaving nothing behind but his tracks. Peace and pure ozone prevail where the music of the threshing machine is heard. Ergo, ...all is bliss.

To those who dwell forinst the Carnegie library the advent of that unhappy day has a deeper and more sensuous meaning. The weary office slave closes his desk as the twilight comes. As he hies him homeward, visions of the coal fire, the big chair and the reading table force dull care to the dungeon of forgetfulness. The first snow shimmers along the vista of the street under the foliage-ridden trees. The peace of conscious rectitude absorbs his being. The stars wink at him in silent approval of his existence. He is not afraid to look man or beast squarely in the face.

But what a fall was there my countrymen. A black and white specire crosses his path or appropriates the sidewalk ahead of him; the air is redolent of perfume and it is not attar of roses. The specire turns and faces the once happy mortal, who has, in the flip of a skunk's tail, been transformed from a God fearing citizen into a creature possessing all the elements of original sin. Words are spoken ...hot, burning words—words that once spoken can never be recalled, words keen, searching, piercing, wicked. Why dwell? Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth.

John Cooper, of Charlevoix county, says he gathered a little over 150 bushels of wheat from 3½ acres.

The Petoskey Evening News says yesterday morning there was shipped from the local G. R. & I. station by express, ninety five bushel baskets of as fine peaches as were ever looked at all the product of Emmet county.

The United States engineer has notified the city officials that Traverse City will get no breakwater at that port. The report on the preliminary survey made last March was unfavorable.

Boyne Journal: The large number of homes that have been purchased this summer by the workingmen is one of the direct results of local option. The little drink of from 20 to 40 a day which formerly went into the saloon will make the necessary payments on a house.

Judge L. H. Harris at Ellsworth has raised some good crops this year. He says some of his wheat averaged as high as thirty-two bushels to the acre, though he had some bins that were badly winter killed, which brought the average of his acreage down to about 18 bushels, his oats brought 36 bushels to the acre.

Traverse City Special: Rather than pay a fine of $10 and $22 costs, Tom Schoonover of Northport, a man well to do and a prominent commercial fisherman, has started in to serve 95 days in jail. He was arrested for having whitefish weighing less than two pounds in his possession and found guilty by a jury despite his claim that the fish were legal because taken in legal nets. He was given the alternative of paying the $10 fine and $22 costs or 25 days in jail, and promptly took the jail sentence.

Petoskey Resorter: Fifty pickerel and half a dozen good black bass were brought from Lake Geneseseth, on Hoover Island, last Saturday night, by T. W. Webb of Chicago and John and Herbert Mueller of Lockland, Ohio, all of whom are west Lake street cottagers. The largest of the catch weighed a little over nine pounds and the total weight was 150 pounds. It was not without many trials that the feat was accomplished. The party took the steamer Beaver from Charlevoix to St. Jacques, where the charterer's launch to take them with their bag gags and two boats to a point fourteen miles south, opposite Lake Geneseseth where they were to portage their boats overland and deposite them in the baby waters.

Boyne Journal: A few days ago Deputy State Warden Stanford was over in Chestonia, looking after some alleged violations of the game law, and got out on the runway of deer that was being chased by dogs. He succeeded in shooting a hound but the man who was following was too sly to show up although Sanford waited patiently in the rain for him. There are some Kentuckians over in that section that are persistent violators. Stanford then went over near Alba and arrested Thomas Jacobs for setting a fire that destroyed a lot of wood for the East Jordan Chemical Co. The fellow had refused to settle the damage and had told the company to go to, etc. He told the deputy warden the same thing but instead of going there he went to Mancelona and took Jacobs along. A justice fined the fellow $25 and costs and nobody was asked to go to the bad place after that.

Charles S. Bogardus, writing from his home in Paxton, Illinois, in a letter to the Petoskey Record, says: "If the advantages to settlers in Emmet, Cheboygan and the other nearby counties, were generally known that part of Michigan would quickly double in population. Lands here that are selling at $50 per acre, some as high as $200, will not produce as many dollars per acre in any crops raised here as I have taken from seed peas and potatoes per acre at Pellston. A few here are boasting of the best wheat crops, averaging about 30 bushels per acre on lands that would sell at $150 per acre. Two or three seasons ago, three pieces of wheat in the Brutscher settlement southeast of Pellston averaged 26 and a fraction, 28 and a fraction, and 31½ bushels per acre."

Traverse City Eagle: A. M. Leslie, proprietor of the Northport Beach Resort, was in the city Monday for the purpose of getting in touch with the development bureau, and while here he stated that it had been his intention to plat his property at Northport, and sell it for resort purposes, but that he had become convinced that there will be more money in planting it to fruit, and he will begin preparations at once to set the land out to fruit trees and cultivate them for pay. Mr. Leslie says that early in the season there were a large number of Northport people planning to sell out their holdings and move away, but since this section began a systematic plan of advertising through the development bureau they have changed their minds and concluded that the best place for them is at home, and they will proceed to develop their lands into orchards, and stay by the grand Traverse region, which at present offers greater inducements than any other section to those who want to make a good living out of the soil.

IT'S a common saying that "it costs as much to put on poor paint as good." The fact is it costs more to put on poor paint; more gallons; the labor cost of painting is practically equal by the gallon.

Devoe Lead and Zinc paint takes fewer gallons than other paints; any other we believe; and lasts longer when put on.

That makes it, at a higher price than poor paint, the cheapest paint made.

The Grace of Good Food.

Henry Ward Beecher once said: "A man must look upon his job as much to be a happy man. Good digestion, you are good-natured, bad digestion, you are morose. Half the grace that's going is nothing but food."

Innocent.

By feeling with the hammer of a gun a little dog shot his master the other day. To give the incident an even more humorous touch it was adged that the dog didn't know the gun was loaded.

Dressed as Scholars.

At the wedding breakfast of the bond master of Blasbourne college, England, the bridesmaids were gathered as scholars in black satin knee breeches, buckled shoes, scarlet silk gowns, with white shirt fronts. Each carried a mortarboard hat and a scarlet-bound prayer book.

In Book Form.

"He is going to put his play into book form."

"What does that mean?"

Something Very Like It.

"It is impossible to take something from nothing," quoted the Wise Guy. "Well, you come pretty close to it when you take the council out of some people," added the Simple Mug.

Words Sweetly Spoken.

Only a few sweet, loving words—that is all, but coming from the heart and going to the heart, they would hitchhike many a life and comfort many a soul, as the speaker of these little thinks. Let us not be so chary of them.—Mary H. Perkins.

HOTEL CELLS.

The Difference Between Them and Those of the Jails.

The chief difference between the average hotel cell and the average prison cell, viewed from the standpoint of social psychology, is that one is furnished in the inside by the occupiers of the hotel cell is afraid that something will be done to him or that something will be taken from him by some man who ought to be in a prison cell. This is the reason why the 300 words divided 'tos into chapters and print 'em between covers."

A BOWLDER BRIDGE.

Probably Placed in Position by an Ancient Mariner.

One of the most remarkable freaks of the elements in Arizona, or the west is to be found in one of the southern counties of the Grand Canyon state, in a narrow gorge carved through sandstone by the action of rain and wind. Here, in the little valley, there has been lowered or lapped the average home-making man seen on a bowlder that is held up in the air by friction on the sides of the gorge and has with the aid of the sand-tone walls.

From the sandy bed of the little gorge to the rock is fully seventy feet and the bowlder, which is quite round, is, of course, beyond the reach of the waters of the big round rock, but as a matter of fact it is believed to have been placed there years and centuries ago, when the waters of the ocean were almost up to the path of some ancient mariner, who, in the days of his adventurous years, and relied to his mates upon the fact.

The stone seems only by a small protuberance on each side, but it is said that it forms a convenient footbridge across the gorge over which the inhabitants may take his way.—Kansas City Journal.

Caterpillars.

The green and yellow tints not frequently to be found in caterpillars are stated to be due to coloring matter deprived from their food and passed through the blood of the animals. By feeding caterpillars with artificial colors the experimenters caused some of caterpillars to produce silk of bright orange yellow and the remaining of the silk of the same color the presence and nature of colored pigments in the silk glands of the caterpillars were established.—London Tatler.

A Postscript.

Willie, aged five, had delivered a message from his mother to a friend of her's who was in a hurry to go. Being asked if there was anything else his mother had told him to say, he replied, "No, mamma; only she said I wouldn't ask you or any other lady if you gave me any I was to take it and thank you." He got the coke.

Information.

"Where do all your Americans live?" inquired the Europeans.

"About seventy of us live in New York," answered the caustic American, "and the rest of us live in cities."—Chicago Tribune.

HOTEL CELLS.

The Difference Between Them and Those of the Jails.

The chief difference between the average hotel cell and the average prison cell, viewed from the standpoint of social psychology, is that one is furnished in the inside by the occupiers of the hotel cell is afraid that something will be done to him or that something will be taken from him by some man who ought to be in a prison cell. This is the reason why the 300 words divided 'tos into chapters and print 'em between covers."

WATERPROOF FABRICS.

There Are Several Methods by Which They Are Treated.

Fabrics are waterproofed by impregnating them with metallic soils, by coating them with oil, grease and wax, by impregnating them with rubber or by treating them with ammoniacal solutions of copper. The first process is applied to mildcloth. The canvas is impregnated with the copper solution and then immersed in a strong formalin and then immersed in a strong bath containing soap, which forms insoluble fatty acid or stearine soap in the cloth.

The second process is used for raincoats, indiarubber leather, etc. The fabric is first treated with a solution of chlorine or other solvent is applied, and then rubber is used for raincoats and bathing caps and is applied to thread.

In the fourth process, employed in the manufacture of waterproof cloth, Willesden canvas, cotton cloth is run through a solution of soluble of copper in ammonia, which dissolves the superficial layer and on evaporation leaves it in the form of a uniform coating of cellulose. The process is recommend by jessing the cloth between rollers. There are still other processes but these are the most important.—Scientific American.

What Thieves Won't Steal.

The last thing he would steal before leaving the inn was to put four fives in the clock on the mantel "So thieves won't get them," she said.

"I should think that would be simply inviting thieves to run away with the clock," said her friend. "That is a handsome clock, and thieves like handsome clocks."

"They do," said the woman, "but they never will steal this clock. It has two hands. No wire thief will run away with a clock that goes like this clock goes, and the fact the alarm about his person that he is afraid of, keeps him from taking the clock. Companions of the kind are likely to return before the clock is gone, and if it happens to have lost a gong they will notice the difference. Thieves like rules in the climate that goes inside the door and maybe give him a lee time for his plunder."—New York Sun.

HARRIMAN, RAIL KING, GOES WAY OF ALL FLESH

WORLD LOSES FINANCIAL POWER

The Cause of His Suffering Is a Mystery Which May Never Be Solved.

Edward Henry Harriman died at his home at Arden, N. Y., some time between 1:30 and 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

His end removes from the railroad world of the day its supreme figure. It leaves the greatest railroad system in the world—a system which he himself built up and welded together—without a head. It marks the closing of a career unique in the financial history of this country. At 14 Mr. Harriman was an office boy; at 23 owner of a seat in the Stock Exchange of New York, and at 25 a millionaire. At 45 though wealthy, he was still a subordinate and in the wider sense unknown. In the ensuing twelve years occurred the meteoric rise that made him the undisputed emperor of the railroad business of the nation. His death at 61 is an event that will make itself felt throughout the entire financial fabric of the world.

While it has been known for weeks that Mr. Harriman was a doomed man the greatest mystery surrounds the nature of the disease from which he suffered. Stomach trouble was the name given to his illness by his doctors, but during the last three or four weeks the rumor gained wide circulation that he had cancer. It has been intimated by men who were in a position to know that he was afflicted with the same ailment that caused the death of the late William Rockefeller, president of the University of Chicago.

The death of Mr. Harriman removes from the world its greatest single railroad and financial power of modern times. Like a story from "The Arabian Nights" reads the biography of this magician of steel rails and stock markets. In forty years from poverty and obscurity to almost fabulous wealth and colossal power, from broker's clerk to master of more than 25,000 miles of railroad and steamships, enough to belt the globe with a girdle girdle, from market "scalper" to arbiter of more than $150,000,000 in cash and with nearly a billion dollars in stocks and securities at his back and call—such is a bird's-eye view of the career of the "Napoleon of the railroad world," as they call him, who has just gone the way of all flesh.

How Harriman got his start has always been somewhat of a mystery in Wall street. The lambs by which he hounded into command of the majority of railroads have always been an enigma to his rivals and a sealed stile. Factious, secretive, silent, like, but still wheeling a wand that seemed to turn everything it touched to gold, Harriman was the psychological puzzle of the "street."

MAJ. GEN. E. M. M'COOK DIES.

Officer in Civil War Succumbs After Illness of Months.

Gen. Edward M. McCook, two times Governor of Colorado when it was still a territory and a major general in the army during the Civil War, died at the Chicago Hospital, Gen. McCook's home was in Denver. His body was taken to the general's former home in Steubenville, Ohio. Mrs. McCook came to Chicago two months ago. He was suffering from Bright's disease and went to the hospital for treatment. Gen. McCook was born in Ohio on June 15, 1833. Following his serving as Governor of the Territory of Colorado he was appointed United States Minister to Hawaii. Gen. McCook was a member of the family of "fighting McCooks," almost a score of whom have been military men of fame. He was active in the territorial legislature of Kansas at the time the State of Kansas was formed. On the first shot at Sumter he joined the Kansas legion and sustained the reputation of his family throughout the war. He was eloquent as an orator and on the death of Gen. Thomas delivered the funeral oration.

HALLEY'S COMET IS SIGHTED.

German Astronomer Reports Observance—Missing for Seventy Years.

WHOSE LITTLE GIRLIE ARE YOU?

NINETY SAVED FROM DEEP.

Steamer Hits Rock, but Passengers and Crew Reach Safety.

Thrilling scenes attended the loss of the Allan line steamer Laurentian, bound from Boston for Glasgow, which struck upon the rocks near Cape Race, N. F., during a dense fog at 6 o'clock Monday morning. It was her first to last work, but the fifty passengers and forty members of the crew escaped to land after a trying experience. The Laurentian was making about thirteen knots an hour when she struck the rocks. The ship rebounded heavily, the shock throwing most of the passengers, who were asleep, from their berths. They scampered for the deck without stopping to dress, and for half an hour much excitement prevailed. Captain Inglis and his officers succeeded in quieting all hands. A stiff north-east wind buffeted the ship aboard and the situation became so serious at 7 o'clock that orders were given to put the boats outboard and passengers and crew were taken off in safety.

FIGHT WITH KNIVES IN STREET.

MEN BEATEN IN LUMBER CAMPS

U. S. Immigration Agent Says White Slavery Exists in Minnesota.

That a system of peonage and white slave traffic exists in Minnesota is announced that it may involve the federal government in trouble with State is the sensational charge made by John Cullton Elder of the United States Immigration department in a letter to Governor Johnson.

Mr. Elder charges that foreigners are tricked and beaten if they attempt to leave their employment, and in some cases the machinery of the law is used to detain these laborers. Women slaves are transportation and try to leave they are arrested and forced to work out the indebtedness." says Mr. Elder. "The writer has found a case in northern Minnesota of two subjects of the Russian government employed in a lumber camp who tried to escape and were taken before a justice of the peace and sentenced to thirty days. Mr. Elder says that these conditions are present in northern Minnesota lumber camps.

RAISING LARGER CROPS.

Agricultural Bureau Head Finds Farmers Are Not Wasteful.

Soils of the United States are not wearing out and the crop yields are larger rather than decreasing. These facts are demonstrated in a bulletin shortly to be issued by the bureau of soils of the agricultural department in Washington, prepared by Professor Milton Whitney, chief of the bureau. The bulletin deals exhaustively with the yields of crops from 1867 to 1905 inclusive. "We are producing more crops per acre than formerly," said Professor Whitney. "This is undoubtedly due to better and more intelligent cultivation, more and better systems of rotation of crops and to the increase in the intelligent use of fertilizers through measures of control in the hands of every individual farmer."

HUSBAND SLAIN; BRIDE HELD.

Mystery surrounds the shooting and death early Thursday of Scott Sprague, a machinist, who came to Cincinnati from Williamsburg, O., with his bride of two weeks to live. Mrs. Sprague was found in the sleeping room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Sprague at 225 West 5th street. The bullet entered Sprague's right side, penetrating his liver and lung. The location of the wound is said to be an unusual one to be self-inflicted, and this, taken with the fact that there were three shots on Mrs. Sprague's night rose, caused the police to place a charge of suspicion against her. Mrs. Sprague said she was awakened by the shot and found her husband huddled up in a corner of the bedroom in his night clothes. She declared her husband had no enemies, and she knew of no reason why he should have shot himself. Mrs. Sprague is the daughter of Frank Cross, of Rockford, Ill.

CHICAGO.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Chicago Trade says: "The growth in banking power reflected by the official statements this week adds further testimony to the improved commercial position. Loans are seen to have increased considerably over this time last year and there are developments in progress which foreshadow a stronger demand for money in the near future. The discount rate, correspondingly gathers firmness. It is fortunate that credits operate smoothly and make financial easier for the needs of the industries and transportation interests now entering upon a period of greater activity.

"Trading demands again make an encouraging tale. Merchants of commodities make a favorable comparison with last year. Industrial production is noted in iron, wood, brass and leather manufactures. Negotiations are in progress for new contracts for railway equipment, rails, structural steel and tin plate.

"Machinery makers report wider demand for more outlets, especially for mining purposes, and the improvement is well sustained in electric lines, heavy hardware and farming tools.

"Despite poor export requirements the dealings in grain and flour remain large. Sales of cotton goods are exceptionally good, and aggregate bookings seem to be quite up to the mark in footwear and food products.

"Bank clearings for five days, $331,500,324, exceed those of the corresponding period last year by 17.3 per cent and those of 1907 by 1.2 per cent, while they exceed those of 1906 by 1.7 per cent.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number twenty-one, against twenty-five last week, and twenty-three in 1907. These with liabilities over $5,000 number five, against four last week, six in 1908 and five in 1907."

NEW YORK.

Operations in industrial lines are still expanding, and in some branches of the iron and steel trade record outputs are the rule. In fact, manufacturing is the forefront as regards activity. Jobbing trade is good, and at some centers, particularly where fall festivals are held, purchases of dry goods, groceries and staple lines in general have really increased.

The earlier gathered crops, such as wheat, cotton and oats, are being moved to market quite freely, "and the good prices being realized from the sale of these products will make for easier collections and growth in trade. Business failures in the United States for the week ending Sept. 9 were 191 against 166 last week, 191 in the same week of 1908, 172 in 1907, 184 in 1906 and 155 in 1905. Failures in Canada for the week number 29, which compares with 32 last week and 34 in the same week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

SPRING WHEAT ALSO DROPS

August heat and drought reduced the corn crop promise by 198,000,000 bushels, according to the governmental crop report. Of this loss 150,000,000 bushels were taken off the seven corn surplus States. The indicated corn crop, according to the government figures, is 2,565,241,000 bushels, as compared with 2,747,162,000 bushels indicated a month ago. The crop has been reduced one fifth since July 1 and one fourth since August 1 to a third. The report on corn was a disappointment even to the most radical believers in crop damage. The government figures show a decline of practically 100 points during August, the condition Sept. 1 being 74.6, as against 84.6 on Aug. 1. The ten-year average for Sept. 1 is 80.4, or six points higher than the officially reported condition now given. The present report indicates a crop of 2,605,243,000 bushels, or 232,000,000 bushels less than the record crop raised in 1906.

Probably most interesting to the corn crop losses, viewing the reports from a national rather than from the farmers' standpoint, is the showing made on hay. The crop is officially given at 61,156,000 tons, as compared with 70,798,000 tons a year ago, when the yield was the largest ever recorded.

The loss of 10,000,000 bushels in Kansas is comparatively not important, as the total indicated yield of 124,302,000 bushels winter and spring wheat is only 45,800,000 bushels last year, thus making the present crop larger than the average of the last five or ten years.

The report of the government statistician will not be the show-ing made on hay. The crop is officially given at 61,156,000 tons, as compared with 70,798,000 tons a year ago, when the yield was the largest ever recorded.

The loss of 10,000,000 bushels in Kansas is comparatively not important, as the total indicated yield of 124,302,000 bushels winter and spring wheat is only 45,800,000 bushels last year, thus making the present crop larger than the average of the last five or ten years.

All other features of the government report were comparatively unimportant, the total indicated yield of oats, 1,000,000 bushels, is not a very good showing in the corn belt States, viewing the reports

THE BREAKER PULPIT

SUFFERING AND GLORY.

By Rev. Walter Whitten, Ph.D.

"I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."—Romans 1:18.

Upon reading Scripture we are not to form the conclusion that St. Paul here plays in vivid contrast the sorrows of time with the glories of eternity. Probably this glorious meaning is included. But this is surely not all, nor, indeed, the chief assurance of the text. There is a deeper and more blessed meaning, one which should find a practical exposition in our daily life as Christians, and which doubtless St. Paul realized in his own heart and life. Here is expressed the promise and assurance of a glorious future, with the present assurance which some of us should hold, with all our hearts—that the sufferings and troubles of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

By "the glory which shall be revealed in us" St. Paul may have included the "crown of glory which fadeth not away" and the "crowns" of the goodness of God's saints and martyrs in eternity. But his direct reference was to that glorious prize which the faith he was exalted to foresee, when the prisons of his world should be before the cross of Christ, and the greater part of the civilized world would become confessedly Christians—and further still when all the world would become conscious of the love of Christ, and "the knowledge of the Lord should cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea."

St. Paul and these early Christians were the pioneers of Christ's kingdom; in them would be made manifest the glory which they had set forth in their lives, and which, amid carnage and the sufferings of persecution and death, shone forth in all its glorious cause. Also the glory of Christ and of Christ's kingdom shall be their glory long after their bodies had been laid to rest in the grave and their spirits had received to God who gave them. And therefore St. Paul says, in the same chapter, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril or sword?" These were the sufferings which St. Paul recognized as not worthy to be compared with the glory which should be revealed.

Would that we had more of the spirit of these pioneers! The times are changed, but we are exactly equipped to endure even discomfort or inconvenience now, and we should be ashamed if we have become very nominal Christians. But still, these words of encouragement are for us, as much as they were for the Roman Christians of old. Let us, then, within our hearts, sparring on on to greater effort, and encouraging one another, and all works undertaken for the cause of Christ, that small beginnings shall have great endings.

Then in all we undertake for God, for Christ, and for mankind, let nothing discourage us. Patience and perseverance we shall at length overcome all difficulties, and if we are honestly working for God, and for our fellow-men in the Spirit of Christ, in time or in eternity, be revealed to us, and to others, the fruit of our courage of our efforts will be measured, not by the apparent results in the eyes of men, but by the actual success in the eyes of God.

And, as this text supplies us with hope and courage for our work, so also does it supply us with comfort and strength for our own personal sorrows and trials. For, as St. Paul says, "we are saved by hope;" and the sunshine of God's love breaks through the storm clouds of life's bereavements and despair, dispelling our weakness and filling our hearts with courage and strength, or hearts with music, and our lives with the Divine light of God's presence and Divine Spirit which are one. We shall find that we grow strong through suffering, and that the glory of God is revealed to us when we become filled with His love and His strength.

If our hearts respond to the love of Christ, if we are Christians in heart as well as in name, then the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep our hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

We shall be kept by the peace of God, and "the sufferings of this present time"—the sorrow of bereavement, the pain of sickness, the disappointments and trials of daily life will not overwhelm nor crush. For gore and blood of the cross shed, will rest upon us, and the glory, as of a brilliant sunset after a day of storm, will fill our souls with joy and brightness.

When still this glory be revealed in us, which will recompense us for our sorrow and pain, that "the glory will be revealed both here and hereafter. Here, the glory of God in our souls, and there, we come forth from the discipline of sorrow, as gold purified in the fire, shining with a redrous brightness, reflecting the image of God in our souls, and "the glory of God in our souls, and "the glory of God in our souls, and "the glory

A LETTER PRESS.

It Was a Great Bargain, but He Knew It Too Late.

One of the smokers had been exhibiting a diamond pin which he had purchased of a hard up traveler and made at least a hundred dollars on when the gray haired man leaved a sigh and remarked:

"As for me, I never had but one real bargain offered me, and I was foolenough not to take that."

"Something in the way of jewelry?" was asked.

"No; it was a letter press."

"But I don't see how much of a bargain could be offered in that."

"No? Well, I will tell you. I thought I was to love and was writing the girl two letters a day. Six months later, when I knew that I wasn't in love with her, I busted up things, and saved me for touch of promise."

"But you had been careful in your letters not to pledge yourself."

"I told my lawyer that she couldn't exhibit one single letting sentence in any of my letters—that is, say having connection with matrimony."

"Yes."

"But when the suit came to trial she exhibited over forty letters in which I said that I should die if she turned me down, and the jury awarded her $2500 for her broken heart. Yes, sir, and I could have bought that letter press for $7 and had copies of my letters as fast as written and knew what I was up against at the end. Great bargain, great great bargain, and yet I turned it down."—Baltimore American.

THEATRICAL STARS.

Some Famous Ones That Started on the Variety Stage.

Edwin Booth was in his younger days a member of a minstrel company and, unless I am mistaken, appeared in some of the variety shows of that period. He lived to become one of the most noble and dignified figures of his day as well as one of the most distinguished actors that the English speaking race has ever known. Joseph Jefferson was once a minstrel in the early part of his career, and prior to that he and his sister, both mere children, had been wont to perform on Boston Common and pass the hat among the bystanders.

Lotta was known in the mining camps of California and in the early variety theaters of San Francisco long before she came east in the glitter of with money and fame—in dramatic exchanges." John Brougham called her in the legitimate houses of Broadway. William H. Crane was, or play the tambourine in a wandering minstrel company. Nat Goodwin, Lillian Russell and May Irwin came to the front in the early eighties at Tony Pastor's theater. Mr. Goodwin gave imitations of popular actors and lived to become an extremely popular actor himself. Miss Irwin's remarkable humorous gifts were shown in the condensed versions of comic operas that brought Mr. Pastor's establishment to a close, and it was in one of these that Mr. Russell leaped into fame in a single night.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

One must not imagine it is all work and no play with the Labrador folk, either. Far from it. I found that our good old game of football has taken hold in Labrador. The game is played with a ball of sealskin stuffed with grass. The goals are placed much the same as in our own game, and each player is armed with a short hundred ring snake of several thousand of well fished fish hooks and attached to a wooden handle. The best way either be tossed in the sling, stroke or, should opportunity offer, picked up and carried. Rough battles are not barred, and there was a man tossed in the air and pitched headforemost into a snow bank, while pushing, tripping and blocking are all freely indulged in.—Recreation.

Had Time for Sober Thought.

In old Moffat, when a couple applied for a divorce, they were locked up in a cheerless, tryingroof cabin with one dish and one spoon. If, after a month, they had not come to their senses, they got the with, which was reckoned sufficient for after this bundling.

Sneezing Superstitions.

Theophrtus stated that a bridegroom who sneezed was sure to be happy and lucky, while Catullus declared it a good omen if two lovers sneezed.

Filling silos is the order of the day.

Mrs. Robert Trinder, Wm. Shapton, Edmond Shapton and Will Mosey have built silos this year.

Call at the Sentinel office and see a sample of the corn raised on Wm. Burns farm. It will speak for itself.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shapton, Joseph Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Beattie attended the fair at Grand Rapids last week.

George Ager and Edmond Shapton have built large additions to their barns, with cement floors, and mangers, which almost makes one jealous of the cows.

Mary Clark and her Leather, John and Clarence Beattie and Hazel Mills will attend the Charlevoix high school, and others are expected to start later in the season.

We will not attempt to tell all the good things that Barnard has, but come and see us and we will be delighted to show our the fields of sugar beets and corn, orchards and buildings.

Anyone wishing to see how one thousand bushels of the finest variety of apples looks on the trees can do so by calling at Henry Gornell's. It will repay any one to make a trip four miles to see it.

THE SCHOOLS

The School Year Opened Monday With Increased Attendance.

The Charlevoix public schools were opened Monday morning and everything is moving smoothly. Supt DeVoe reports an attendance of 410 in the high school—the largest in the history of the school on the opening day. The normal has 19 students—the largest number ever enrolled in that department. The grammar department has 200 pupils, and the primary 148. Following is the roster of teachers:

Not Soon Enough Begun.

The creation of the Western Michigan Development Bureau was a happy inspiration, but it should have begun its work twenty years ago. We know then so much as we know now concerning the great natural resources of the region involved, and twenty years of energetic work such as that now being done would have diverted some portion of the western bound stream of eastern home seekers that railroad companies and land speculators have been luring toward the Pacific to the eastern shore of Lake Michigan and its contiguous fields of agricultural promise.

This, the year of the Bureau's birth, has been a record year for western Michigan and particularly the northern half of it—embracing that section that was renamed as the Grand Traverse region. We may be pardoned for expressing the belief that the section of the bureau's territory lies closer to the heart of nature in the bestowal of its favors than any other section of Michigan, by reason of the climatic influence of its inland lake shores, and the initial transportation facilities afforded by them.

The present autumn has furnished abundant evidence of this climatic influence in tempering the frost waves that wrought havoc throughout the orchardist state. The enormous products of northern Michigan fields and orchards this year speak eloquently of the abundance of nature's gifts.

But we are late in beginning our campaign of education.

DEVELOPMENT BUREAU

Energetic and Well Directed Efforts in the Matter of Publicity.

At the annual meeting of the West Michigan Development Bureau held at Ludington, Sept. 15th, ten counties were represented, also Mr. Mitchell, representing the M. & N. E. RR. Co., Mr. George of the P. M. and Mr. Hort of the G. T. & I. and Mr. Church of the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. were present.

After reading and approving of the treasurer's and secretary's report, the following officers were elected: President, D. H. Day, of Leelanau Co.; vice president, L. P. Fockett, of Grand Traverse Co.; secretary, T. M. Sawyer, of Mason Co.; treasurer, B. H. Hendel, of Manistee Co.

The directors went over, in detail, with Mr. Howe, the matter of the West Michigan Exhibit, at Chicago, Nov. 20th to Dec 4th. Mr. Howe reported all counties working in harmony, and made an elaborate report of the work that is being done through the advertisement of the bureau, and in order to show that the seed sown by the bureau has already taken root and is springing up and bearing fruit, Mr. Rowe reported that one hundred and forty-four papers of Michigan are now printing, regularly, facts of west Michigan, giving reports of crops raised by individual farmers, the fruit that has been sold in now being harvested by farmers of west Michigan, and illustrating the articles with cuts taken from photographs of the crops and fruit before and after harvesting. Mr. Howe reported that he has requests from the Orange Judd Farmer, The Country Gentleman, The Rural New Yorker and some twelve or fourteen other papers and magazines of national reputation and circulation, for photographs of rural scenes in west Michigan; for this reason, the bureau is asking for photographs, that we may furnish the papers with them, and also have them for illustrations in the advertisement at Chicago and the same in the bulletin.

That your readers may more fully understand the purpose of the West Michigan Development Bureau, and what it is doing, I quote the following from the Bulletin.

PURPOSE

The bureau exists for the purpose of aiding in the development of western Michigan. Its activity is along four coordinate yet distinct lines, i. e.

1. Advertising the natural advantages of western Michigan to an extent sufficient to secure settlers.
2. Sounding the praises of the products of the region so as to cause new demands and open new markets.
3. Striving in behalf of the producer and consumers for the best possible transportation facilities.
4. Conducting an educational campaign designed to increase the wealth producing power of those already inhabitants.

HOME OVERLAND

1. Furnishing the newspaper press with interesting reading regarding the territory covered.
2. Publishing a handsomely illustrated journal containing maps and statements of facts.
3. Making an exhibit of fruit at the United States Land and Irrigation Exposition at Chicago, Nov. 20, Dec. 4
4. Making a series of exhibits in big eastern cities and distributing west Michigan advertising literature at the same.
5. Giving systematic instruction regarding agricultural and horticultural development to the people of the region.

—Capt. Wm. Finucan, of the steamship Manitou, has returned to the bosom of his family.

—M. J. McCann, of St. James, was here Friday in attendance on the school officers convention.

—As an evidence of the high value of a summer residence in Charlevoix we point to the fact that the Jordan cottage, near the Belvedere Hotel, sold last week for $5,000.

—Mischievous boys are already beginning to scratch and deface the surface of the Carnegie library. If apprehended, the perpetrators should be made to feel the full force of the law.

—A. Reynolds, of Rocky Ridge farm, just north of town, brings us a sample of corn cut from his farm, and that is an exhibition at this office. It will compare favorably with the samples from fields in Kansas or Nebraska.

—A Western Michigan Development Bureau bulletin state that Kent county has been admitted to membership in the bureau. We are aware that this accession takes in Grand Rapids, but we wise to inquire if it includes the Grand Rapids Herald or Press?

—The following merchants will close evenings, except Tuesday and Saturday evenings, on and after Oct. 4: L. S. Sice, J. L. Crane, Sarah Emery, F. E. Frazier, M. A. Levinson & Co., H. Bedford, E. A. Jefferies, B. W. Miller, Kalamazoo Furnishing & Tailoring Co., M. Cohen, A. E. Mason.

—H. M. Enos, who has been seriously ill for two months, is out again, and visits the Argus office daily. He is not yet able to work, but is steadily improving in health. Mr. Enos was never a very "hefty" man in avoirdupois, but during the crucial period of his illness, his weight was ninety pounds. Yesterday he tipped the scales at ninety-seven, and his many friends are anxiously watching the gain.

—Singers of note, players of reputation and a large and acceptable program are in store for musical success, "The Girl From U. S. A.," which will be presented at the Charlevoix Theatre Thursday, Sept. 30. The splendid types of characters in the piece will please, especially our own American girl, whose resourcefulness and courage under danger and difficulties cannot fail to inspire you. Yes sirapy causes long lying in bed after the play the words and air of the quartette—"How to Win the Girl You Love."

—The work of placing the manselvon on Michigan and Petoskey avenues will begin today or tomorrow.

—Leslie Crane leaves this week for Ann Arbor, where he will enter the University as a student of civil engineering.

—There was a shimy in the fall apple market last week, owing to the enormous production. The markets are glutted and buyers are laid off until the market looks better.

—A. C. Fessenden and wife, of Boon, Mich., arrived Saturday on a visit to Mrs. Fessenden's father, Wm. Cooper. Mr. Fessenden returned home Monday, but Mrs. Fessenden will remain several weeks.

—Postmaster Meech announces that on account of the new P. M. time table taking effect Sept. 26th, mails will close as follows: South 8:25 a. m.; north 10:45 a. m.; south 1:35 p. m.; north 7:00 p. m.

—The Grand Rapids Press man says that the west Michigan fruit belt ends on the north with Grand Traverse county. The interest of the Grand Rapids Press man is confined to the fruits of a peanut shell. The west Michigan fruit belt ends on the north at the Straits of Mackinac.

—Round Lake Lodge, I. O. O. F., of this city, entertained Past Grand Master Kennedy and a number of brothers from other lodges last week Wednesday night. The festivities lasted until the "wee sma' hours," and the occasion was one of the most enjoyable in the history of the lodge.

—The Michigan conference saw fit to change Hillsdale about in the assignment of ministers, and Rev. Dr. R. A. Wright was appointed to the charge at Niles. Rev. A. F. Tay'or, last year of this city, comes to Charlevoix. He will preach morning and evening next Sunday. Rev. Richard E. Yeomans, from Norwood, is Lake City.

—Capt Sam Burns, of the warden's steamer Chase S. Osborn, was in Detroit last week at conference between Warden Flynn, of the S. Bob commission; Mr. Clark, superintendent of hatcheries; Warden Pierce and Chief Deputy Sabin, to arrange for the fall spawn gathering under the provisions of the new law. As heretofore stated in these columns, the new plan will receive a fair trial.

—The latest disaster occurred one day last week, when Cal Price, coming down Antrim street on his bicycle, collided with the Elston House dog. As big as an ox. Cal landed on the pavement about twenty feet behind the dog. A kid witness to the tragedy shouted: "Is that your dog?" We prefer not to record the answer of Mr. Price. There is a pulse in good operation where the curtain should be drawn.

—A dispatch from Owosso to the Grand Rapids Herald, dated the 15th, tells of tricks that are being worked in Shiawassee county where local option is in force. A portion of the dispatch follows: "The liquor interests are sending men into dry counties as agents of some sort, who visit among the farmers and incidentally mention the liquor question, stating that they live in a 'dry' county and that they are tired of it. Another scheme is for men to go into wet counties, dressed as farmers and state that they are looking for a farm, as they are tired of the 'dry' county and want to sell out where they are and move into a section where their personal liberties will not be interfered with."

—Mrs. C. L. Judd, of Saginaw, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. O. A. Sears, of Park avenue.

—Ava Smith So., last week sold his farm north of town to Simpson Godbolt, of Norwood township. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will remove to Seattle. Mr. Godbolt rents of establishing a chicken ranch on the Charlevoix place.

—Work on the front of the new VanPelt building is seriously delayed by the breaking of several important pieces of terra cotta in shipment. The pieces have to be made at the factory, and will not be ready for a month. Meantime the plasterers are all work.

—Work at the sugar factory preparatory to the "campaign," is showing increased activity. The slicing of the 1909 crop will commence very much more than that of any previous year. It would not be surprising if the length of the sugar campaign would double that of 1908, and there is every indication of good sugar percentage in the crop.

—The big season of 1909 is closed, and the SENTINEL repeats and emphasizes what it has before declared—viz, that, notwithstanding the falling off in business activities, loss had the most prosperous year in its history. This statement is especially based upon comparison with the year ending May 1st, 1908. The question is, shall we, as a community, consider only lately in the interest of the Development Bureau. The clerk has a very observant eye, and remarks that some others would pass by. Friday he called Under-Sheriff Weiker into the vault and start for the door. Then, in a whisper, he unfolded the fact that he found a "blind pig" in his travels. Jeff, who is a mighty good man, colonized himself, opened both ears. Payton then whispered to the officer that he uncovered it in Hayes. Then, after a tuberous silence Jeff pumped it out of Payton that the blind pig was in Tom Strouds barn-yard and that it was northbound. Jeff's desk in the clerk's office has been removed to another room, and he and Payton don't speak.

—Charlevoix will have a band again, and it is proposed to make it a good one. At a meeting Tuesday night an organization was effected as follows: President, Robert Stafford; vice president, Meyer Cohen; secretary, Will Bellinger; treasurer, Hugh Smith; business manager, Mrs. A. S. Baker. A competent director and teacher will be employed. The band will turn out each twenty-four nights pieces and the battery, and most of the members have had experience in band work. It is unnecessary for us to state that the enterprise is one that deserves the encouragement of the public, and especially of the business men. A band is a very important factor in the life and progress of a town. That a town the size of Charlevoix has no band is certainly an indication of back wardness that is inexcusable. Even St. James has a band; so has Northport, Suttons Bay and Traverse City. The business men of Charlevoix should look up this enterprise.

THE NEW POSTOFFICE

Van Pelt's new building on Bridge street will contain the post office about the beginning of the new year. A telegram from Washington last Thursday settled the matter.

This will give Charlevoix the best postoffice north of Traverse City, and one of the best in the State of its class. The ground floor and basement will be leased by the department for a period of ten years. The R. F. D. outfit will go below, leaving the ground floor entire for the postoffice. The lobby will be two feet wider and about fifteen feet longer than in the present quarters.

The change involves the enlargement of the box section, which will be done in harmony with present equipment, which is first-class. An important change will be made, and one that will be appreciated by Charlevoix people. The space between the top of the box and window section and the ceiling will be filled in with glass. This arrangement will permit an open lobby and access to box boxes and drawers all day Sunday at all seasons of the year. The postoffice will, when occupied, be a credit to the city, and one of which we may justly be proud!

In connection with this subject it is not out of place to say that in all probability, within the year 1910 Charlevoix will have free city mail delivery. This year the receipts of the office almost reached the figures required by the regulations to secure free delivery, and if the next year shows the same increase as this year, which may safely be looked for, the limit will be reached and passed by a good margin.

—The campaign for anti-local option in some of the counties where contrary two years ago is on in most earnest. The fight will be specially noticed in Wexford and Oakland counties, whence have issued charges and counter charges for and against local either side, as to the value of the place of prohibition on the general business and moral condition of the communities. If the people of Cadillac and Pontiac show by any large vote that they approve or disapprove of the plan which has been in force there for two years, it will be a criterion that will have great weight for or against the adoption of the law in counties where local option has not yet been attempted. In military strategy the principal object is to deceive the enemy. The brewery distillery organization is sending its energies in that direction, and it will resort to any means to accomplish its purpose.

—Petoskey News—One of the pleasant little incidents of the recently closed Emmet county fair did not show for itself, either in the programme, nor yet in the premium lists, except during the forenoon, and but few will understand just what is meant when they read that a free dinner was given Mrs. Sarah Scroggie for her services. Mrs. Scroggie is 83 years of age, and is as chipper and bright as though thirty years younger, and has a memory unimpaired, and full of valuable history. She was a brother, William Burns, aged 81, living at Oil Springs, Canada, who is about as lively as is Mrs. Scroggie, and it delights that old gentleman to write to his sister, thinking it will be about how they are he, and the amount of work he can do, so Mrs. Scroggie is good humored retaliation made some yards of the lass and sent it to the fair, and will delight to send a copy of the list to her brother. About the most remarkable thing about it is that Mrs. Scroggie never wore a pair of glasses, not even at the delicate lace making. Last Sunday she walked to dinner at the home of her nephew, Dean S. Burns, and in the evening walked home, something the mainstage of any young or old person.

He did not dare communicate this story even to his sister; for if she knew anything he feared to poison her existence by telling her, and if she knew it he had not the courage to listen to the sequel. Perhaps no other experience in life produces a more profound shock than a discovery like that upon which David had so suddenly stumbled. It leads to despair or to broken-hearted, and ruined a life of highest promise has been suddenly wrecked by it. Who he blunded now this mystery the dove slipped past the young man almost unnoticed; he was so deep in self-absorption into another, and one of a character so unlike himself, thinking he could solve everything.

He tried to look forward to the future with hope. But how can a man hope for heaven, when all his soul-corn has been destroyed? If his faith—or was that what hope was there that he could be better?

It made incomprehensible resolves to take up the duties of life where he had left off when that hope was shattered. Hinds which life in the dust where there are hope.

Poverty was drawing him irresistibly to himself, he was a coward, the outer circle of a vortex, of which she was the center, and he was the outer circle, and he was the circle will feel the farewell glance of a man, who, glowed before his imagination, attracted him like a powerful magnet. It was into that he was drawn, to know where she was, but he felt that he could find her in the uttermost parts of the earth by yielding himself to the impulse which had awakened in his heart.

"A dark veil of mystery hangs over my past. My present is full of misery and sorrow. I know not if the future has any joy in store for me," he said to himself as the vessel was in the roadstead drew.

Without so much as a word of farewell he left the ship, and in the gathering dusk and sleeted in pursuit of the bride about than floated like a will-o'-the-wisp across his inner eyes.

A feeling of exaltation and relief seized him as he left the place made dark and lonely by the knowledge of that which seems through which he had passed, the sense of the evening soothed his perturbed spirit, and he was almost at peace with himself upon him with eyes that twinkled as if in sympathy.

CHAPTER VII.

Although David did not know the exact route the girl had taken, he felt certain that he could overtake her. He felt that it would be easier enough to pass him in that scarcely-settled region, and so he turned his face in the direction in which the cottages visibleshed when he

"Well, well!" he said, "so you could not resist the temptation! Ha! ha! No wonder! It's only every young fellow behind the plow-tail that has a fortune thrust under his nose. Shove your good sense. I was right, I always am. I knew you were the bright a man to hide your light under a half b-b-bushel—a man who is a gratefu appreciation of her courtesy. Stand and his hole filled her with a new happiness.

The discord evanished in the Quaker's mind by the courtesness of the man. He was more than offer by the beauty and grace of the gypsy. When he looked at her, when he was most conscious of her presence, he felt a happiness which compensated for all that he had suffered or had. He did not stop to ask what its nature was. He gave direction to the whole life had in those few hours since his meeting with the stranger, so utterly with the idea of seeking a man who had been long absent from the place and a long lapse of memory. His old life was at an end, and he felt that he was about to be in a vacuum, where all his mind was vaguely occupied. This epoch of his experience was superimposed upon the preceding, and blotted out certain portions of things purchased at the delicatessen. Every day massive goes out with a small hand satchel at the dinner hour and this time traveling bag may be utilized to bring in a small platter of beef and a quarter of a pound of vegetable. Even those their eyes to this breaking of the rules, and between the paper bag diet and bringing in dinner cooked at the little restaurant around the corner where you can get a dinner for 25 cents, it is possible to excite the most rigid economies in your one room and good hotel.

OUR FLAG AT TOP OF WORLD.

By Dr. George Alex. Peck.

Nothing shall be impossible unto you.—Matthew 17: 20.

There is a new flag at the top of the world. It pleases one vanity that it is the Stars and Stripes, but it might have been Dutch or English or Italian, and the lesson would be the same.

That new flag at the pole is man's flag. It is not "man national." It belongs to mankind. It stands for the aspiring, boundless, conquering, adventure spirit of man. And it is fresh illustration of the great phrase of the ancient scripture, which holds its to write the word "impossible" against any undertaking.

Such is the first lesson of this new achievement. Who shall dare set the limits to man's flight or bounds to his ambition, or brake to his soul? Not only is it true that what man has done he can do, but as he moves, because he is older and bolder and better than he was at first, he can do more, because he is stronger than he was at first, and that he was like a boy growing up, and growing into a man, and the top of his own soul and claim a change of its climate.

But what better off are we with a new flag at the pole? Not much, perhaps, but there is a different product. Man is no less territory worth annexing, no nearer to the end of his labors, or forests to cut. There is the satisfaction of being able to say that it is "arrived." But there is more than that. The results of such defiant daring are larger for having conquered so much. The results are larger for having conquered so much. The results are larger for having conquered so much. The results

IN THE NAVY

A Charlevoix Boy Doing Valiant Service in a Crack Battleship.

[We are permitted to print the following letter from Leslie W. Beattie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beattie, of Marion, and grandson of the late Capt. Wm. Holmes. He enlisted in the navy in February last, spending four months in the training station at Norfolk, Va. He was transferred in June to the battleship Louisiana, entering the dynamo room at once, where he is studying and practicing electrical engineering. He is also a student of the International Correspondence School of Scranton, Pa. He made his first cruise to Boston, spending July 4th there, returning in August to the Virginia coast for target and battle practice.]

I should have answered sooner, but I have been so busy during target practice and what time I did have to myself I was so tired I didn't feel like writing.

I had 16-hour watches in the dynamo room day and night, and when I was off watch in the day time, I had to help at something else, so I had to get my sleep whenever I get a chance; at least, I went to sleep every time I got a chance.

During target practice certainly is a busy time, but we made a good record; better than ever before, I understand. Our after 12 inch turret made a world's record, which was 16 shots and 16 hits in 1 minute and 55 seconds.

The target is made of canvas about 16 feet square fixed on a raft. The range is about 5000 yards, a little better than a mile. The ship is not still by any means when the firing is done. We are steaming by the target at the rate of about 15 miles an hour. I was on the 7 inch battery, as I told you before. In loading a 7 inch gun, the charge (2 shell which weighs 105 lbs and two bags of smokeless powder 50 lbs.) is loaded on a tray, which a man lifts up into the breech of the gun and two men ram the charge into the gun with a long rammer; and then the gun captain closes the plug or breech and yells "ready" to the point or, and when he gets on the target he fires. When the gun is fired it recoils 18 inches, or, as you would say, it kicks back 18 inches. It comes back in a heavy coiled spring on the under side of the gun, which pushes the gun back into position.

I pity the sailor who don't get out of the way of the gun when it is fired, because he will surely fall and fall hard if it over hits him. There are 2 pointers on each gun; one on each side. The one on the right frame it right and left, and the one on the left frame it vertically; and it is he who does the firing, built in the middle of the gun (10,000 lbs) the pointers change places, which gives both pointers a chance at firing 5 or 5 shots each.

These guns are all fired by electricity. I was one of the firemen on the tray in loading. There are twelve 7 inch guns in all, 6 on each side. You can notice them in the picture, the guns that are nearest to the water line. Each gun fired 10 shots or 120 shots in all, and made about 90 per cent hits.

Well, the next thing was battle practice, which is a little different from target practice. Instead of firing one gun at a time, all the guns on one broadside at the ship were fired about 12 in, four 8 in., six 7 in and ten 3 in.

Just imagine the noise of about that gun through the air when all these guns are fired. A 12 in. shell weighs 850 lbs., and 3 in weighs 200 lbs., 7 in. weighs 105 lbs. and 3 in about 15 lbs., which is about 5,000 lbs. in all—nearly 3 tons. A 12 in. charge of smokeless powder weighs 350 lbs., 8 inch 100 lbs., 7 inch 50 lbs., or about 2,250 lbs. in all. I understand it costs about $1,000 to fire a 12 inch gun. I never heard how much it costs to fire any of the rest.

We had day and night battle practice. My station for battle practice was on a searchlight, so I wasn't on the 7 inch battery.

The target for battle practice is larger than the one used for record target practice, and it was fixed on an old torpedo boat, (that was going to retire, also) and the range was great er. Each gun fired 5 shots in battle practice. One of the shots hit the old torpedo boat and before we could get to it and see how many hits we made, the old torpedo boat had partly sunk. But the surprise from the other ships gave us 75 per cent hits for sinking the target. Well, everything went off smoothly and there was no accident.

The excitement is all over, and things are all quieted down. I think we coal ship in a few days, and then we go to New York for a little while. I think I will try for the electrical school. I don't know whether I will get it or not.

The weather is quite comfortable here at present, although I as down below most of the time and very seldom go up where there is any weather. I am all bleached out and look like a ghost also quite sick at what I did a year ago.

Cause For Congratulation.

A St. Louis gentleman of a practical knowledge of things, who spent the summer here, recently remarked in the hearing of the writer: "In my mind there is no question about the future of Charlevoix. It does not bear the ear-marks of a boom, yet it seems to possess a quality of growth that does not diminish. I do not think the time will ever come when Charlevoix will go backward."

The gentleman was right; the growth of Charlevoix is not of the mushroom or balloon sort. The bottom will never fall out of it by reason of the exhaustion of its natural resources. It has in its own safe keeping a paid-up insurance policy against collapse. There is nobody in Charlevoix who is anxious to unload his holdings, but, on the other hand, wealthy people do not hesitate to invest their money in permanent improvements.

How many of the "industrial" towns of Northern Michigan have done or are doing what Charlevoix has done and is doing in street improvement? Not one north of Traverse City, and we will not except that if reckoned proportionate to population.

How many Northern Michigan towns can show up sales on their business streets at $25 per front foot? And yet that is part of last week's real estate record in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix is not booming; it is growing, and its growth is the acquirement of the sort of bone and sinew and tissue that remains.

Charlevoix has more miles of paved streets and cement sidewalks, more and better shade trees, and side parks than any town north of Traverse City in this peninsula, and it owns the best public park property in the territory named, not excepting Traverse City.

The future of Charlevoix is not handicapped by a time limit on its source of life-sustaining product. It experiences no "spurts," but it grows, and it will continue to grow in strength and beauty long after the present generation has gone hence.

The Girl From U. S. A.

The new musical comedy drama, "The Girl From U. S. A.," which is due at the Charlevoix Theatre Thursday, Sept. 30, carries the audience around the world, as its scenes are laid in France, Turkey and China. It has an intense love story, a catchy type of comedy, and delightful musical numbers that leave no place for cloud all through its three acts. A capable company of singers and players and a bevy of pretty chorus girls in ravishing costumes, who have been receiving flattering press comments in other places visited, will give the picture its final performance here. The musical numbers are especially mentioned as affording keen pleasure.

The Northern Michigan Transportation company has purchased 300 acres at Onekama for resort purposes.

Robert Price, a farmer over in Eaton township, has sold his crop of fall apples for a thousand dollars. His winter fruit will also bring him a big bundle of money.

One of the largest farm deals in some time was closed lately. Henry Wilhelm bought the owner of Harvey Avery's place, south of Traverse City. The consideration for the 160 acres was $10,000.

Harbor Springs Republican: Mr. Sunts, manager of the Bell telephone company here for the past eighteen months, left Sunday for East Jordan to take charge of that office. Homer Letts, of that city takes the same position here.

The Northern Michigan Transportation company has offered to carry all the fruit that will be used by the West Michigan Development Bureau at the Chicago exposition free of charge, which will mean the expense of loading the exhibit in Chicago.

Fire early Thursday practically destroyed the village of Wexford. The damage will run one hundred thousand dollars. Ten stores were destroyed, besides several residences. Buckley sent a bucket brigade but all was in vain on account of the wind. The Wexford inhabitants will probably move to Buckley.

The potato growing farmers of Antrim county will hold a meeting at Bellaire Oct. 7th, to the court house. The pledging of the potato crop for not less than 50c per bushel is the question of importance before the Michigan farmers now. Plans for canvassing the counties will soon be complete and meetings held so the farmers will understand the plan.

Central Lake Torch: It is estimated that the potato crop of Antrim county has gained about 17 per cent since the last census was taken. It is that time the value of farm products has increased nearly eighty per cent. Since the census of 1890 the gain in population has been about forty per cent. The value of farm products in those thirteen years has more than trebled.

Central Lake Torch: As illustrating the difference between sprayed and unsprayed orchards, A. E. Sage's orchard which was sprayed brought him $70 a barrel more than was paid for fruit from unsprayed orchards. Out of fifty two barrels of apples packed he got between second and twelve bushels of culls, which the fruit taken from an unsprayed orchard on the same farm ran three-fifths to culls.

The state tax apportionment has been completed at the auditor general's office to Lansing. It totals a valuation of $1,734,100,000, and a tax of $1,827,170.74. The valuation and tax of Charlevoix and neighboring counties is: Antrim, valuation $7,500,000, tax $7,546.10; Benzie, valuation $7,000,000, tax $12,310.13; Charlevoix, valuation $6,000,000, tax $20,519.95; Emmet, valuation $9,000,000, tax $27,272.52; Grand Traverse, valuation $19,000,000, tax $34,184.80; Kalkaska, valuation, $3,000,000, tax $12,019.15; Leelanau, valuation $3,000,000, tax $10,258.44.

Fred C. Warner, a grower of small fruits near Old Mission, Mich., reports having obtained 115 cases of strawberries from a patch covering one-half acre of ground. These berries were sold to the nearby fruit canners at 75c a case, a total of $75.75. The cases were furnished, the picking cost 25c a case, which was $28.60 for the crop. The net profit, therefore, from this one-half acre was $46.35. The yield was not a large one nor the price a fancy one. The figures simply show what the profits of small fruit growing are when the conditions are only average.

Petoskey Record: The Colonial, the beautiful hotel that was one of the places of special interest to all who took the trip along the inland route, because of the handsome building and fine situation, commanding a view of Burt Lake, was completely destroyed by fire Sunday night. The fire, the origin of which is not known, started at about 10 o'clock, and there being little fire protection afforded, the building was soon a mass of ruins. The electric power plant and adjoining buildings were all destroyed. The exact amount of the loss is not yet known, but it will be close to $50,000. The buildings were insured for $20,000.

Traverse City Eagle: Mike Litney returned last evening after an absence of several months, which he spent aboard the tug Maggie, of Sutton's Bay. Mr. Litney succeeded in exacting the north pole, but found no traces of either Cook or Peary, and believes that neither one reached there. The Maggie was in good shape on her return and was laid up for the season at Sutton's Bay. Mr. Litney didn't inform his friends at Sutton's Bay of the fact that he had reached the pole, consequently there was no demonstration there, but his friends gave him a very hearty welcome here.

The following from the Traverse City Eagle shows what the apple business means in the Grand Traverse region: The barrel shortage in this locality is causing the local cooper shops a great amount of worry and they are making every effort to cope with the situation, but the best they can do still leaves them far behind in their orders. George W. Jardine is making a strenuous effort to fill his orders and in order to do so has nearly doubled his working force in addition to his daily and night shifts can be obtained. At present he has 15 men in his shop, and today he expects to turn out 1,000 barrels. Saturday he made 822, and Tuesday he will have a force at work large enough to turn out 1200, which figure he proposes to maintain throughout the season.

Boyne Journal: There seems to be no question but that the Beulah Home struck a good thing when they secured the right to the manufacture of Cocoa Cereal. Wherever it is sent orders follow rapidly. They are a long way behind on orders now and the boys are pushing with all their might to catch up but they never can. Yesterday they turned out 1080 pounds and had set their stakes for 1500 pounds today. They have got things to running in fine shape now so that the product is always even and perfect. As an evidence of the growing demand for Cocoa Cereal, Mr. Swift informs the Journal that he has just received a letter from the Hygeia Commission Co. of Wichita, Kan., asking for the state agency for that state. It is freely predicted by many of the leading business men of the city that Cocoa Cereal will soon supplant all other breakfast drinks and that it will do it entirely on its merits. They have such faith in the future of it that they would like to have a block of stock in a company to own it.

Cadillac News: Potatoes are being sold here in Cadillac and at Traverse City and at other points in this section of the state this week for from 35 to 40 cents per bushel. It will be remembered that the Society of Equity at the recent state meeting of that organization in Traverse City formally adopted resolutions providing that no potatoes should be sold for less than 50 cents per bushel. It is not strange that this resolution should be non-effective here in Wexford county, as the Society of Equity has few members here, but it isn't just what was expected to see potatoes selling at Traverse City a few cents under Cadillac prices. In the vicinity of the former city the organization that resolved on the subject is very strong. It will probably be found true that the law of supply and demand will finally decide the value of potatoes. United action on the part of potato growers will help quite a lot in the direction of fair prices, but it isn't at all probable that the terms of a former resolution will be emulated in many potato deals in Michigan throughout the coming potato buying and selling season.

Two Full Seasons of Satisfactory Wear
When we sew the Wooltex label into a Coat, Suit, Skirt, or Dress, it is our solemn promise that that garment will give you two full seasons of satisfactory wear.
There is no question, no room for doubt. The guarantee is universal—absolute.
We limit ourselves to making the kind of garments that can be guaranteed.
And we guarantee every garment we make.
Wooltex TRADE MARK FASHION FAULTLESS

For Well Dressed Women
The Wooltex mark, shown above, is your assurance of more than wear alone.
It is your assurance also, that you are getting the latest, the best, the utmost in style.
We go further and do more than any other maker of women's garments to make Wooltex supreme in style.
We spend, annually, $50,000 in maintaining a permanent style organization.
At the head of the organization is the famous Madame Savaric, of Paris.
Four times each year Madame Savaric comes to the Wooltex factory with trunk after trunk of imported models.
Four times each year she confers with our eight master designers and evolves the Wooltex styles.
What Madame Savaric brings from Paris is modified, improved, refined to meet the dictates of American good taste.
Hence, styles are distinctive American styles.
Wherever you go in a Wooltex garment you may be confident that the style is right. It is right at home. It is right abroad.
It has the charm of newness always; but it is exaggerated, freakish, never.

Plenty of Birds.

If we allow for an instant the existence of the English sparrow of our country, we have the average length of a robin's tail, then, can safely boast, if we could compare the numbers, filling members in a most orderly manner, like soldiers on parade, would make a line approximate long as Suez. This earth is much too small for such a line. You might as well try to count Lake Superior and much would extend from the north pole to the south pole along the whole length of North and South America. It would continue the form of the equator they would encircle the globe ten times.—D. Lange, in the Atlantic.

THE FEEDER.

The overhead rack is a poor place when it comes to feed for sheep, which being an unnatural way for the animal to feed, it causes a great deal of dust, which is a bad thing.

Stage For Lambs.

Silage may be fed to lambs to finishing advantage. It must be remembered that 80 per cent of corn silage is water, consequently the lambs fed on it have other feed. About two pounds of corn silage and half pound of dry hay for roughage is a satisfactory ration.

Feed For Young Pigs.

Young pigs need feed richer in protein than other feed. Skim milk, the second milking of milk, clover or rape pasture, and along with that feed a little corn and middlings. Skim milk is not obtainable, supply the milking products by the use of wheat shorts or one pound of dried blood mixed with other foods of good quality, which makes an excellent pig feed.

Summer Feed For Sheep.

During the summer season do not confine your sheep entirely to one undesirable food, but change from affect. Have a good shade for them during the hot dry season. Sow a patch of rape for them, which will be ready to turn on when the pasture becomes short and dry in the fall. If your sheep are properly taken care of during the summer you will have them crowding inside, and your cross will vary in good condition, ready to supply a set of vigorous lambs the next spring.

Feeding Floors Necessary.

Feeding floors are good things. The sheep feeds the hay from them, the animal manure does no harm back of barns. It is a fine thing to feel assured that it is not any more natural for a hog to pick his feed up out of the dirt and mud and manure as it is natural to do so, although circumstances have in many cases forced him to adapt himself to such conditions. Covered feeding floors are not a necessity in most instances as the open kind which are sheltered on the north and west. The cows feed on the washed off and kept clean and wholesome more readily. A feeding floor sixteen feet wide and of length sufficient to accommodate the lots that are fed and high enough to clean off without the refuse piling up at the side is not only a great convenience but a profitable addition to the feed lot.—Iowa.

A LOST ART.

What was the foundation of metals from which the Egyptians, Aztecs and the people of Peru fashioned their tools and arms? Though each of these nations reached a high state of civilization, none of them ever discovered the art of making the tool that the soft of all these countries was largely impregnated with it. It must have been in a combination of metals than had the temper of steel, and the secret of the combination is lost to mankind.

Many attempts tried to discover the lost art by analyzing a cubed found in an ancient tomb of mine, and if by most some of it was that it appeared to be a combination of a small portion of tin with copper. No doubt known way of combining these two metals will give the hardness of steel, as these must have been something else in the cubed which made them steel.

And these ancient races were able to engrave upon copper so that it resisted the temper of the finest steel produced at the present day by the most scientific process. With their bronze and copper instruments they were able to quarry and hew the hardest stone, such as granite and porphyry, and even cut emeralds. The highest possible must have independently discovered the art of tempering copper, and if it is a secret that baffles modern scientists of the whole civilized world.—New York Times.

Lemon Omelet.

Put the yolks of four eggs into a bowl with a tablespoonful of sugar. Beat until light and add the grated rind of a lemon. Whip the whites of the eggs to a stiff fresh and mix lightly with the yolks. Then stir in a fourth of a teaspoonful of baking powder. Pour in the omelet pan, in which a tablespoonful of butter has been melted, and bake in a moderate oven for ten minutes. Sprinkle the top of the omelet in half, put on a hot platter, fold the other half over the top between the layers, and serve at quickly as possible.

Lemon Jelly.—Take one half cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of butter, the juice and the rind of one lemon and two well beaten eggs. Beat together and set over the fire until thick.—Delineator.

Bliss.

"Sure! Our anniversary, Margaret, dear" (pretending to have remembered it all the time).

"No such thing" (frigidly). "It's the day you promised to wash the log on this old kitchen table."

Lysander paled, tried to assume bliss at the anniversary chinaware, failed utterly, and the fireworks were on.—Judge's Library.

BIG STORM HITS SOUTH.

A furious tropical storm swept along the gulf coast Monday afternoon and night, doing great damage to property. Four lives are known to have been lost. The storm extended along the coast from Pensacola, Fla., to New Orleans. The cotton crop was badly damaged. Dispatches from New Orleans late at night report that the wind which accompanied the storm had lost some of its intensity and measurably moved inland. The property loss in that city will exceed $100,000. Telegraphic communication with New Orleans was cut off for several hours.

Extensive damage was reported in Mobile, Ala. At 12:45 a. m. the water along the wharves in that city was near the high point reached in the big storm of 1906. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad station in Mobile was inundated. Thousands of persons assembled along the water front. In Mobile part washed the riding waters. The Illinois Central Railroad between McComb City, Miss., and New Orleans was under water. A large portion of railway track has been swept away. The most threatening of the definite advices received came from Pensacola, Fla., where the wind at dark had attained a velocity of sixty miles an hour.

The storm struck Biloxi, Miss., at 3 o'clock Monday morning, the wind increasing until it reached a velocity of sixty miles an hour at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. It is estimated that $40,000 to $50,000 property damage has been suffered. Seven hundred and fifty feet of the track of the Gulf Coast Traction Company was washed away, and another hundred feet is gone from the sidewalks' Home and to the eastward of Gulfport. The northern storm is to show itself along the North Carolina coast in the afternoon. Many fires, four and five masted schooners, fishing the tempest, were reported coming up under the lee of Cape Lookout in search of a safe harbor.

NEW ALASKA GOLD RUSH.

Thousands Stampede for Innoko River Country—Pay Dirt Found.

Miners returning from Nome, Alaska, on the steamer Tenino Monday, just arrived in Seattle, bring confirmation of the reports received from the Innoko country concerning the stampede of thousands that is under way to the new gold fields on that stream and its tributary, the Iditarod. Fred Dubois, who has returned after making a rich clean-up on Yankee creek, states that the reports received from the Innoko country are not exaggerated. "Every hole that has been put down has struck pay dirt," he said. "A friend of mine staked a claim and is that there are no single big guns, but all pans are running up and paying good. When we were coming down the Innoko and the Innoko I saw hundreds of men coming down to the new diggings."

573,551 MORE ALIENS IN U. S.

Immigration Figures for Past Fiscal Year Made Public.

A net increase of 573,551 in the population of the United States by the arrival and departure of aliens is recorded during the last fiscal year, against an increase of 209,867 the previous year. There was a falling off in immigration from 782,870 aliens during the previous fiscal year to 751,786 the past year and the usual inward passenger movement, representing immigrant and nonimmigrant aliens, entered, aliens departed and United States citizens arrived, numbered 1,602,392. The aliens residing abroad and making temporary trips to the United States are classed as nonimmigrant aliens. There were 524,685 aliens, including the nonimmigrants, admitted into this country during the past fiscal year. These figures are given in the August immigration report of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

WILL L. THOMPSON IS DEAD.

Obituary Was Author of "Jesus Is Calling" Hymn.

WIll L. Thompson, aged 62, probably the most noted hymn writer of the present time, is dead. The end came in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, and the body was brought to Cleveland, Ohio, for burial. His most popular sacred composition is "Softly and Tenderly Jesus Calling," while "Come Where the Lilies Bloom" and "Gathering Shells From the Seashore," are pieces that brought him fame. Until recently he was president of the Thompson Music Company, Chicago. He became ill on his return from a European trip.

Former Constitution Shot to Death.

As a result of a shooting at Freeport, Ky., Herbert Gillaspie, a former member of the City Council and Isabel Bates received two bullet wounds during the same fight. The police are looking for Albert Bolanding who is alleged to have shot Bates, the latter acting as peacemaker.

A package of 11,259 in bills, left as a mail box near the Brooklyn bridge in New York, was passed by thousands unnoticed. It was found by a Brooklyn science-stricken thief, addressed to the owners of the bills, and he promised to pass saying the man could not face his Johnson.

TAFT'S LONG SWING AMONG THE PEOPLE

STRENGTH IS GAINED BY REST

With Central Bank as His Theme, Executive Considers Plan of Financial Changes.

On his fifty-second birthday President Taft entered on the first stage of his 12,000-mile tour of the United States. His train formed the second section of the regular express from Boston to Albany on the Boston and Albany division of the New York Central Railroad. The first speech of the President's series of addresses to the people was made in Boston, the last to be made at Hicksville, Va., Nov. 10. The next day the President will be back at his work in Washington. When the President left Chicago he passed over what Eastern people call the political borderland. Then his real work of enlisting strength for his policies as he outlines them second to begin.

In addressing 2,000 persons at a banquet in Boston, on the eve of his trip across the continent, President Taft predicated a great increase in the commerce of the country. Leading the discussion of the tariff, of railroad control, and of the curbing of corporations to be explained in detail in later addresses, Mr. Taft spoke more fully of the changes sought to be under the law of Cape Lookout in search of a safe harbor.

The plan to establish a central bank as a safeguard against such financial panics as that of 1907 was one of the chief subjects considered by the President. There are two dangers, which may be avoided in this plan, he said, both of which had been explained to the President by Senator Aldrich. Control of this institution, giving great power over the financial welfare of the nation, must be kept out of the hands of Wall street interests, he asserted. The other danger which the President said must be prevented is that the control bank, if formed, should be manipulated for political purposes.

Mr. Taft took occasion, in his brief reference to the tariff in continuing the efforts of certain public men to stir up sectional strife in calling upon the West to organize against the East. His address was marked by praise of Senator Aldrich.

BALLINGER LETS I. H. GLAVIS GO

L. H. Glavis, chief of the field division of the general land office with headquarters at Seattle, has been dismissed from the service by telegraph by Secretary Ballinger of the Interior. A. Christensen, chief of the field division of the general land office at Portland, Ore., has been placed in temporary charge of the Seattle division. The summary removal of Mr. Glavis was in accordance with authority given Secretary Ballinger in a letter to him from President Taft, who, in directing the dismissal, vindicated Secretary Ballinger and other officials of the interior department of the charges preferred against them by Glavis in connection with the so-called Cunningham group of coal land cases in Alaska.

BUILD 3-MILE TRAIN TUNNEL

Great Northern Carried to Cost About $1,000,000.

The Great Northern Railway Company announces that contracts for the cutoff on the line between Great Falls, Mont., and Bell have been awarded. About twenty-two miles of rails ay will be constructed. A tunnel 18,000 feet long will be included, and the cut will be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. The change is made to the company to lower grades for through traffic from the Burlington system.

TAFT LAUDS BALLINGER.

President Taft upholds Richard A. Ballinger, Secretary of the Interior, on all points involved in the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy in regard to the conservation of the natural resources. The President's support of his cabinet officer is set forth at length in a letter written by the President to Secretary Ballinger and given out by Mr. Taft on his special train Wednesday afternoon.

The letter contains no direct reference to Gifford Pinchot, head of the bureau of forestry, Mr. Taft, so his friends say, would regret much to lose Pinchot, but he tells that the time had come for him to take a decided stand in the controversy. Mr. Taft himself denies that there has been any lack, shifting from the declared policy of the Roosevelt administration in favor of a conservation of natural resources. Without bringing any direct charge he makes it plain that several things done by the Roosevelt administration along the lines of the conservation were without authority of law, but that the present administration intends to keep absolutely within the statutes.

That has been Secretary Ballinger's answer all along to the accusations of Pinchot and his friends that he is out of sympathy with the Roosevelt policy and in favor of corporate and individual exploitation of the public domain in contravention of the conservation policy of the future. In my judgment he is the best friend of the policy of conservation of natural resources who insists that every step taken in the direction should be within the law, and who, believing that a change in policy ought to be made, will not inconsistent with a whole hearted and bona fide interest, and enthusiasm in favor of the conservation policy.

The President orders Secretary Ballinger to dismiss L. R. Glavis of the land division of the interior department office. It was Glavis who made the formal charge against Ballinger, that the Secretary was "disloyal" to Roosevelt, on the ground that he has been disloyal to his superior officer, which has an substantial evidence to sustain his contention. Glavis stated briefly in August and went over his charges against Ballinger.

ODDS & ENDS OF SPORT

The world's record to pale by pacers was broken in the brother and sister Lady Maud and Hedgewood Hugo paced the mile in 2:12¾.

The Phoenix Driving Club held exciting races at Phoenixville, Pa., during which splendid records were made and interesting individual sport inspired.

At Erie, Pa., Harvey Oldfield, with shifting Nelson as a passenger, established a new record for a half-mile track by taking the mile in 1:52 1-5. His previous record was 1:54 2-5.

James H. Keene's Sweep won the twenty-two thousand dollars Futurity at Sheepshead Bay. The winner received $17,000 of the total stakes. The time was 1:31 4-5. About 15,000 people witnessed the race.

C. K. G. Billings has returned from his Kentucky trock together with his string of racing horses, which has been exhibited before crowdy. Among the stakes is the champion, Uhlan mare, Lou Dillon, 1:24¾.

At Savoia, N. Y., Grasmere easily won the United States Hotel stake, defeating Walter, the champion, in two odd. This is Walter's first defeat after six straight victories.

Poor Lawson broke his own record in two-mile Western championship race for professional men on the bicycle track at Salt Lake City. He time was 3:5 ot 2-5. Old record, 2:43. Also beat at Cheyenne, Wyoming Corbett (William Rothwell), of Denver, backed out Maggy Shook, of Cheyenne, in the fifteenth round. Corbett showing much of the champion he displayed when he took the championship from Terry McGovern.

PRESIDENT TAFT ON NATIONAL PROBLEMS.

There are two indispensable requirements they plan to be adopted that voting a central bank of issue. First, that control of the monetary system shall be kept free from Wall street; second, that it shall not be manipulated for political purposes.

* * *

I hope for a satisfactory money system before the end of this administration. We come most our rest before the storm shall show us again its back and utterly inadequate character.

* * *

Throughout this country there is free trade of the freest character, and due to this, the prosperity of the West, especially in agriculture, is even more pronounced than that of the East.

* * *

We are all in the same business boat. Prosperity of one section redounds to the prosperity of the other.

DIE CROSSING DEATH VALLEY.

Bodies of Two Miners Found and Third Man Probably Is Lost.

The bodies of Emery Hodge and Tom Hyde, two miners who perished in this thirst, while attempting to cross Death Valley, were found Saturday four miles west of Shidar, Cal., by members of the searching party scouring the desert for a broker of President Roosevelt of the National Seeing Mine which disappeared from view for three weeks. The men whose bodies were found left Rhyolite late in August and started across Death Valley, where the thermometer reaches 136 degrees in the shade during the summer months. They carried two canteens of water each, but this supply must have been exhausted before they had gone half way. Crazed by thirst they wandered about until they were overcome by the heat and lay down to die. Hodge was a brother of Sheriff Hodge, of Rhyolite, Nev., from his mining claim in the Panamint range. He left his companions three weeks ago. Men from all the desert camps have searched for the third miner, but he has took with him when he started across the valley was found a few days ago, but there was no other trace of the man.

BULLET IN HIS BRAIN, RECOVERS

With a 32-caliber bullet imbedded in the center of his brain, Fred Brown with suicidal intent more than two weeks ago, Frank Blaine left the Casualty Hospital in Washington, D. C., Monday, good as new. Brown, who said he suffered no discomfort other than pain in the head and sick and he talked rationally at all times. The bullet imbedded in his brain have been observing Blaine closely, said they detected no ill effects from the bullet in the brain and it is their belief that he will not suffer from it in future years. As for physical effects the young man's head showed the bullet imbedded in the center of his brain.

Gov. Johnson Under the Knife.

Governor John A. Johnson underwent an operation at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn., for adhesions to the abdomen and slight bowel, caused by a previous operation for appendicitis.

Infantile Paralysis Spreads.

Seven new cases of infantile paralysis and two deaths were reported to the health department yesterday. The health department records show a total of 170 cases reported, with thirty-six deaths.

Cigarette Barred in Will.

The will of W. H. O. Grewel gives his grandson, Grewel W. E. Acker, of Atlantic Highlands, N. J., an estate valued at $20,000, provided he does not smoke a cigarette until he is 25 years old. The child is 7 years old.

ROBBERS DYNAMITE CAR DOOR

ress of the Denver & Rio Grande No. 5, passenger train, was made about 11 o'clock Thursday night, for miles west of Malta, a small station near Leadville, Col. The express car was dynamited. According to the trainmen no booty was secured. It is believed the robbers crawled on the two engines of the train at Malta. The train had proceeded only a short distance when the men climbed over the tenders and compelled the engineer and fireman to march back to the express car.

Engineer Smith of the first engine was told to hammer on the door and order the express messenger to open it. The latter refused, and a charge of dynamite was placed under the car and the door was blown open. Two of the robbers climbed in, covering the express messenger with revolvers. Several charges of dynamite were placed under the safe, but winnsat results. They fired a valley the robbers fled in the darkness. A trainman in the meantime had reached Malta and Sheriff Campbell with a posse at once started in pursuit. It is said the safe contained a large sum of money.

SERVES LONG TOR SO HOLD-UP.

Pardon Comes to Illinois Cowboy After 24 Years in Prison.

Twenty-four years ago, John Hoffman, a cowboy and ranchman, walked up to a stage coach with six passengers, figures in a parden granted by President Taft the other day. The stage was in A. Potter Potter, who is 55, lived at Salem, Ill., when he committed of holding up the stage in Texas was sentenced May 29, 1885, to life imprisonment. He has served almost twenty-four years, partly at Chester, Ill., and at the Leavenworth penitentiary. In 1904 J. M. White, who is the president of the German National Bank of Texas, Texas, both of whom saw passengers, urged the pardon on the ground that the sentence was excessive. The warden has kept Taft early 19 and a watch from the passengers. The watch was later returned.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Rumors are rife in Washington that President Taft will name Secretary Root President Roosevelt's successor as Ambassador Whitelaw Reid at Lon-

Speaker Cannon declares emphatically that he will pay no attention whatever to the recent charges made against him by representative Parker of New Jersey.

Prince Jonah Kuhio, deposed ruler of Hawaii is reported to be interesting himself in politics again. He is seeking a delegate's seat in Congress. Prince Kalanianaole as delegate to Congress.

Upon the occasion of a homecoming celebration in honor of the people of Clarinda, Iowa, Col. W. R. Hepburn delivered a speech in which he spoke as a candidate for one would be senator from Iowa's vacancy.

President Taft's selection of Representative Crumpacker of Indiana, to champion the administration's views of the corporation and interstate commerce bills is regarded as a stroke of attention. Crumpacker will introduce the President's bill, and will get the credit for the authorship of the measure, the strength of which he gives his congressional career.

Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, is strongly in favor of the central bank plan. He is undertaking, he denies to impress the President with the desirability of the central bank.

The direct primary law was defended and indorsed in Chicago when the New York legislative committee which has been touring the country in search of information on the subject consulted prominent citizens.

J. Pierpont Morgan will be asked to accept the nomination for mayor of New York on a business reconstruction ticket, if he consents, it is said, Mr. Morgan is the only person who can save the city from financial ruin.

CHICAGO.

Dun's weekly review of Chicago trade says: Trade activities blended well with the elaborate functions attending this week's entertainment of President Taft and the numerous representatives of the banking interest and grain merchants of the country assembled in annual convention.

Seasonable weather provided a stimulus to operations in production and distribution, and transportation returns indicate that the Chicago stream reads steadily gain in gross earnings. Important contracts for large vessels on the lakes were closed, and strengthen the shipbuilding industry.

Farm advices testify to improvement in corn growth from the rainfall and favorable temperatures. Marketing of grain exhibit large increase over both last week and a year ago, items of corn alone reported nearly heavy, and there is also sustained rise in shipments.

Similar improvement appears in flour, and that commodity recovers slightly from the recent fall in prices. A moderate increase is noted in inquiry, attempts to feel out after quotations for live stock and provisions, these again showing further advance in wholesale prices.

Freight offerings of the large products are more abundant than usually reported, and traffic managers give closer attention to immediate equipment needs. The rush of the necessary facilities leads to numerous complaints by shippers and active power. Pig iron outputs exceed those during last month, with prices firm and buyers inquiring for tonnage for next year deliveries. Steel mills in the Chicago district are operating on basis and capacity is now pressed to the limit.

Increasing demands cause more drawing upon forge and foundry work, and the electrical, heavy hardware, machinery and implement factories report satisfactory gain in forward bookings. The absorption is unabated of building material and pleasing mill outputs. The steel products in the Chicago district number 25, against 24 last week, 24 in 1908 and 17 in 1907. These with liabilities over $5,000 number 7, against 5 last week, nine in 1908, and 5 in 1907.

NEW YORK.

A distinctly bullish undertone is displayed in this week's telegraph and cable reports, emphasizing the wholesale jobbing demand, enhancement of industrial output and perceptible gains in collections are the central facts this week. Satisfactory progress is apparent in the handling in agricultural matters, with the exception of cotton.

Retail trade as a whole and some branches of jobbing trade entering in heavy-weight demands recent warm weather a bar to fullest activity. Export trade in leading agricultural products is at a low ebb, and, while collections, hampered by large failures, and vetton movement, are better, there is still ample room for further improvement in this respect.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Sept. 16 were 198, against 191 last week, 256 in the week in 1908, 176 in 1907, 151 in 1906, and 173 in 1905.

Failures in Canada for the week number 39, which compares with 25 last week and 25 in the same week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

PRESIDENT TAFT DEFENDS THE TARIFF.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S SPEECH ON TARIFF

In his speech at Winona, Minn., upholding the Payne tariff bill as a whole President Taft said in part:

"My Fellow Citizens: As long ago as August, 1908, in the Congressional campaign in Maine, I ventured to announce the fact that the Republican party would revise the tariff downward, I pointed out that it had been six years prior to that time that the Dingley tariff had been passed, that conditions had changed, that the conditions surrounding the production of the farm, the factory, and the mine, and that the price imposed in the Dingley bill as many instances might have become excessive, that it was time to revise it, that the difference between the cost of production abroad and the cost of production at home with a sufficient allowance for a reasonable rate of profit in the business should be ascertained.

"In the promise of 1908 I pointed out in a speech what seems to me the truth and it is true that the danger of excessive rates was in the imagination they created in the minds of the people, and that the duty of the party was to make good the promise of the election rather by increasing the prices and increasing the rates to avoid such a danger. It was what at least I felt was the duty of the party to do, and that the duty of the party was to keep the industries of the country, and whether it was wise or not wise to be out of production time and so changed as to meet the demand of the people, I felt it was a very fair duty, objective of the party to discharge.

"It was in accordance with the promise of the election under such a statement was made that the Republican party of the country, that it was to reduce the rates where there should be found to be excessive rates and to make the production, that was the object of the revision of the tariff.

"Now, I have said that I was doing my duty in the presidential campaign in the prospective revision of the tariff, and I felt that it was my duty to put the Democratic party to prove it if it was not true that the tariff was so high that it was necessary to have a very great reduction in the rates of duty in order to meet the promise of the election.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.

A BANNER TOWNSHIP

An editorial writer in the Grand Rapids Press refers to "the great Michigan fruit belt that ends at Traverse City." It is amazing how stupid these city editors are. They are an ignorant lot. If we could have had that editor with us last Friday on a trip through Marion we could have smattered him with evidence that he needs education along certain lines. On that day the scribe was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Mills, at Fairview farm, just a bit west of the State road five miles south of the city limits.

That five miles section of state road with another mile on the south end of it, was built on a 35 acre tract in 1867 by the late Bernard Burns, father of William and Nat Burns, of Marion. The five mile section of it was, one sloppy day in early March 1869, the "stone stretch" when the writer of this walked into Charlevoix with a satchel on his back. It was mostly bordered by neat them—only now and then a log house and a hole in the woods. Horace Hull's little clearing was in what is now Arthur Beatie's magic front farm. Near by on the other side "Bill" Graham was chopping winrows of timber for destruction or prepeller wood.

In this, the most interesting period of the farmers year, the interest of the city observer is heightened the further he penetrates into this rich township. The word "progress" can be read as plainly everywhere as if it were lettered on the big barns. Arriving at Fairview farm an hour before the dinner hour, Mr. Mills piloted the scribe through embowered paths to the crest of the ridge that gives the farm its name—the highest ground in Marion.

We doubt if a scene of more exquisite landscape can be found within the borders of the peninsular state. The time and place united to create a picture of unsurpassed loveliness, to which is added the practical element of agricultural prosperity. We were loth to leave the spot. Just down below as we discern a solitary figure in the field Isaac tells the scribe that it is dead old Uncle Sim Baker, excavating tubers. Just beyond, to the left, is the State road, along which for 16 rods, stretches the magnificent orchard of George Anderson. Three hundred and fifty dollars for cherries this year is but one item of its value. In the foreground are the corn and beet fields of Robert Gregory; the splendid farms and orchards of Henry Gornell and William Burns and nestled close by at the brow of "Burns' Hill," is "the Heart of Midlothian,"—historic old Burnard, with its neat, cozy church, its school house and grange hall.

Then we elevate the range of our vision and follow the sloping hill sides to the westward to the Robert Trimble farm, and still beyond the Hilton farm and school house are outlined under the crest of the far away ridge. Great fields, neat farm houses, mammoth barns are in view on every hand, while beyond are the glistening waters of Lake Michigan, Fox Islands rising from the expanse, in seeming jealous rivalry with big Beaver stretching along to the northward. The pathway of the big steamships is in full view from Cathead almost to the Charlevoix piers. Why does not some soulful artist plant his easel on this crest some beautiful autumn day?

We turn our faces to the east ward, and our view is only limited by the far off hills of Hayes, on the northeast shores of Pine Lake. In the foreground are the splendid farms of Henry Dixon and the Withers—Robert and William. All about us are the green beet fields. The silos are being filled, but much of the corn is in the shock waiting storage for winter forage of the flocks and herds. In Marion silos are almost as numerous as barns—five are in sight of us, four of them built this years. To the northward is Ed Graham's acres, from which he cut seventy tons of hay this year; and hay is $12 per ton! Will you doll your hat to the farmer of Northern Michigan, you vainglorious boasters of other claimes? From the Mills' farm can be heard the music of five school bells.

Reluctantly the scribe follows his friend down the hillside in answer to the dinner call. After appeasing a very unusual hunger, the scribe and his host continue the expedition, stopping first at the Gornell farm, where "all hands" are occupied in harvesting the apple yield of 1000 trees! On two hillslopes the thrifty trees stretch their almost geometrical lines. In the valley between, Hansen & Wilber's apple pickers are at work: apple pickers are scattered through the orchard, and under the trees are innumerable piles of golden fruit. Five barrels of magnificent winter greenings hang from the drooping limbs of one tree; the limbs of a peach tree are breaking with their burden of fruit, with here and there a pear tree contributes its protest against the ignorant babble of the Grand Rapids Press.

To the eastward one mile the scribe is taken, to the county road, along which he also traversed four decades ago, when little less than a trail penetrated the forest. All along the road on either hand are evidences of thrift and of industry intelligently applied. The limit of space prevents mention of all the good farms that we pass;—there are many of them near us, and more of them afar off on other roads, with only here and there a patch of timber to obstruct the view. We would, if we could, show some of the home seekers of the "effete East" the farms of Elbert Ingalls, Nat Burns, William Straw and Jerry Barry—farms owned and worked by farmers. We would show them the broad fields, the rich soil, the fat stock and the splendid farm houses.

We would beckon them hither, where nature supplies every requisite to happiness and prosperity.

The glistening waters of Pine Lake burst upon our view; the suburban homes of South State street are passed, and we are again dodging the automobiles on the bitulithic pavement, more than ever confident of the future of this fair north country.

County Normal Notes.

We have four different counties represented in our class this year: Antrim, Emmet, Newaygo and Charlevoix.

Out of twenty one applicants in the normal class, seventeen have been accepted. This is the largest class in the history of the institution.

Miss Jessie M. Howes, the normal teacher, spent most of her vacation at the M. A. C., attending a summer course for county normal teachers.

J. H. Morrison, commissioner of schools, and H. F. L. Keeler, deputy superintendent of public instruction, visited the class Thursday, Sept. 23, and each gave an interesting talk.

Beaver Island News.

The schooner J. G. H. has arrived from Green Bay with a cargo of hay.

W. W. Boyle, left Monday for Seattle, where he expects to spend the winter.

Mrs. John King and son spent last Sunday in Charlevoix, also Nelly Cram, at the Booth Co.

Wm. Pearson, of Berrien county, is here to open a store in the Green building. He will also buy cedar.

Miss May Gallagher returned home from Charlevoix Saturday with a teacher's certificate. She will teach the Garden Island school.

Frightful Fate Averted.

"I would have been a cripple for life, from a terrible cut on my knee cap," writes Frank Dinkerry, Keniter, Minn., "without Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which soon cured me." Infallible for wounds, cuts and bruises, it soon cures burns, scalds, old sores, boils, skin eruptions. Worlds best for piles. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co.

Petoskey Special: A bunch of curled hair, half a dozen batteries, some charred wood and some twisted steel is all that is left of a fine Rambler automobile owned by a Boyne City man, which exploded this morning about 2 o'clock and was burned when being tried out by Garfield Windsor, an expert machinist who had been repairing the machine and was trying it out. When at the point of the explosion the engine balked and Windsor, 158 Collins and another man began to investigate. Collins was sitting in the rear seat when the explosion took place and he was thrown some distance and quite painfully hurt. The other two men escaped uninjured. The fire department was sent for and the flames were extinguished, but not before the machine was in ruins. There is nothing that can be used for a new machine, save possibly the wheels and tires.

Local News.

—Mrs. E. S. Small, of Milwaukee, was in the city over Sunday.

—Miss Blanch Lewis left Saturday for Grand Haven, where she enters Acsely Hall academy for the winter.

—Leon Miller, a graduate of the literary department of the Michigan University, returned to Ann Arbor Sunday, and will enter the law department.

—Fifteen cottages on the Charlevoix Summer Home Association grounds were occupied Oct. 1st—the largest number on that date in the history of the resort.

—Special convocation of Charlevoix Chapter No. 141, R. A. M. on Monday evening, October 11th. Work on M. M. M. degree. Competitors are all cordially invited to be present.

—Forrest Bartholomew, of Chicago, was here again over Sunday this week with time prints and specifications for the Faulkner residence and other work that he has in hand.

—E. G. Aldrich, of Chicago, was here over Sunday visiting his parents, Capt. and Mrs. A. G. Aldrich. Mr. Aldrich is connected with the publicity department of the Illinois Central R. R.

—Dr. H. A. Putnam left Tuesday to visit the home of his boyhood in Ohio. On his way south he will stop at Beaverton to attend the dedication of the new dormitory of Bennetts College.

—Geo. W. Priest went to Lansing Tuesday, to attend the K. P. grand lodge, after which he will go to Detroit on business. We have received reliable information that he goes to Detroit to see the big ball game.

—Col. D. C. Wickham, superintendent construction and repairs, U. S. Life Saving Service, was in town again last week. He came to arrange for the installation of a bath room and other interior improvements at the local station. He will return here again soon to superintend the work.

—Traverse City Record: Mr. Atwater stated this morning that they have a contract with the Pere Marquette people for equipping 25 complete bath rooms in the Charlevoix Inn at Charlevoix. This contract involves an amount of $3,000 and when completed the Charlevoix Inn will have first place as a fully modern hostelry and will be one of the finest and best equipped of the northern resorts.

—Word comes from St. Louis, Mich., of the death of Mrs. Nathan Cash, formerly of East Jordan. Mrs. Cash was visiting at the home of F. H. Hubbard, formerly of this city. Deceased came to this county with her husband almost twenty-five years ago, from Pitcairn, bounding on a farm opposite Ironton. Mr. Cash died about eight years ago. Mrs. Cash, who was a most estimable lady, had many friends in Charlevoix and East Jordan.

—Now ada this week.—J. L. Crane, Ward & Ward and M. C. Levinson & Co.

—Fred Stiles, of Orford, Mich., visited Lee Howland a few days the past week.

—The tug Margaret McInnes was on the ways here last week to receive repairs to her stern bearings.

—The ladies of the M. E. church will have their annual chicken pie supper, Oct. 20th. Furthermore next week.

—Mrs. James Cowie, of Caledonia, Ont., accompanied by her nephew, Wm. Calder, are guests of Mrs. Calder's neice, Mrs. Sarah Emrey.

—Earl Miller left yesterday for Detroit and Pittsburg to attend the World Series of ball games. It will be generally conceded that Earl has earned this vacation.

—The work of placing the first layer of stone for the Michigan Avenue pavement will be completed this week. The curbing of Petoskey Avenue is now being done.

—M. J. Stockman left Monday for Ideno, Ohio, to attend the annual reunion of his regiment, the 1st Ohio Sharpshooters. He will visit Cleveland and other points during his absence.

—Lee Howland has the contract for laying 18,000 square feet, or 2,750 lineal feet of cement sidewalk on the Belvedere grounds. Thos. Shawley is constructing an artistic arch to span the ravine near the Rupert Cottage.

—Clare Coulter left for Ann Arbor Saturday, where he enters the University as a Forestry student. George Finneran also enters the University. Mrs A. L. Coulter will keep house for two boys in the College City.

—Miss Joanna Stiles, of this city, who has a very decided ability as a pianist in oil, took 60c first and four second premiums last week at the county fair at East Jordan. Miss Stiles is now in the direction of marine and landscape views.

—Mrs Hart, of Clinton street, on Tuesday picked a bunch of strawberries from her garden. One of the berries is a perfectly ripe specimen as large as a half dollar. It measures three and five-eighths inches in circumference and weighs 185 drahms. The vines are as green and thrifty as they were in July.

—We have received a very abusive anonymous letter. Knowing fairly well the circle from whence the nitative cause, we regard it as a compliment, although, under the postal laws, it would mean prison to the writer if detected. To be abused by blackleggs who are too cowardly to reveal their identity is an honor to any manly citizen who has ever branded an anonymous letter writer as deplorable meanness, and the law brands them as criminals. The author of this piece of dirt need worry about what blackleggs and cowards say of him.

—One of the largest and most perfect heating plants in Northern Michigan, and probably the large st and best in Charlevoix county, is that being installed in the Van Pelt group of four buildings on Bridge street and Van Pelt Place. It is the Kewanaee system, one of the most approved in use anywhere. The boiler occupies the basement of the building occupied by Powers. The steam pipes are all covered with asbestos, and the trenches surrounded with a concrete arch. The plant has a capacity for in excess of the demand of the four buildings.

—Supper will be served at Odd Fellows' Hall by White Rose Hive, L. O. T. M. M., on Saturday evening of this week from five to eight o'clock. Fifteen cents to all.

—Leroy Hamlin, who went to Colorado some time ago with his wife and daughter, for the benefit of the latter's health, is back on his Hayes farm for the winter. Mrs. Hamlin remains in Colorado for a time to care for the daughter.

—Game Warden Pierce and chief deputy warden Pierce made the SENTINEL a call Saturday. They came to look over the field with reference to spawn gathering, which, under the new law, is to be done under the direction of the warden.

—Our item regarding the apple market last week was misleading. Charlevoix buyers are still packing and shipping, notwithstanding there was last week a stoppage owing to heavy shipments. The market for fall apples is expected to return to normal conditions.

—It is unlawful to take, trap or kill bear, otter, fisher, martin, fox, mink, raccoon, or skunk, from April 1st to November 1, or muskrat from April 15 to November 1. It is unlawful to destroy, disturb or molest at any time, or set any trap within six feet of a muskrat or beaver house and muskrat traps may not be put out preceeding the first day of the open season. The open season for partridge and spruce hen is October 15 to Nov. 30 inclusive in the lower peninsula, and not more than twelve shall be killed in one day.

—Traverse City Eagle: E. R. Ward of Charlevoix was in the city over Sunday for the purpose of arranging for an exhibit to be made by Charlevoix county at Traverse City at the state grange meeting to be held here in December. He has a large amount of fruit now in cold storage waiting for the exhibition. On one of the days of the state meeting the people of Charlevoix will come here in body for the purpose of booming their county. At first it was planned to bring down about 500 people, but at the present time it looks as though there will be at least 200 who will come to help to push the good work along. With such features being planned by the other counties it may be well for Grand Traverse to be working up to the situation and laying plans for the making of an exhibit that will take the shine off the other fellows.

A Net Stealing Case.

In Justice Collins court Tuesday, Otto Christman and John Hall, of Harbor Springs, were arraigned on the charge of stealing nets of the value of $60 belonging to Chas. Anderson and E. G. Wideman, of this city.

The nets were set near Cathead. Defendants were coming from the south in an old sail boat, and were seen lifting the nets, and owners were informed, but up to this point the identity of the offenders was unknown. A man at Harbor Springs, however, gave information that pointed to Christman and Hall, and later the nets were found set near Harbor Springs and identified. The arrest followed, and the parties have been in jail here the past week or more.

They acknowledge having taken the nets, but one of the men claims he supposed the nets belonged to his associate in the transaction. They retained M. T. Gibson, of Petoskey, and Prosecutor Nicholas appeared for the people.

The examination resulted in both men being bound over to circuit court.

E. L. Slusser Loses an Arm

A special dispatch to the Grand Rapids Herald from Mancelona states that Hon. E. L. Slusser, one of Antrim county's most prominent citizens, was brought home Sunday suffering from the loss of his left arm at the elbow. He and Hon. W. S. Mesick of Petoskey, had started for a business trip to Dakota and had gone as far as South Lake Junction, Upper Peninsula, when Slusser, in trying to board a moving train fell beneath the wheels and was injured as above stated.

Mr. Slusser is interested in many industries at Mancelona and is an officer and general manager of the Eclipse Motor company, at that place. He was the founder and for many years the editor of the Mancelona Herald, and sold the paper several years ago.

THE BUREAU TRADEMARK

Traverse City Herald: Asa C. Petersen has designed a trade mark for the Western Michigan Development Bureau. The trade mark is a large diamond with the name of the bureau around the edge and the design adopted by the bureau, "A farmer for every forty," occupies the center of the diamond. It is a very neat trademark and like the buildings which Mr. Petersen designs, is neat and complete.

The Western Michigan bureau is getting out maps showing the fact that the western Michigan fruit belt is closer to the consumers than that of California and Florida. By consulting these maps the shippers of this region can readily see that they have far less distance to ship their fruit than in the other fruit sections west or south.

During the U. S. Land and Irrigation congress to be held at Chicago in November, George L. Howe, manager of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, will issue a special exposition of the Fruit Belt, a magazine which is published in Traverse City. Owing to the fact that the fruit belt of which this magazine says so much is almost entirely located in western Michigan and western Michigan farms are profusely illustrated with maps showing the growing crops, the exhibit of the magazine will be as good an advertisement as this region could wish. This edition of the magazine will be of 80 or 100 pages and there will be 250,000 copies and those that are not sent out by mail will be distributed at the exposition.

In this edition will be described the topography of western Michigan with lakes, rivers, trout streams and other features. There will be articles telling of the soil, climate, what crops do well, the market facilities and the average under cultivation and open to settlement.

We Beg to Differ.

This week the Torch was asked to suppress a case tried in police court. This we cannot do for several reasons: In the first place the public was promised that these cases would be published, not for the purpose of robbing it by, but for the moral benefit the community might derive therefrom.—Central Lake Torch.

We disagree with the Central Lake editor on this point. In banishing county news the SENTINEL will point what it chooses to print and "suppress" what it likes.

A newspaper is private property. While it should strive to cover the local news field as fully as possible for the benefit of its readers, there are considerations of another nature that should not be lost sight of.

In the matter of police court trials, if the offender is the only person to be considered, we might agree with the Torch; but in many cases the young man who stands at the bar is of the black-sheep order, perhaps the son of a broken hearted mother or the brother of a high minded girl who weeps at the hearth stone, perhaps the husband of a sorrowing wife. There is trouble enough in this world without making more.

Heart throats are deep enough without twisting the blade. If a mother, brother or sister comes from the bar of justice to the bar of newspaper judgment and with tearful eyes and in faltering accents asks for suppression, the case will be suppressed so far as the SENTINEL is concerned, and the person who does not like this style of journalism had better subscribe for some other paper.

And we will go still farther and say that in cases which we know involve conditions as above stated, whether it be one heart or a score of hearts, a request to suppress is not necessary—the unworthy moral who presides over the editorial columns of this paper will do as he pleases, and he is generally pleased to lean toward those upon whom the lash of the law falls hardest—the innocent ones.

We value the grateful thanks of one mother or sister far more than we do the commendation of that class who hold that the only good journalist is the one who approves everything that happens.

We have always followed this course, and we think we obtain a pretty good county newspaper.

WHITE SHOALS LIGHT

There are doubtless many people in Charlevoix who do not know what brings the splendid lighthouse boat, the Hyacinth to Charlevoix harbor so frequently. The Hyacinth is the tender of the lighthouse engineer, and that department is building, four hours run north of us, the White Shoals lighthouse, which will be, when completed, one of the finest structures of its kind in the world, and the best on fresh water.

The tall sky-scraper of the metropolis, with its skeleton of steel and concrete, is now such a commonplace fact, that few of us ever realize the extent to which this mode of building has been carried.

Even the ancient mariner who has sailed the lakes for years, and who only now and then wanders ashore to view those great buildings, would give you a sarcastic smile if he were told that like structures were the coming idea in the construction of lighthouses.

But that very thing is the way at the present time. Twenty five miles west of St. Ignace, in the Straits of Mackinaw, lie the White Shoals. The majority of the shoals are under water, but that has not deterred the United States engineers. We have almost completed a miniature sky-scraper, using structural steelwork and concrete.

The new lighthouse on which the steel work is now complete stands 90 feet high. Two hundred tons of steel were put into the framework, the job being started the latter part of June. The base of the tower is about 40 feet in diameter and the top about 22 feet. Eight stories constitute the lighthouse, the top floor being occupied by the lantern. All floors will be of concrete, with hardwood top. The lantern and deck will be aluminum, the first of its kind on the great lakes. White Bertcotta will be used in the facing of the tower, backed up with a 13 inch brick wall. It is expected that the terra cotta work will be finished this season.

The work is being done under the personal supervision of Maj. Charles S. Brunswell, of the Milwaukee district. Twenty four men are at work, living on the concrete pier, where forms the foundation for the lighthouse. Day labor is necessitated, the men being taken to and from the shore in a 35 foot gasoline launch, which makes daily trips with the mails and provisions.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars has been appropriated for the work and it is expected that this will be ample to complete it.

County Normal Notes.

Miss Hilmes and the county normal students visited the County Fair at East Jordan, Sept. 23. Although the weather was disagreeable, a profitable time was enjoyed by all.

There was an exhibit of school work from some of the rural schools, and also from the county normal. Twelve former normal graduates who are teaching in the county were present at the fair.

The normal class began their work in music and drawing on Friday, Oct. 1, under the direction of Miss Gregory.

Rev. H. A. Putnam visited the normal class Friday afternoon, and gave an interesting talk.

Money Comes in Bunches

to A. A. Chisholm, of Treadwell, N. Y., now. His reason is well worth reading. "For a long time I suffered from indigestion, torpid liver, constipation, nervousness, and general debility," he writes. "I couldn't sleep, had no appetite, my ambition grew weaker every day in spite of all medical treatment. Then used Electric Bitters. Twelve bottles restored all my old time health and vigor. Now I can eat what I hungry every day. It's a wonderful medicine." Infallible for stomach, liver, kidneys, blood and nerves. 50c at F. G. Hines & Co.

CHAPTER VIII.

A little before dusk the three companions started upon their "night's business." The horses, and carriage were waiting in the door, and they mounted to their seats. David was embarrassed by the novelty of the situation, and Priscilla by his presence; but the spirit of the adventure soon fired. He noticed the lantaterns with extra care, and Priscilla stepping from the hack's seat, fondled his wiliff and smiled universal admiration for his virtues. During the turn which they took, around the city on one of its outskirts, he indoctrinated his pupil with the principles of life and "Pinch-hitting," said he, "is what we were instructed to do—call on folks at their homes. The idea is that man is made of a great deal cheaper—up to catch folks in their homes than down—catch'em in their offices, counting-rooms and stores—and, in the long run, it costs us less money—and more. They all think they can make us, if we don't, and we make you."

"What kind of a man think he is, sir?" the coachman asked in astonishment.

"Sure. That's the secret of success. I am talk with the strongest man in the country, and in five minutes have quite persuaded him to give me his assured lightning. This age all like to buy pin-pricks to the man that sells them. Long ago I learned to pick the wrong and vice-versa. I was then six-and-twenty."

"It seems a pity to take advantage of such a man as you describe him," said David, crimson from head to neck at the thought of a possible failure in his new connection with Priscilla.

"Fifteen men! They are no fellows of mind. They are cowards, and I am a coward. They are owners for me to serve. They are slaves for me to drive; pinch them in the public street, and shocked to learn who and what their proud necks arched. Changing their lives and looking upon their masters' contempt.

"Poems descended from the earthwaye and made her way hastily. Into the office which had already been set out for her. The director lighted his lamp and then, with a bow and a smile, left the young man to the mercy of the stockholders and Priscilla.

"Some of them giggled and chuckled, others looked uncomfortably at their shoes, thoroughly white arteries still, looked scared and uneasy. Some of the boldest were those who tried to make light of what they had seen, and to cover their misery by something very ungracious.

"I was a hollow liar and talk, observed their bold demeanour and their cowardice, while the humiliation of weakness, of stupidity, of the loss and worse, of the ridicule, filled them like mind by the speed and the tremendous force with which it was driven.

"Poems in colour of the organ's tone and the sweet, sad, melancholy of her method; and he waited impatiently until the last of the stockholders departed. When their bad disappointment was over.

"At the opposite side of the tent and lighting upon Priscilla's face, he saw a gloppy. Above her head a fallow cage, in which a canary sang, and on the wall a rough table covered with a green cloth, on which were scattered pieces of tea with floating grounds, trays, cups, cards, and the remains of a banquet of the "Black Ace."

"Poems turned to her feet when she saw who her visitor was, and as folded the dreamy aigas of aglitation, which she had worn when men had vanished, for although the gypsy's prominence here—her and mind, had proved rather to enhance than to diminish her beauty. Her black hair, her shoulders and arms were bare, and on her white wrist glittered a dozen or rattling serpents in whose eyes diamonds shone, on her fingers and in her ears were other costly stones. Her dress and silk, and rustled when she moved, with soft and sublimit music.

"The dancer has sent me here to pay the methods by which you do your work," said David, approaching the table and extending a hand with undisguised hesitation.

"Poems had come before. How you can study my methods when I am not practicing I do not know, but if you have no faith in them. Have you? I always had mind I heard your service in the little mission room."

"And have you lost it now?"

"I have lost everything."

"You can at least show me how you practice the art, even if you have lost your faith in it. I too have lost a faith but we may use it. What are these contraptions?"

"If you ask me to show you, you may shuffle and cut them, but I would rather tell your fortune by your hand, for I have more faith in palmistry than in cards."

He extended his hand, she took it, and with her eyes fixed upon hers traced the lines. Her gaze had then intensity with a "Look a little child peers into the mechanism of a watch or an astronomer into space. Poems, or rather the emotion shot through the frame of the Quaker at the touch of the delicate and beautiful fingers.

"Neither of them spoke. The delicate finger of the gypsy moved over the lines of the palm like that of a little school-girl over the pages of a primer. They and not realize how dangerous was their opportunity, nor how fatal that touch. Through those two poles of Nature's mad powerful battery, the magnetic and mysterious current of love was passing.

"Let me now examine the lines," she said. "Here is the life of the heart. It passes clear across the palm. It is well marked at every point and is most pronounced upon the upper side. But look! it is joined to the head by the finger of Saturn. It is the sign of a violent death!"

As she uttered this exclamation, she pressed the hand upon her bosom over her own, and looked up into his face. The involuntary and sudden action recalled him to his consciousness. "What did you say?" he asked.

"Have you not been listening?" she replied, regretting both her anxiety and her answer.

"No; was it a good story or a bad one, which you were reading?"

"It was both."

"Well—it is no matter, those accidental marks can have no significance."

"Why should not the character and destiny of the man disclose itself in signs and marks upon his hands?"

"I have studied palmistry, Priscilla, they would have presented a study of great interest to the artist or to the philosopher. There was both a tragic and a picture in their attitude. Grace and beauty revealed themselves in every feature and in every movement. They had arrived at one of those dramatic points in their life-journey, when the tragic elements of existence seem to converge. Agitated by uncomfortable and delicious sensations, confronting insoluble problems, hope, doubt, fooling, they bowed over the ocean of life like two ships approaching each not to see by a tomb, yet.

They were awakened from their reveries by the footsteps of the quack, and his famous coke summoned them back into the world of realities from which they had withdrawn so completely.

"Is this the wife," he said, "now is it—husbandness?"

"Wife!" she said, gathering up a double hand full of change and passing it over to him with a smile.

"A position full upon the eyes of the Quaker like a thunder bolt. It gave him the first intimation that Poesie was not the daughter of the "Black Ace." The heart of the Quaker sank in his bosom. Here was a new and unexpected complication. What should he do? It was too late to turn back now. The die had been cast, and he must go forward.

ZEPPELIN'S LIFE STORY.

Hardships Almost "Unbelievable" During Years of Experiments.

(If all the men now engaged in the study of aviation, none has had a more interesting career than Count Zeppelin, to whose genius in the last few years rules have broken all previous records. Until success came, his hardships were almost unbelievable, and he spent the whole of his fortune in carrying out his experiments. His first, injured in aerial flight probably dates from the American Civil War, when he made an ascent in a captive balloon to watch the operations. After this he returned to Germany in time for the Franco-German War, and is said to have been the first German officer who crossed the frontier into France. When peace was restored, he declined to give whole life in scientific, and in a comparatively short time he spent more in what appeared to be almost fruitless effort. At one time he was so poor through his devotion to his work that he had to live in a little cottage on an allowance made to him by his friends. But his invincible pluck brought success at last, and one of his first inventions his genius was the Kaiser himself.

Although he is considerably more than 70, Count Zeppelin is still as active as most men only half his age. A German newspaper has described him as follows: "He stands tall and erect; he has an agile body capable of unusual exertion, a constitution sturdy through such a energies and stamina, and an immense power of mental concentration. He always speaks modest and deliberate. His workmen are devoted to his heart and are ready to do his many fancies, and during the dark time when his nearest friends looked upon him as next door to a madman, the Count has had the continual help and counsel of his wife, and even when her husband's experiments brought her to the verge of poverty, she still had perfect faith in him, and never murmured. It must have been a proud day for the Count when the King and Queen of Wurtemberg took a trip to the Count's works, and a prouder day still when the Kaiser called her husband "the greatest German of the twentieth century."

Not the least vesting of Zeppelin's worries has been the statement that the real inventor of the Zeppelin airship was not the Count at all, but a German amateur engineer. It was stated that this man's widow used to receive a pension from Zeppelin in consideration of the fact that she had sold the secret of her late husband's invention to a syndicate of which the Count was the head. This story has received a good deal of attention by the Count's enemies, and it was even stated some time ago that Zeppelin was about to hint a duel with a certain officer because the latter had published the truth of the Teutonic aerial engineer story. Of course, no duel took place, and nothing came of the sad rumors; and today, not only by Germany, but by every other country the genius of the Count is regarded as one of the greatest inventors the world has ever seen.—London Transcript.

Memories of the War

There was more than one "Little Mac" in the Federal Army during the War of the Rebellion, but the hero of this tale was not only the smallest "Mac," but the youngest and due Minutiae estimated member of the Army of the United States, and one for more than twenty-five years by far the youngest comrade in the Grand Army of the Republic, a request and a welcome guest at many a reunion of the G. A. R. posts other than his own. Never has this youthful veteran's refusal of its surprisingly hackneyed surrounding his remarkable enlistment, the exhibition of the yellowed discharge papers with ink now faded, although clearly decipherable—his enlistment and discharge papers—failed to arouse enthusiasm among his older comrades.

In the little Mississippi river town of Fort Madison, Iowa, the site of a former government frontier fort and the scene of many a skirmish and more than one full-blooded battle between all the tribes of the west, the soldiers and pioneers on the one hand, the Indians on the other, in a peaceful and patriotic physician, Abel Cummins Roberts, a graduate of the University of Michigan, with his wife and a little children.

In addition to being a physician Dr. Roberts was the editor and publisher of a weekly paper, and the first half-dozen issues of the paper, which was a strong advocate of colonizing the negroes and of the extension of the rights and privileges of the masters of the enslaved slaves, the publication of which was the paper that would make possible the publication of war.

Roberts's partisan feeling was strong in those days—so strong, in fact, that a party of his neighbors had provided themselves with a long, stout rope and called on the editor one night at his home and asked him if some available choice of abandoning his policy of advocating negro colonization and of publicly apologizing for some of the printed items he had said in print or taking a plunge in the Father of Waters tied to his old Washington hand press with the rope.

But Dr. Roberts had heard that he was a marked man, and he had blood in his veins, so, after listening quietly to the leaders of the mob, he slipped into his Colt's navy from his pocket rail and talked bluntly and forcibly about the constitutional guarantees of free speech and of free press, and of his constitutional rights as well himself of his constitutional rights, most or so such, he concluded by inviting them to "come on" if they were still dissatisfied. They refused to accept, but the editor did not change his policy.

Later, when war began and volunteers were called for forsook both the pen and his advocacy of colonization for a commission in the Twelfth Regiment Missouri Infantry Volunteers, as Surgeon, Major, and in the battles and efforts served through the entire period of the war with one brief furlough, in 1863 for the purpose of his marriage at Memphis, Tenn. Opposite the regiment was Colonel Jenkins, the wealthy Southern planter, Dr. Whedon's Comrade Jenkins. Chaplain Jenkins was a fighter, but not profane. Despite a life of luxury, he was a man an adept pupil of his older comrades, and he learned the art of swearing to a degree counted to be few of his elders. When asked who taught him to say such bad words he would blandly reply, "Oh, Cap'n Jenkins did." If the lay soldier was disloyal in his speech in his was much higher in the rank and file, he feels sure that the good chaplain would long forgive his sadly sinning ways.

For several months prior to the close of the war the Twenty-first Missouri Regiment was quartered at Fort "Mac," but the refugees and due Minutiae estimated member of the Army of the United States, and one for more than twenty-five years by far the youngest comrade in the Grand Army of the Republic, a request and a welcome guest at many a reunion of the G. A FARMERS' EXCHANGE

Success in Co-operation Illustrated.

The subject of co-operative buying and selling among farmers is increasing in interest with them every year as the advantages to be derived there from are being recognized. One obstacle to successful co-operation has always been the farmers themselves. Selfishness has spoiled many a combination for material purposes. The unwillingness to trust the sale of farm products to an agent or manager has been the bar to progress. But things are changing, and we predict that the next few years will see more co-operative enterprises organized and successfully conducted than in a long time past. In this work the grange must take active and prominent part.

There is in Freehold, N. J., a most successful potato growers' association, the Monmouth County Farmers' Exchange. It was formed about 16½ years ago. At the annual meeting in November the report on the business done for the year showed a total of 2001 separate shipments, containing nearly 20,000 barrels of potatoes and barrels of other sell products, and the whole was valued at more than $45,000. The shipments reached 121 different consignees in fifty cities and towns and eleven states. Besides this outgoing business the society did an incoming business of nearly $45,000 in seed potatoes purchased in Maine and New York.

This report was so satisfactory that many growers who had been afraid to run risks in their own interest became members. The membership jumped from about 200 to a total now of over 500, the sales of capital stock were large, and now the exchange has about $20,000 with which to co-operate.

Besides all this, it has erected suitable buildings at the various shipping points on the two railroads running through the twenty-five or thirty miles that constitute the potato district. It has also more recently built a brick fertilizer mixing house, 100 by 32 feet, at Spurtown, on the Central Railway of New Jersey, and is planning an another 200 by 50 feet, to house the Farmaxlynia at Crosloid. The capacity of these two houses will be between 1,000 and 5,000 tons of fertilizer annually. Business will be begun in these houses for the season of 1910 and an enormous saving is to be had of fertilizers delivered. The object is to sell fertilizer to members as near actual cost as possible.

Commenting on the requirements for successful co-operation, the American Agriculturist recently said: "The Northern Spy fidelity to the organization. Unless the grower is willing to be governed by the fundamental law of which Lincoln's cut lumber all he finds in favor of the forward exchange, became a penny in his hand will appear more substantial to him. Time is the test on the bottom will. If there are enough of such organizations will prove to be a force, and the middlemen will continue to laugh by his success. Unless they do, there must be competent management. Again, the business of grading must be strictly followed by each producer, so that the exchange very well can guarantee the honest packing and supply with value, cannot be overestimated. Still further, the business must place itself in trust in the manager, who service for

QUAKE IN CENTRAL ILLINOIS.

Shock Awakens Residents in Region from Peoria South to Ohio River.

A slight earthquake which was felt in Southern and Central Illinois and Indiana and throughout Southwestern Missouri, occurred early Monday. In St. Louis the tremor came at 2:47 o'clock. So far as has been learned little or no damage resulted. The general direction of the shock was west to east, and it was felt more clearly in thinly settled districts. Villages west of St. Louis reported the destruction of a few chimneys.

Reports of the phenomenon were received from all stations on the Mobile and Ohio Railway as far south as Cairo, where the vibrations were from southeastern to northwestern. In Madison, Mattoon and other towns in Central Illinois there were shocks at practically the same time. At Spring field, windows and chandeliers were rattled and many persons were awakened. In Perin residents of the thickly settled district of the city were aroused from sleep by the tremor. A dispatch from Decatur says two shocks were felt there, but no damage was done.

Evansville, Ind., was severely shaken. Houses rocked and creaked and pictures on the walls swayed. Many people were awakened by the shock. A rumbling noise accompanied the disturbance. A special from Princeton, Ind., says the sky was brilliantly illuminated, while two distinct shocks each lasting ten seconds were felt there. A settling of the earth's crust, with the seat of the disturbance miles distant, is the generally accepted cause of the shock. Slight tremors lasting for one minute were recorded at 2:45 o'clock at St. Ignatius Observatory, Cleveland.

MOORS ROUTED IN BLOODY FIGHT

Two Towns Taken by Spaniards and Terrible Slaughter Follows.

The war office in Madrid announces the complete success of the movement in Morocco against the Moors. Both Nador and Zeluan have been occupied. At the latter town there was bitter fighting with large bodies of Moors. The ring around Melilla seems to have considered almost closed, and the position of the Moors is desperate. Said Amas appeared before Gen. Marina, the commander of the Spanish forces, and sues for a cessation of the fire which has increased on Mount Gurugu. The report of the surrender is not known, but it is believed the Moors are ready to submit without conditions. The insurgents suffered terrible slaughter at Spain's war against the Moors, which ended in a victory on their side. Scale of inexplicable advantage to the government of Premier Maura, against which the campaign in Spain is daily becoming more intense among the lower classes. A large section of the upper classes, however, are manifesting hostility against the government. In East Jordan all property owners will be required to trim shade trees adjacent to sidewalks to at least eight feet above the ground.

The extension of the Manistee & Northeastern railroad from Buckley east to Walton has been about completed and within a few days regular trains will be running to that point. The work is being hurried so that the company can carry out its contract with the Sands Lumber company of Manistee to commence lumping the timber lands around Spencer, Kalkaska county, by November 1st. It is believed the road will have got five miles beyond Spencer by that date.

Traverse City Eagle: George E. Howe, of the development bureau, stopped off here Tuesday evening on his way to the Charlevoix county fair at East Jordan, where he will make an address today. He has been in Manistee county this week, and while at Onekama he secured a photograph of a branch of apples that was three feet in length, and had 52 apples, the combined weight of which was 28 pounds. This picture will be used to show what can be done in Manistee county in the line of fruit raising.

The Central Lake and Elk Rapids papers are calling for an expert accountant examination of the county's books to be ordered by the county board of supervisors. The Herald seconds the suggestion and thinks it is high time for the work to be done when as reported by a county official to the board last winter, there is a shortage of $4,000 in the county's finances. If this charge be true, somebody has that amount of money which belongs to the taxpayers of Antrim county, and the sooner the grafters are known and made to settle the deficiency the better.

Peter Morrison, proprietor of "Home Farm," near Elk Rapids, under date of Sept. 22, writes: "I sold my entire (1909) wheat crop last week at Angell (a station seven miles from the mills from his farm) for $1 per bushel on board car. I found that the grain overran considerably from the machine measure. I had just 23 acres devoted to wheat and had 906 bushels (39.3 bushels to the acre) I used 100 pounds of fertilizer to the acre on the ground last fall, and believe it paid me well."

The school situation at Acme still remains unchanged and there will be no school in the district until the matter is settled by the courts. There are at present two school boards trying to conduct the business of the district. One of these boards has possession of the money of the district, but are unable to secure the use of the town hall for holding school, while the other board can have the hall, but cannot get hold of the funds to conduct the school with. As a result of this conflict the district will have no school this fall.

Traverse City Eagle: Ben Newball, owner of the North Manitou Island, was in the city today for the purpose of consulting George E. Rowe of the Western Michigan Development Bureau in regard to the selection of fruit trees he will intends to set out on the island the coming season. He has at present an orchard of about 100 acres on the island and will plant a large additional acreage as he is convinced that there is a great future to the fruit business in this locality, and his island is specially adapted to its culture. Mr. Newball resides in Chicago, but left this town for Leland, from where he will make a trip to the island.

A miscellaneous shower for Beulah Hansen, to be given by the citizens of Traverse City, says the Eagle, is one of the latest ideas to take hold here. The promoters of the plan have decided that the shower will be given at some convenient place along Front street on October 19, and every man, woman and child will be expected to contribute. It is suggested that churches, schools, societies and lodges take hold of the matter and plan to make systematic contributions, each organization to fill a barrel. The barrels will be furnished at the place of the shower giving and each one will be labeled with the donor's name. Only those who are personally acquainted with the management of the home, know to what extent the ingenuity of Mr. and Mrs. Swift is taxed, to provide food and clothing for the boys whom they are rescuing from street life and fitting for useful citizens and safe members of society. The two work unceasingly, and the strain on their nerves may be greatly lessened for the present, and the coming winter, if each individual in Traverse City does his part. There is not a more worthy cause in all this northern region than that being carried on at Bethel Home.

Petoskey News: When the crew of the Lloyd M., A Miller's little gasoline fishing tug, pulled up their nets Wednesday out off 3 mile point, among the epidemic fish was one that shone up brighter than any of the others, and examination proved it to be a silver eel, something very uncommon in this part of the lake. The fish was three foot and four inches long, and is a rare specimen.

Mr. Bear trapped and wrote yesterday to the state fish hatcheries at Mill Creek, with the intention of turning it over to them if they want it. Mr. Miller has fished in this section of the lakes for many years past, and states that this is the first one he ever caught here, and that the only other one he ever saw in the northern great lakes region was one caught over thirty years ago by Thomas Kirby of this city. A number of people have examined the fish at the Petoskey Fish Market, where it is on exhibition.

Bellaire Independent: At the September meeting of the intermediate Valley Fruit Growers' Association, held at Bellaire on Friday of last week there was a large attendance and the meeting was characterized by the enthusiasm that has made the meetings of the association successful from the start. A very creditable fruit exhibit was on display and created much favorable comment. Although the exhibition was intended primarily as an object lesson in varieties and nonperfect effort was made for an extended display, it gave a foretaste of what the association can do in that line whenever it decides to make a general exhibit. And now the association enjoys the distinction of being the only one which in fact is famous, and which emphasizes the fact that it includes among its most enthusiastic members some of the most intelligent and progressive housewives in Antrim county. Household economics is one of the strong features of the association. At 1:30 p. m. the regular meeting of the association convened in Kearney opera house. Although the program was necessarily limited, owing to the business matters consuming much of the time, two very excellent numbers were enjoyed.

Crane's CRANE'S Crane's

You need not hesitate to put any of these WOOLTEX coats on your little girl because they are made under proper sanitary conditions, in a well-ventilated, well-lighted factory, with sunshine streaming into every corner. Made by clean, healthy workers.

Better take no chances on garments made in sweat-shops, or crowded tenements—there may be danger. WOOLTEX garments are clean, wholesome, safe.

WOOLTEX coats are cut generously full to permit freedom of motion and to allow for a child's growth—mothers will approve of that.

The styles are carefully planned to make them distinctive and yet keep them simple and suitable for childish wearers.

The materials are of WOOLTEX quality—pure wool, tested—which will keep its shapeliness and give two full seasons' wear—hard wear too.

There is an interlining of warm flannel across the back where warmth is needed. In red, navy, brown, grey, green coatings at $6.00 to $10.00.

—A big automobile raised into town from Boyne City last Thursday evening living as passengers Will A. Norton, of St. Johns and Sam Thatcher, who now has a shoe store in an Ohio town. Mr. Norton, who as an assistant government attorney is making it warm for western timber grafters, was formerly prosecuting attorney of Charlevoix county. Mr. Thatcher was for many years supervisor of an eastern township in this county and later county clerk for several terms. They returned to Boyne City the same evening, but were greeted by many old-time friends while here.

—The opening exercises at the high school last Monday morning were given a decidedly patriotic coloring President Iddings introduced to the faculty and the assembled high school pupils and normal class Geo. O. Scott, who was for seven months a prisoner at Andersonville. Mr. Scott was listened with rapt attention as he gave graphically related his terrible experiences in that historic stockade. Then Major Green told of his months of suffering as a prisoner of war at Libby, Macon and Columbia. Both talks were well planned and very instructive. The room was appropriately decorated President Iddings proposes, at some future time, to bring Capt. Armstrong before the classes. Captain Beattie is one of the very few surviving veterans of the Mexican war. Those talks are valuable in tending to inculcate a spirit of patriotism in the minds of the young.

—Mr. and Mrs. James Caine, of Toronto, are here on their wedding trip, and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bachow. The bride is the sister of Mrs. Bachow.

—Hon. A. K. Dougherty, of Elk Rapids, accompanied by several friends, came here Friday in an auto, returning the same day. Mr. Dougherty was a pioneer of Charlevoix, having lived here in 1865. His 44 years sits sit lightly upon him.

—The most of last week gave us ideal Indian summer weather—warm and pleasant. All of this week the weather has been the reverse of that—the walks having snow on them Tuesday morning. A 36 mile westerly gale continued three days—a breeze that circumspect people would call a "snorter."

—The gratifying information comes from Iowa, where the William Owen Shakespearean Company is touring that Miss Nadia Mayne, who joined the company here, is climbing rapidly toward the top. On the day the letter was written Miss Mayne had been cast in the part of "Desdemona" in "Othello," which makes her the "leading lady" in that great play. She will have to put up with some pretty scurvy treatment from her dusky lord (Mr. McConnell), but after Mac has washed the color of the Moor from his face he is as fine a gentleman as ever walked the boards. We predict that Miss Mayne will give a good account of herself.

—The Fifth Department of the General Board of Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America will convene at Grand Rapids on and from October 18th to the 21st. The Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Western Michigan, Michigan, Michigan City, Marquette, Fond du Lac, Milwaukee, Chicago (Olney), Springfield, Indianapolis, Ohio and Southern Ohio will be present with their bundreds of clergy and numerous official lay delegates. On Oct. the 19th and 20th, the Woman's Auxiliary of these various dioceses will meet and will have as their especial speaker, Mrs. George J. Romanes, the wife of the late celebrated English scientist and intimate friend of Charles Darwin. Mrs. Romanes is one of the most distinguished women of Europe, being an author and lecturer of international reputation.

—The cause of good roads goes marching on everywhere. Never before was the press of the country so full of it. Even way down south in Georgia road improvement has become the paramount issue down that way. The Kansas papers are arguing about whether the work should be done wholly at state expense or with national assistance, to be begun without further delay. And so, in nearly all the states, the popular demand for better roads is reflected in the newspapers by earnest discussion of one phase of the subject or another. This wide spread evidence that the country is awake to the importance of the good roads issue is gratifying in the extreme. It has taken a long time for the movement for highway improvement to get under way but it has gathered momentum now and will not be checked. The people have come to a realization of the fact that bad roads levy upon those who use them an enormous toll.

CULLENIZED.

The Charlevoix Board of Education is nursing a sore toe. It, the aforesaid school board, was plodding along, doing its duty faithfully, when the aforesaid official toe was "stubbed" against a hidden obstruction in the person of Cullen, the state factory inspector. While the official toe is yet quite swollen, it is slowly recovering.

Cullen, the factory inspector, made a raise of twenty dollars in Charlevoix under the cover of a very clever plan of procedure. Previous to going to Boyne City, Cullen was in Charlevoix several days, ostensibly in the performance of his official duties. One morning Cullen presented his card to H. Lee Iddings, president of the board of education. The first "break" Cullen made was to inquire of Mr. Iddings if he was a Mason. Upon being answered in the affirmative, he imparted the information that he had inspected the lodge room and found it to be short on law requirements. Mr. Iddings, himself a trustee, told Cullen that the lodge was about to remodel and improve the room, and that doubtless all the requirements would be complied with; that he would refer the matter to the board of trustees.

Then Cullen said, "I understand that you are president of the board of education." Mr. Iddings again answered in the affirmative. The inspector then stated that he had made an examination of the high school buildings and found them seriously deficient in provisions for safe egress. The two then repaired to the buildings. After pointing out several alleged minor defects, Cullen imparted the startling information that it would be necessary to construct a steel bridge between the two buildings, at an expense, approximately, of $800. Mr. Iddings demurred on the grounds that there were no funds available for that purpose, and that just at this time the work would seriously disturb the schools. Cullen insisted that the work must be done. Still protesting, Mr. Iddings told the inspector that he would convene the board that night and he could come before them with the request. In the interim, Cullen again visited Mr. Iddings and handed him an official envelope containing carefully prepared plans for the proposed bridge. Everything had the appearance of official rectitude; the demands and plans were written upon regular printed State blanks and the inspector's card bore Cullen's official title.

Cullen attended the school board meeting, renewing his demands for the specified work. The same protest was made by the board, notwithstanding the fact that Cullen had finally given them ninety days grace. Then Cullen got down to business.

He imparted the information that the State treasury was empty, and that he was compelled to make another trip here in view of the misery days extension; that he did this on his own responsibility; that he would grant this extension of time providing the board would pay him $20 for extra expense incurred therefor. The proposition looked plausible, and the board accepted it. A school order for the amount was given him, which was subsequently endorsed by him and paid at the bank. The money for this order will probably rise up against him at the proper time, and the State asked to refund the amount.

No blame can be attached to the board in the matter. It did not seem possible to them that a regularly accredited official of Governor Warner's immediate State government would presume to victimize a board of education. But, in the light of the Boyne City episode, it is now clearly evident that it was a plain case of graft.

DID YOU notice it, that everybody goes to Joel Johnston at Boyne City for real estate bargains. I have good farms to sell parts of Charlevoix county to sell cheap, also city property to trade for farms. 17-21

FOOT BALL.

Charlevoix Vanquishes the Petoskey Team in An Exciting Game.

Before a good sized crowd of husky and enthusiastic rooters the second foot ball game of the local team was pulled off last Saturday at the North Side Athletic Field between the teams representing Petoskey and Charlevoix high schools.

Having met defeat the week previous at the hands of the Boyne City eleven, the locals were determined to change the story this time and wipe off the sting of the defeat. The team, under the able direction of Coach Wilson, who has been the making of the team, went thru the hardest week's practice it has had, and nearly every night lined up against the second team in order that they might become more efficient in defensive work. Much credit can be given this second team, who have been organized for practically the purpose of aiding the first team, and to help them keep up the reputation that they gained last year.

The team this season is practically new, and some of the players know very little about real foot ball. Durgan, Paddock, Kraus, Carey, Espinas, Hull and Poole have all played before, but Wallace, Mayne, Lynskip, Kirby and Jacobs are just starting out on their foot ball career.

Although much improvement was to be expected, still the boys showed up much better than in the* game with Hoyne. The game was closely contested throughout and the lines were few when either goal was seriously threatened, although it was generally admitted that in most ways the locals played better ball.

Petoskey kicked off to Charlevoix and the game then resolved into a tug of war for the ball, each team in turn being forced back toward its own goal. Finally Durgan made a long run for a touchdown. Goal was missed. Score 5-0. From this on it was one continuous see saw, first one side having the ball and then the other, working it back and forth, neither having much advantage over the other. Once Paddock made a long end run for a touchdown but it was illegal and the ball was brought back.

The absence of many trick plays by the Charlevoix team, particularly the forward pass was noticeable. It was thought these were not necessary and could be saved and used in the next game with them. Hull went around end once for about twenty yards and Paddock also made several long runs, but aside from these there was little sensational playing.

From the spectators point of view, Durgan and Paddock were the stars, using good judgment in picking holes and running. The fornors expectably showing up well in his good interference work. Wallace at quarter showed an improvement over the preceeding game and Mayne at full played well, this being his first game. The line as a whole played good ball, Jacobs at guard deserving mention, as did Kraus who was put in to replace Lynskip in the second half. Carey at right tackle showed up well and strengthened that position considerably. Poole at tackle on the other side, played much better than in the previous game. From the side lines these positions are unimportant, but without a strong line no team has any chance of making any kind of a showing.

The foot ball sisters with their megaphones and colors were very much in evidence, and helped by encouragement and yells to cheer the team onward. Under the assistance of a good yellmaster, which was taking Saturday, this body of rooters could give great assistance by their rooting which is so good to hear when the player loses heart and becomes discouraged.

Next Saturday the team goes down to Traverse City, this being the first game Charlevoix has played with them for several years. Last year the Traverse City team was the best team in this part of the state and Traverse is the team that is to dispute the title with the local team this year. So far and is sure to be closely contested. Coach Wilson is putting the team through a hard week of practice and the bunch is going to Traverse with the determination to put one over on the husky southern lads, and have settled down to a week of hard training so as to be in good condition.

Saturday's lineup was as follows:

Lr. c., Dagbaum; r. t., Carey; r. g., Krulis and Lynskip; c., Kirby; l. g., Jacobs; l. t., Poole; l. e., Hull; q., Wallace; r. h., Paddock; f., Mayne; l. h., Durgan; referee, Bush; umpire, La Fevre; head linesman, Campbell.

The work of the referee was satisfactory and we greatly appreciated by both sides and the crowd.

PEARY'S SHIP IS IN.

With the flag of the Peary Arctic Club at her masthead, the little steamer Roosevelt, which bore Commander Peary on his quest of the North Pole, entered New York harbor Thursday. It was barely daylight when the lookouts discerned the vessel off Sandy Hook, coming slowly. Few of the vessels in the lower bay recognized the Arctic steamer as she rounded the Hook.

Off the point of the Hook the Roosevelt gave three tiffoonings in recognition of her siren and ran up the Peary Arctic flag of the New York Yacht Club at her fore and the American ensign at her mizzen. Turning the point of the Hook, the Roosevelt headed into the broadshoe and anchored there within half a mile of the government dock. Commander Peary's ship arrived in the nick of time to participate in the closing ceremonies of the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

Still clad in the rough clothes worn on the arctic trip, although his face had been laid aside, Captain Bartlett stood on his quarter deck and acted as spokesman for the party. Acting under instructions from Commander Peary, the crew and the scientists and officers aboard will remain on the Roosevelt and not enjoy life ashore until they are released by the chief of the expedition.

In outward appearance the Roosevelt looks little like a ship that braved the ice and storms of the arctic zone. She has received a fresh coat of paint, and the bones of seals and seals that were interwoven in her rigging have been removed. In her hold, however, she carried a quantity of skins and all the specimens gathered during her cruise. These are so bizarre and so different from anything else that all the spectators gathered there were unable to have their fill of them.

Bartlett, Peary's chief aide, and the other officers and men of the Roosevelt and not enjoy life ashore until they are released by the chief of the expedition.

Bartlett, "that the Stars and Stripes have been hauled to the North Pole, and no doubt that Mr. Peary was there. Peary got there because he was the only man that had the fortitude to follow out of sight of land. They say he is Teddy, meaning 'next to God.'"

Abram C. Eby, a prominent Virginia lawyer, was ten days ago was the victed of using the mails to defraud, was sentenced to eighteen months in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and to pay a fine of $1 by Judge Waddill. Eby was a member of his city for President McCrea of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in which he threatened destruction to the Norfolk and Western Railroad, and to other roads which he had a grudge against. Pearl, if he was not paid the sum of $10,000. Eby was born in Philadelphia and potentially for the purpose of reaching his agreement with the railroad officials required the mails to be paid and was arrested. The defendant, who was mayor of Carbondale, Va., was a referee in bankruptcy of the United States court in that district, and of any offense. His counsel pleaded insanity.

SHOOTS WIFE TO END HER PAIN.

French Jury Then Finds Husband Guiltless of Murder.

A jury in the Assize Court in Paris has acquitted at least justly the right to take life in order to end hopeless suffering. A workman of the name of Daudin accompanied to the police some time ago, saying he had shot his wife at her request in order to put her out of pain. The other day he was arraigned on the charge of murder. The evidence showed that his wife was incurably diseased and suffered continuously and intensely. Repeatedly requested by her husband to kill her. He finally yielded and shot her with a revolver. It also was shown that Daudin was a man of weak will, who was dominated by his wife. The jury acquitted him.

STATE PAYS BANK CLAIMS.

Oklahoma Guaranty Law Gets Its First Practical Test.

State Bank Commissioner Young, who the other day took charge of the Columbia Bank & Trust Company, of Oklahoma City, with deposits aggregating $2,000,000, has begun paying depositors dollar for dollar on their claims. The bank guaranty fund, together with the available assets of the bank, will be used in satisfying the claims. Fifty thousand dollars of the state bank guaranty fund was in the bank on April 30, 1909. On that date the state bank's guaranty fund amounted to $862,500. The Banking Board has levied an additional assessment on the state banks to replenish the guaranty fund.

ADMITS KILLING TWO GIRLS.

The mystery which for many days surrounded the kidnapping of three little Italian children, and the murder of two of them in the Hagle street colony in Utica, N. Y., two weeks ago last Sunday night, was solved the other day, the police say, when they secured a full confession, from Theodore Rizzo. Rizzo, he admits, attacked the two little girls, and when they threatened to tell their fathers, he shot them, and the little boy, as well, to prevent their disclosure. When arraigned before Justice O'Connor, Rizzo collapsed and confessed. He was then waived, and Rizzo was remanded to jail.

8 DIE, 3 HURT, MINE EXPLOSION.

At least eight men were killed and three perhaps fatally injured in a gas explosion in mine No. 4 of the Northwestern Improvement Company near Roslyn, Wash. When the explosion occurred a column of fire was thrown hundreds of feet into the air igniting the shaft plant and adjoining buildings. Under the intense heat the hoist of the shaft crumbled and fell and the men were killed.

GLORY ENOUGH FOR ALL.

These are types of the men that push the world forward. Thinkers, dreamers, men dissatisfied and struggling. Hudson had the courage that brought him to the mouth of a great river. Fulton's restless genius, forever dissatisfied with existing conditions, gave to the world the steamboat. Cook, restless and determined, carried his country's name and flag to the Farthest North. These men are the heroes that the world sees. Honor them. Remember that millions of others names are no good, as generally speaking, men who does his duty by his neighbor, his country, his wife, his children and his friends, is a builder of civilization. It is a beautiful and a hopeful world.—Chicago American.

BANK BANDITS GET $10,000.

The Citizens' National Bank of Glenwood Springs, Col., was held up and robbed of $10,000 in cash by three masked but heavily armed men. The robbers escaped to the valley westward thirty minutes ahead of a sheriff's mounted posse. Two of the robbers held up Assistant Cashier E. E. Disch. Disch hesitated a moment, when one of the bandits told him to "hurry or be shot." Disch gave the men all the money in sight. As they rode away Deputy Sheriff Dyrdlow appeared, but they escaped his bullets by dashing into the valley.

BAY LAMPHERES END NEARING.

Contention Clearing Mystery of Gunner Heath Farm Tragedy.

Bay Lamphere, who was convicted on an accomplice of the arch-murderess, Mrs. Gulianess, has but a few days more to live, according to prison physicians in La Porte, Ind. He is suffering from consumption. State's Attorney Smith is confident he will make a confession clearing every detail of the Gunness death farm mystery when he realizes that his end is at hand. Up to the present time he has persistently that he knows nothing about how Mrs. Gunness killed and disposed of her victims.

CASUAL OBSERVATIONS

Political and Otherwise—Alleged Thinklets that Have Evereveced.

Gov. Warner has at last fixed the seal of his official approval upon the passports of the Hon. Patrick Kelly, in his travels toward the executive chamber at Lansing. Therefore "the administration" must be reckoned with in the contest. But the passport must be viseed by the people, and there is where Pat will be disappointed. Sorry to be compelled to say it, but the endorsement of Gov. Warner after nine months of his third term, is not all powerful when used for political purposes. The governor is hedged about by very little divinity within his own party, and what little there is grows less as time passes.

It is given out from an authoritive source that Chase S. Osborn will soon launch his candidacy and inaugurate a vigorous campaign for gubernatorial primary nomination. This will round out the situation and practically fill the field. The game will then open with vigor. Mr. Osborn's candidacy will mean more to the republican party of Michigan than has the candidacy of any man for the office of governor for many years. The party must now reckon with the upper peninsula, which, for the first time, has a candidate, and is solid for him. A worse game of politics could not be played than to ignore the claims of that stronghold of republicanism. We have but to study the political record of the State to demonstrate the fact that the situation is fraught with a very grave danger. Even the immortale Fred M. Warner went to the Straits with a shortage of votes in 1908, and this was but once of many times that the upper peninsula came to the rescue of the party in close elections. As far back as Gov. Bagley, that stalwart republican was saved by the upper counties, and we have the firmly seated habit of looking northward for safety in times of trouble. The claim of that section of the state is given additional force in the conceded high character and political strength of its chosen candidate, Chase S. Osborn is a tower of strength. A ticket with his name at its head cannot be defeated by any combination or defection. His record is absolutely unblemished. His personal popularity is by no means combined to the upper peninsula. He has never been an office-seeker—every position he ever filled has come to him unsought. There is nothing mediocre in his mental makeup—strength, manly rectitude and unswerving aggressive republicanism are the qualities that constitute his power. As governor he will honor the State and the party.

Of all the superlatively idiotic idiots that ever disgraced the race the grafter who languishes in the Charlevoix jail is the greatest. The marvel is how a man who has so boldly uncovered the constitutional rottenness of his nature could have been appointed to an official position. The nature of his offense precludes the probability of his ever having drawn an honest breath. A thief with the intelligence of the average yegg-man would have known better than to approach a board of education in the solicitation of a bribe.

Money Raising Sugar Beets

The raising of sugar beets is an important industry in several parts of Western Michigan. Thirty-eight Charlevoix and Antrim county farmers secured in 1908, from 111 acres of beets which they marketed, 7,863.61. This was an average return of $69.02 an acre. The best return per acre was secured by Paul Flader, living near Charlevoix, who from three acres obtained beets that brought him $291.92. This was an average return of $77.10. The poorest return was $150.64 from three acres, which was an average return of $50.21.

William Shaw, living near Norwood, Charlevoix county, Western Michigan, has this year, 1909, sold his beets. He estimates that these will bring him $750 in cash and that the beet tops will be worth $40 to him for stock food. Furthermore, he will haul back to his farm, free, pulp amounting to from 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the weight of the beets harvested.

BAD FACTORY INSPECTOR

Asked for Bribe to Make Favorable Report on Condition of School Buildings in Boyne City.

From the Boyne City Journal:

For the past week or more the city has been afflicted with an overofficious factory inspector who has made life a burden for some of the manufacturers by his contemptible methods. The real reason for his wholesale fault finding finally developed and came to light when he approached Judge Harris, secretary of the school board with a proposition to accept a money consideration for a favorable report on the condition of the school buildings of the city, which he had first condemned in all the ways he could think of, in an undoubted endeavor to pave the way for a bribe.

The quick wit of the Judge stood him in hand and instead of kicking the fellow out of the office he led him to think that perhaps something might be doing. The thing bore fruit the following day and this morning. Harris meanwhile laying his plans to trap the fellow and put an end to his nefarious practices. This morning he came to the office of Harris & Ruegsegger to get his money, having agreed to take fifty dollars after turning down a twenty-five dollar proposition. The money was ready, five ten dollar bills all marked and the numbers having previously been taken down. He accepted the cash turning over a favorable report of everything. Then Sheriff McWain at a given signal walked in from an adjoining office and arrested the fellow. Of course the money was found on his person just as he had received it. The man was fairly caught and was crestfallen in the extreme. He seemed to feel that his career was ended and tried to get Harris to let him out of the difficulty.

The inspector's name is Ernest E. Collen and his home is in Midland. Since coming to the city he seems to have been having quite a good time as it is reported that he was drunk all day last Sunday. His actions about the various factories excited comment as he ordered things done that were ridiculous in the extreme and it is now surmised that he was playing his game and hoping to get offers of money for a favorable report. He apparently found no one to bite and then undertook a more dangerous course and boldly bid for coin. Unfortunately for his scheme he struck the wrong man and was outwitted.

Before Judge Hammond he waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court in the sum of one thousand dollars which he failed to secure and the sheriff took him over to Charlevoix where he now languishes in the county jail.

A special to the Grand Rapids Herald has this to say of Collen:

Too much politics is the way the friends of Ernest E. Collen, the state factory inspector, who is in jail in Boyne City having confessed to accepting a $25 bribe, explain the troubles the young man finds himself in. The news of his arrest caused much surprise, as he was well and favorably known to many residents of this place.

Coming to this country from England about 10 years ago Collen started to work at the trade of blacksmith and for some time prospered. Before a year he had left the employ of others and went in business for himself. He made friends readily and in 1906 found that his increasing business made it necessary to enlarge his shop. He built a fine cement block building, with living rooms above and the blacksmith shop below.

But about that time fortune seemed to desert him. He had been married some time previous and after domestic troubles his wife left him. Then for nearly one whole summer he was laid up by an accident and his business suffered in his absence. Six weeks ago the building was burned. About that time he received the appointment as factory inspector, through the efforts of Representative William Caris of this county, for whom he had long been an ardent worker. For a time he seemed astonishingly well his friends rejoiced for Collen, thinking that his troubles were over.

He had lost considerable money through the failing off in business and the fire, they say, and when the temptation came to make a little ready money, could not resist. But the general opinion here is that it was his dabbling in the political game and the ascension to the power of a state official that he made the original mistake.

In a letter to Labor Commissioner Fletcher Collen admits that he took $50 from Judge Harris of that city, president of the school board, under an agreement to allow the board to wait a year before complying with the law relative to fire escapes and certain safety appliances on school houses.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., Oct. 20, 1909

Perhaps I am about to tread on dangerous ground, but as I view it, the cause is sufficient to incite every man who has a proper regard for the rights of his fellows, to ask the powers that be, in a quiet humble way, concerning the destruction of our maples, that have for many years been our pride, and the admiration of the stranger within our gates.

They seem to have lost sight of the fact that these maples were planted in good faith on an implied contract That was some time ago, while our interests were superintend by a board of trustees and a president. The sidewalk question had been agitated for sometime. Finally the trustees, at a regular meeting passed a sidewalk ordinance; that the sidewalk should be at least four feet wide of two inch plank, securely spiked with double ten spike, on four by four stringers laid on a grade as near to the natural formation of the ground as possible.

The grade being established, the planting of trees began. It was soon found that trees made convenient hitching posts and the horses soon girdled the trees. Complaints were made to the trustees, and at their regular meeting they ordained that any man hitching his team to a tree should be fined five dollars, thus strengthening the contract by protecting the trees. From year to year side walks were laid and trees planted in accordance to the contract. Sidewalks were extended and trees grew until none of the first planted are now over fourteen inches in diameter, broad spreading tops, with foliage so thick that the birds can scarcely fly through them.

But now our board of aldermen, with his honor the mayor, who have brought our streets to a water level and succeeded so well that after every heavy rain beautiful little lakelets form in places where, perhaps through the fault of the macadamizers, or the leveling, the surface has dropped a little below the established level. And now in their wisdom they are forcing the sidewalks down to the same water level as the streets, to the great damage of the maples and large expense to the owners. Where the plank sidewalk was laid over over so gradual a rise and large beautiful trees growing, they are now ordered to be settled to the beautiful level.

The cost of settling the trees, digging down the bank and getting rid of the earth is a grevious burden enough, without to say nothing about the cost of side walk and the adjusting of his lawn. Some of the lawns will have to be graded to a sloping front and others either terraced or walled up to prevent the sand from caving upon the sidewalks. Nor are these expenses and the owners will have, it he has a desire to see his trees again take root and flourish. He must trim the tops back severely so that they will not require more sap than the wounded roots can supply. If he neglects this his trees will surely die. But we are told that the city is superintending the work and that they will see that the trees are properly cared for.

From what I have seen of the work I feel safe in making the prediction that before this time next year every tree they have towered will be dead, unless the tops are trimmed. It would almost seem that the honorable council has no regard for the property rights of the private citizen but acted on the idea that they can force their peculiar ideas as supreme.

Teachers' Examination.

The annual Teachers' Examination for October will be held in the old high school building in the Village of East Jordan on Thursday and Friday, October 21-22, 1909, beginning at 8:30 a. m. standard time.

Applicants winishing their papers forwarded to another county will write their name, age, and third grade certificates will be issued from this examination. Paper will be furnished to all applicants.

J. H. MILFORD, Com.

Bellaire Independent: A deal was consummated last week whereby W. H. Corey of Traverse City became the owner of H. J. Cooper's barber shop, fixtures and building. Mr. Cooper has been a resident of Bellaire about nine years, and has many friends in this vicinity who will sincerely regret his leaving Bellaire, but on account of his father's failing health Mr. Cooper deemed it best to dispose of his property here and go to Charlevoix, where his father resides. Mr. Corey comes here very highly recommended and will move his family to Bellaire in a short time. He is expected to take possession of the shop some time next week.

Board of Supervisors.

The county solons are deliberating at the court house. There is in the English parliament an unwritten law that the members thereof shall wear their hats during sessions. The Charlevoix county supervisors do not wear hats inside, but they smoke, by reason, also, of an unwritten law.

Chairman Jack Hughes sits in Judge Mayne's leather chair, with his duty and a briar root both well in hand. Over the fall, where the stenographer sit at court time, the supervisors are scattered about, the incense of the soothing weed curling upward. The twelve jury chairs are filled—with supervisors, looking, for all the world like an unusually good jury, called to try Supervisor Jake Graff for some of his comedienes.

And what makes the court scene all the more realistic is the fact that Jake is acting just where we saw a prisoner sit at last term of court flanked by two lawyers, just as Jake was tinaked Monday afternoon by two associates in sin. And Jake's physique nonoy helped to perfect the illusion Clerk Pagion sat at the desk of the clerk of the court, casting pitying glances at Jake, just behind where sat Sheriff McWalte, as if waiting to escort Jake below. We scan the faces of the "jury" and see conviction plainly depicted. Hobbles, of Royne Falls, strokes his bald head and smokes while Bowery looks tolerably toward the prisoner.

About the first transaction was the voting of $265 into the assessment rolls for the benefit of the agricultural society, $100 of which was set apart for Pomona Grange for advertising purposes.

—Everything was very orderly and quiet during the last week's session of the board of supervisors. There was a short and lively session Saturday afternoon in the SENTINEL sanctum in which Jake Graff, of South Arm, figured conspicuously, but the police and SENTINEL secret service force were chary by and Jake escaped with his scalpe. That man Hobbles, of Royne Valley, however was the party who covered Graff's retreat.

—In the matter of weather all last week was a pronounced kicker. A westerly gale prevailed from Monday noon until Friday evening. The steamer Beaver, which went to the Island Monday morning was wind bound there until Friday afternoon, returning in a lumber sea. Among the Beaver Island people held here were W. E. Stephens, of the B. I. Lumber Co., and Keeper McCauley, of Squaw Island light. Several Charlevoix people were also detained at St. James. The Beaver went over again Sunday.

—An emergency meeting of the S. S. Legislative committee will be held at the Wilbur office Friday of this week to consider charges preferred by Capt. Wm. Finucan against Capt. C. D. Campbell, for alleged slander affecting the said Campbell's standing as a licensed master of steam vessels. The charges grow out of a failure on the part of the said Campbell to acknowledge the "master's salute" given by the said Finucan just outside the piers on the 27th day of August last. The Society frowns upon discourtesies of this character.

—Boyne Journal: Deputy Warden E. L. Stanford authorizes the Evening Journal to announce to the people that the law allows the spearing of white fish in Pine lake during the month of November. No other fish can be taken this way, however, except suckers and grass pike. Spearing jacks can be used for the purpose. This will be good news for those in our fair lake for the table than the white fish and those caught in Pine lake are much superior to the Lake Michigan catch on account of the difference in the water. Only by a spear or net can they be taken for they will not bite a hook. Deputy Stanford gives the people due notice of the opportunity and expects that the people will not abuse the privilege accorded them by the legislature by trying to get some either before or after November or by spearing other fish than those designated. The Warden's department will be alert during the time and all violators caught will be dealt with severely.

—Beautiful autumn weather again this week.

—Levinson has a new ad this week of special interest.

—Olaf Nordrum, of the Bush Co., was at the straits over Sunday.

—Lon Hodge has bought a half interest in the Tuttle livery barn.

—Frazier, the shoe man, advertises another special sale for Saturday this week.

—Married, at Ellsworth, Wednesday, Oct. 20, Mr. Emmet M. Isaman to Miss Nina C. Robinson.

—James O'Brien, of Norwood, was the first man to bring in a barrel of apples for the West Michigan Development Bureau exhibit.

—The Charlevoix high school foot ball team goes to Petoskey Saturday of this week to play that team. On Saturday, Nov. 20th, the Traverse City team comes to Charlevoix.

—Regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 252, F. & A. M., Tuesday evening, Oct. 26th. Work in first degree. The attendance of every member is desired. By order of W. M.

—The Northern Michigan Press club will hold its fall meeting at Manistee, Nov. 4 and 5. Hon. Chas. E. Townsend will be one of the speakers. An interesting program of matter of interest to newspaper men has been arranged. This Press club claims all the Lower Peninsula above Bay City and Muskegon.

—Through the omission of a line of copy in the composing room and the subsequent carelessness of the proof reader, this week we credited George Smith with the building of a new boat of 75 foot beam. This is altogether too much beam. It would mean a boat as long as the Manitou, which would not be warranted yet on the ferry line. The new boat will be 25 feet long.

—At this writing the potato market is decidedly weak—the Equity Society alone storage pre-action having a decidedly discouraging effect on the fall market. It looks now as if forty cents will be the limit at the opening for local consumption. Beyond that phase of the question, as concerns shipments, no man can now foretell the situation. The acreage in this section is somewhat greater than last year, and the yield about two thirds of normal.

—Manistique Pioneer: In withholding the launching of his gasoline motorial boom, Chas. S. Osborn has shown rare judgement. More than one boom has flattened out within the past three months on account of their "speerhumness." Monkeyness is to dead as the proverbial smell. The eighty or more Republican newspapers that are straining the least in Osborn's behalf, are anxious awaiting the word "go" from Osborn, but they all hope he will profit by the mistake made by Montgomery and others.

—W. J. Downey, of Detroit, a state factory inspector, arrived here Saturday to fight the week left undone by Mr. Cahill, whose career was so suddenly cut short recently. Mr. Downey had a conference with the school board, the outcome of which was that a proper fire escape shall be constructed at the back of the new high school building. The cost is estimated at $200. Mr. Downey had an interview with Cullen at the jail, and stated that the prisoner was already broken down in spirit—that he had not care what was done with him, even if they tied a stone about his neck and threw him in the lake.

NOW IN FIELD

Renewed pressure from friends in all sections of the state culminated Saturday in a definite announcement of the candidacy of Chase S. Osborn for the republican nomination for governor.

"After careful consideration of the situation," said Mr. Osborn, "I have come to feel that some expression of my gratitude is due my friends who have so warmly urged my candidacy for the governorship. Several months ago, when evidence of this sentiment first was given publicity I declared my determination to await events and under no circumstances to yield to importunity unless convinced of the existence of a real popular demand that I become a candidate. Recently developments have demonstrated to my satisfaction the existence of such a demand, so widespread and disinterested as to appeal to my sense of duty as a citizen far more than to any feeling of personal ambition.

"During the progress of the campaign I shall make clear the principles which will control me, and the policies I shall endeavor to pursue, should the people of Michigan honor me with election to the governorship."

The Supervisors

The board of supervisors closed its session Saturday afternoon. The board appropriated $517.59 to the Agricultural Society and $100 to defray the expense of the Charlevoix County exhibit at the State Grange, to be held at Traverse City in December next. And appertioned to the City of Charlevoix, State tax, $4,023.62; County tax, $12,117.95. And suspended by the Soldiers Relief Commission $181.25. A. E. Cross, of East Jordan, was elected Supt. of the Poor for three years, and Frank Dougherty, of Boyne Falls, was elected Supt. of the Poor, for two years. I. N. DeVoe, of Charlevoix, was elected school examiner, for one year, and L. A. Luther of Boyne City was elected school examiner for two years. The report of the Supt. of the Poor shows that they have expended $10,052.92 for support of the poor and improvements on the County farm, and that they have paid the County treasurer $2,000.15. The total valuation of the county as equalized, is $5,419,002.00. The board voted a county tax of $61,700.72. Of this amount they will use $30,000.00 to pay the running expenses of the county for the ensuing year and the balance of the amount to pay on the indebtedness of the county.

County Normal Notes.

Miss Grace Meggison, class of '09, and Miss Jessie Dorsaye, class of '08, visited the normal class, Monday, Oct. 11. They are both teaching in Antrim county.

Miss Megglison is teaching near Central Lake, and Miss Dorsaye is teaching near East Jordan.

Mr. W. F. Bashaw, county truant officer, visited the normal class, Thursday, Oct. 14. He gave a short talk on the Compulsory school law, and on the teacher's knowledge of the law.

The normal class entertained the supervisors and the board of educators, Thursday evening, Oct. 14. The following program was given after which several of the supervisors spoke of their appreciation of the entertainment, and of the work of the normal class.

Address of welcome—Georgia Scroggie.

Piano and violin duet—Louise Christensen and Bertha McGahan.

Recitation, Sherlock's Guide—Margaret Durance.

Work of County Normal School—Mary Berg.

Recitation, A Model Woman—Mary Dunlop.

Recitation, Cash's Courtship—Thomas Scroggie.

Song, My Own United States—Class.

Coffee and waffles were served as refreshments.

The normal class accompanied by Miss Eimer, Miss Reed and Supt. I. M. DeVoe, attended a session of the board of supervisors at the Court House, Friday afternoon, Oct. 15. Several points in Parliamentary law were observed which were of benefit to the class.

SPRAY TREES NOW

An official bulletin from Washington says that apple orchards in Michigan are threatened with the San Jose scale. What this bulletin mentions as a probability is already being realized. Many Michigan orchards are beyond saving as a result of the ravages of the scale, and the whole industry is threatened with extermination in this state unless prompt measures are taken to save the trees.

One of the best exterminators of this pest is what is known as the lime and sulphur mixture. It is made by mixing 20 pounds of unslaked lime, 15 pounds of flour of sulphur and 10 pounds of salt with 50 gallons of water. If the lime is specially good, take only 15 pounds, and if partially slaked, use 20.

This mixture is very powerful and should only be applied when the trees are dormant. Spray the trees thoroughly, because on the thoroughness with which the work is done will depend on the operation. On the apple this mixture also kills the blister mite, on the pear the jumping louse (the pear Psylla) which causes the leaves to turn black, and on the peach it destroys the borers which attack the buds.

To diagnose a case of San Jose scale examine your trees for a scurvy deposit, grayish in color, a little rough and full of tiny speckles. If not positive scrape the scale with the edge of your knife. If a yellowish liquid appears you have crushed hundreds of small insects and proven the presence of the disease.

The full grown insect is about an eighth of an inch in diameter. The young are hatched in the spring, and are minute and yellow. They crawl about the trees looking for new growth and are carried to other trees on the feet of birds and in many other ways. On the older trees they attack the new growth twigs and smaller branches, but on young stock they attack the whole tree. Often they fasten themselves on the fruit as well as the leaves and bark. Fruit so attacked becomes spotted, the spots taking the forms of pimplish rings. Trees attacked by the scale die quickly, and whole orchards are soon destroyed unless prompt measures are taken for their relief.

Fall is here and the trees will soon be dormant. A thorough spraying this fall and another in the spring of every fruit tree in the state would tend to put a decided check on the ravages of the San Jose scale and a repetition each winter would in time result in its destruction in the state.

Traverse City Record: A short time ago, one of the prominent fruit growers, in an interview with the Record, stated that the price of fruit could be greatly enhanced by its preparation, followed by a systematic method of grading and sorting. This contention is emphasized by the experience of F. G. Durfee of that city. Mr. Durfee sent a shipment of very fine apples to Chicago and expected for them, without exhibition, $1.25 per barrel more than the highest price quoted upon the market and more than Mr. Durfee expected to receive. In this case, extreme care had been taken in selections and the result proves what can be accomplished in fruit culture. The Grand Traverse fruits are attaining an enviable reputation and the experts of certain Colorado fruit growers might be enrolled here to advantage, and command greater attention. In that state, shipped by certain growers, each fruit, even like school teachers in barrel of apples is labeled something like this: "$1,000 cash for an imperfect apple in this barrel." This means the taking big chances but the fact that the grower knows absolutely what he is selling and is willing to back his reputation as a fruit grower with the contents of his pocket book, is significant.

"I would have been a cripple for life, from a terrible cut on my knee cap," writes Frank Dougherty, Kellher, Minn., "without Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which soon cured me." Infallible for wounds, cuts and bruises, it soon cures burns, scalds, old sores, boils, skin eruptions. World's best for piles. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co.

CHAPTER XI.

"Now that the Commander of Pequeds had been secured, David's part in this drama became comparatively easy. He believed in the brief conversation in which he and Commander Pequeds had exchanged greetings the hatred revealed upon the low-browed face of the Indian was the conclusion that also was true. When this arch villain had overheard the conversation between Scogdon and Stanford from her door, he had hastened to dispatch his half-breed accomplice to the Indian village, and had hidden him in a thicket and posted his ingenious trap. The Indian was unaware of the presence of the Commander of Pequeds, and David was fortunate in the choice of a place for his ambush, for the Indian was so close to the spot where the trap was set that David was compelled to act at once. As the bent sapling shot to the above there was a sudden movement of the Indian's arms, and the fleet-footed Pequeds was caught in the cruel noose.

"I shall not stop to reflect upon, or explain this unusual and bitter act of war, for I am a clergyman of the result had it not been so special, and in the coming days you had a moment respond the whole truth to your father. He is sure to be a man who has suffered his choice to warp his judgment, but if he is what I think he is, the dispute of his heart will soon be ended and forgotten.

"With many fearfulness of her part, Pequeds was soon brought to reason and made quite harmless. When she recovered from the effects of the noose she was with Scogdon and silently bound. Her Indian accomplice was not so easily subdued, and it was necessary for him to be shot in the leg before he could be secured. Pequeds was brought to the house and carried to her room, where she was bound and placed under guard.

"Then I ran to my father, and, with my two companions, we hastened to the spot where we had left Scogdon and Stanford. We found the latter still in the grip of the Indian, and Scogdon was lying in the path, with a bleeding head. The Indian had been overpowered by the two men, and the latter had been compelled to use their knives in self-defense. The Indian was a powerful man, and it was a desperate struggle. Scogdon was not dead, but he was very weak from the loss of blood, and we had to carry him home. Stanford was not hurt, but he was very much bruised and shaken up. We had left Pequeds in her room, and we had to carry Scogdon to his home and there we had to leave him, for he was in a state of mind that was dangerous to himself and others. We had to bind him to the bed, and he was so violent that we had to call in a physician to quiet him

Evidently a Conspiracy.

Dr. Frederick Cook, the discoverer of the boreal center, in his lecture tour, is received everywhere with an enthusiasm that betokens confidence. The belief seems to be well grounded in the minds of the American people that the charges against him are inspired by bitter disappointment and jealously. The belief in the honesty of Dr Cook is strengthened not only by a knowledge of his past achievements, but by his calm, modest and dignified conduct under what must be a soul-harrowing trial.

And now comes another charge against him—that he did not reach the summit of the Alaskan peak—Mount McKinley—as he claims. His guide on that expedition comes forward with an affidavit that Cook has lied to the public concerning that mountain climbing venture.

Inasmuch as the story of Cook and the guide have, up to this time, agreed in every detail, the conclusion is quite natural that the guide has been guilty of falsehood during these years, or that he is guilty of perjury now. The undisputed fact of a recent conference between the guide and Peary's backers seems to indicate that the latter is true.

"The mills of the gods grind slow, but they grind exceedingly fine." We believe that time will work the discomfiture of the Peary conspirators and place the laurels upon the brow of the intrepid, modest Dr. Cook. We believe this last attempt to discredit him will recoil upon its author.

PRIMARY MONEY

There has been a great deal of trouble with the distribution of primary school money throughout the state and the superintendent of public instruction has sent out a circular in which he fully explains the proper course to be pursued by district officers. The difficulty, he says, seems to arise largely from the fact that when territory is divided and the money and property set over, no provision is made for the primary money to be apportioned in the future. Part of the trouble also arises from the fact that the primary money is always apportioned on the census of the year previous. The superintendent of public instruction explains the matter as follows:

"Where a new district was formed this summer, after the census was taken in June, by taking the territory from other districts, the old districts will still appear on our records intact, and we will apportion the primary money in November, 1909, on the census of 1908, and if the census were taken in June, 1909, before the division of the territory, we would apportion the primary money in May, 1909, and November, 1909, on that census in making the division of property and territory, provision should be made for these three apportionments of the primary money, and a record made in the proceedings of the number of children set over from each district, so that there will be no question about it. Then when the apportionments are made the township clerk will see that the new district gets its share of the primary money, which would have gone to the old district. The same provision should be made when a district is disorganized and the territory attached to other districts. Each district should receive its share of the primary money to be apportioned."

Boyne Journal: Ducks are reported to be very plentiful on the lakes now. Capt. Weaver is authority for the story that there was a flock of a thousand seen yesterday. He got a shot from the boat and secured a fine fat one. Local sportsmen are out on the water today in large numbers.

Francis Mamagona, an Indian who lives near Kewadin, was stabbed with a pitchfork by John Neffenger, the other day and it is doubtful if he will recover. The farmer who committed the assault has been arrested. The matter grew out of the trespass of the Indian's horse in the farmer's corn some time ago, at which time it is claimed Neffenger shot at Mamagona.

Central Lake Tocsin: Norman Larabee, after a quite prolonged illness died at 2 a. m. today. His trouble was one of a bronchial nature, akin to tuberculosis, though his advanced age and the fact that he has never been robust, were no doubt contributing causes. Mr. Larabee came into this section in 1890 or 1 from Missouri. He was over 72 years of age at the time of his death. The only surviving member of his immediate family is N. D. Larabee, of this village, now at Yankton, Oregon.

Word comes to Traverse City that the body of Captain Henry Hansrett, who went down with the lading tug Ithine last December, washed ashore off South Frankfort on Tuesday afternoon. At first the condition of the body indicated that it would be impossible to ascertain the identity of the victim, but after a little the sweater worn by the man was recognized, removing all doubt that this was one of the men who perished at the time of the fishing boat disaster just before the last days of the year 1908.

The Blue Lake lumber company has taken the contract of sawing 15,000,000 feet of timber for the David Ward estate and the work will keep them busy for a year and a half. This timber was burned and killed by the forest fires last fall and must be cut soon to save it. The sawing will be done at the company's big band saw mill at Blue Lake which has a daily capacity of 50,000 feet and gives employment to 50 men. The lumber will be shipped over the Ward railroad which has relaid its logging branch to the mill.

Cadillac News: To attend the circuit court reporting for eight counties is a stunt that few men or women shorthand reporters care to tackle or even have tackled. That is the job that James E. Henderson of this city is holding down and has held for over 20 years. Four, and sometimes five times a year, Mr. Henderson takes the court notes in the counties of Wexford, Missaukee, Kalkaska, Antrim, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Benzie and Charlevoix. More than that, he does all his own typewriting, being unwilling to leave the work of transcribing to any one else.

George F. Rose of the development bureau says that the recent storm is worth more than $1,000,000 to the fruit growers of western Michigan because it happened at the time when the young San Jose scale are in the migratory stage and their shells not being formed they will perish from the cold and will save the trouble of spraying the trees. It is at this season of the year that the birds and insects carry the scale on their feet and spread them all over the country, but after this storm the scales will be dead and this source of contagion will be averted. About ten days from the present the scales will begin to form their hard shells when they will be able to withstand the cold. While the loss from hidden trees will be considerable the good that will be derived from the destruction of the insect pests will offset the loss so far that the growers will be glad that the storm occurred.

Traverse City Special: Richard B. Silver, 82 years old, who died at the home of his son, O. Lote Silver, manager of Greenhead, was probably the oldest druggist in the United States, having travelled for more than 70 years. Paralysis was the cause of his death, he having suffered the first stroke eighteen months ago. Mr. Silver was a Mason for more than 30 years. When a boy of 12 years, Mr. Silver started out with a little wagon show, travelling for years in that manner. When his children were old enough, he took his five sons and organized the "Silver Family," touring the United States and a good portion of Canada, continuing until eight years ago, when his health failed. After that, the five sons all engaged in popular priced theatrical ventures, the five being in business in this state now. O. Lote Silver one of the sons, has the distinction of being the father of illustrated songs, having used a single lantern in that capacity while on tour with his father. The widow also survives.

G. A. Emerson, state secretary of the Farmer's Society of Equity, has given a statement to the press explaining how the members of the society who grow potatoes in Grand Traverse county propose to get 50 cents for their potatoes, at least, or they will not sell. "This society is well aware of the fact that supply and demand regulate prices, but I want it understood that we are going to regulate the supply," says Emerson. "We have on foot a plan whereby general canvassers are being appointed in every county that grows potatoes in this state and in other potatoe states who in turn are appointing deputies over their respective counties and inside of three or four weeks the canvass will be made and pledges taken so that we shall know the exact conditions of the potatoe crop and every grower will stand for the minimum price of 50 cents. Each one who wants to sell while the price is 50 cents and when the demand is supplied at this figure the price will naturally fall; then each grower hold until it comes back to the minimum price. Thus holding the supply so that it will not be greater than the demand."

Traverse City Eagle: Last week while Fred K. George, advertising manager of the Pere Marquette, was in the city he secured a very fine specimen of Winter Banana apples which he took back to Detroit with him. After arriving there he thought it might be a good idea to present to George W. Perkins of the New York offices, so he carefully packed the apple and sent it by express to Mr. Perkins, and Thursday he received a telegram requesting him to send three barrels just like the sample to the latter's New York address for the use of himself and J. Pierpont Morgan. It is now up to George to secure the three barrels, the contents of which must be up to the grade of the sample. As the apple sent was a perfect specimen it will keep this busy securing this amount, but it is needless to say that he will find them if he has to travel all over the Grand Traverse region to secure them. When the order is filled it will be a great advertisement of the fruit industry of this section, as it will acquaint the millionaires of New York with the quality of fruit raised here and very likely interest them in our fruit lands. At the present time the east is not as well acquainted as it should be with our possibilities and this venture may be the means of bringing great good to this country. Mr. George thoroughly understands the art of advertising, and will make the most of this opportunity to place some of our choicest fruit on the tables of the magnates of the nation.

KEY WEST IN RUINS.

Hurricane Wrecks Florida—Property Loss $2,000,000.

As a result of the hurricane which struck the southern coast of Florida Monday morning Key West is a mass of wreckage and the damage to property is estimated at $2,000,000. Martial law was proclaimed by the mayor, and the Key West guards are patrolling the city. The United States government has been asked to dispatch troops there and submit today to assist in patrolling the storm swept area. Conditions are chaotic and few persons remain in their homes, hundreds of which either have been totally wrecked or damaged. It is thought that many lives have been claimed along the coast.

The storm reached its height at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, when the wind had an estimated velocity of 120 miles an hour. There was a hard, steady blow from 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. when the wind began to die down, and by 4 o'clock the center of the hurricane had passed.

Besides the seven score of residences either wrecked or shifted from their foundations, the factories were all destroyed, including the Mexican-American Mariner Schooks, Hirs Lopez, Manuel Lopez, Pedro Torres, Cuba, Scott Cigar manufacturers. Two of the city fire engine depots were also demolished and the firemen narrowly escaped. The top of the First National Bank was blown off the building, knocking down the running gear of the government coaling station were wrecked.

As soon as the wind had subsided, plundering began. The city marshal, who was unable to cope with the situation, and the mayor decided to take urgent measures to suppress looting, his proclamation of martial law resulting. Almost every building in the city was damaged and the city's population of more than 20,000, about one-half of whom are employed in the cigar manufactories, sponge fisheries, and salvage companies.

MORSE GOES BACK TO JAIL.

High Federal Court Approves Sentence—Will Ask for Pardon.

Charles W. Morse, ice-king and shipping rose builder, spent Monday night in the Tombs, New York, facing the more probable prospect of spending the next fifteen years in a still more irksome cell, the United States prison at Atlanta.

The little man who found it so easy to juggle millions that he was able to pay back $1,000,000 of his stock liabilities while actually under sentence and free only on bail, learned that there was one law in this land which was his master—the law. A unanimous decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the decision rendered by a lower court eleven months ago—that Morse was guilty of violating the laws governing national banks.

And from this latest decision there is only one appeal—to the Supreme Court of the United States. This appeal was taken. Judges Lacombe, Coxe and Noyes constituting a trio of justice to Martin W. Littleton, the convicted financier's lawyer. Morse's chief hope is that President Taft will use the great work of restitution done during the little remainder of his term of service, may pardon him. In fact, the Circuit Court practically pointed out in its decision that the pardon is the best alone Morse should look.

Morse, always a gambler, took the blow without a quiver. It was upon his faithful wife, who has given up all her luxuries and has worked day and night to help him, that the setback came with full force, but she will wed Fraulein Chase, actress, if he wins a decree.

A Washington correspondent wrote that the Canadian thirteen Dakotas have spoken through their legislatures in favor of an amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the election of Senators by direct vote.

CLEVELAND IS GIVEN THREE-CENT CAR FARE

Company and City Finally Settle Problem That Has Caused Political Turmoil Many Years.

JOHNSON WINS A LONG FIGHT

A conference was held Tuesday to arrange final details which will result in an absolute settlement of the Cleveland street railway difficulty which has been bitterly agitated for eight years, during the life of the controversy it has been a political issue at all times. Partial settlements have been made and many proposed, but all failed of their object. Now peace is assured.

The basis of the strike has been Mayor Tom L. Johnson's contention for a 3-cent fare. The proposed settlement will be on this rate of fare, and will eliminate the street car question from the fall campaign.

Twenty-Five Year Franchise.

All the main points have been settled. It is agreed that the city shall give the City Land Railway Company, the owner of the local lines, a twenty-five-year franchise, revocable at any time at the demand of the people if the contract with the city is violated. The city reserves the right to purchase the lines at any time municipal ownership is made lawful, providing the city decides to take over the lines. The city also reserves the right to name a purchaser of the lines after eight years. The initial rate of fare is to be 2 cents on all lines, with a 1-cent extra charge for a transfer.

Both the city and the railway company have agreed to let Judge Robert W. Taylor of the United States Court determine the value of the railway property and the maximum rate of fare. It is agreed that at no time shall the rate of fare be greater than will allow the company an earning power of more than 6 per cent on the value of the property, consistent with good service. Judge Taylor has both said that he will make the maximum rate of fare 4 cents for a cash fare and the regular ticket rate even tickets for 25 cents and 4 cent extra for transfers. This proposition has been accepted both by the city and the railway.

WILL INCREASE ARMY CADETS.

President Wants More Appointed to West Point—No Enough Officers.

Less than 20 per cent of the whole number of officers in the United States army are graduates of the West Point military academy, and each graduating class is about eighty short of the number necessary to offer the army.

The President and the Secretary of War plan to urge Congress to increase by 125 the number of cadets to be sent to the academy and to have them appointed every three years, instead of every four years as at present. The present strength of the corps of cadets at West Point was established many years ago, when the army consisted of only 2,500 men. In 1898 the army was increased to its present strength of 30,000 men and 4,000 officers. About the same time Congress authorized a project for enlarging the plant at the military academy and has appropriated altogether about $6,500,000 for the construction of new buildings and the enlargement of existing ones. Col. Scott says that by next spring the improvements will have been advanced sufficiently to accommodate 125 cadets.

GIRL WORKS 3 YEARS AS BOY.

Cleveland Young Woman Employed as Boy Reveals Sex and by Grower.

After masquerading as a boy for three years, playing loop games, working in a livery stable, driving a grocer's team and handling heavy boxes and express packages, "Harry Roberts" has confessed to the Cleveland police that "he" is Lillian Hoffman, stepdaughter of Gottfleb Melers. In 1906 the girl, then only 17, became tired of her home. She ran away, donned boy's clothing and went into the world to work as a man. Her identity became known a short time ago, when she was arrested while employed by D. Martin, a grocer, on a minor charge. Now her stepfather has brought her girl's clothes. The parent ascribes the child's conduct to a love for horses.

DUDLEY BUCK DIES, AGED 70.

Dudley Buck, organist and composer died Wednesday at the home of his son in West Orange, N. J. He had just returned from a few years' absence in Europe. Mr. Buck was 70 years old. He was born in Hartford and was educated at Leipzig Conservatory. He composed the cantata sung by 800 voices at the opening of the centennial in Philadelphia and became famed as a composer of sacred music. He was organist at the Church of the Holy Trinity and retired from all except theoretical work and composition in 1902.

WOMAN IS SLAIN WITH HATCHET

A coroner's jury is investigating the brutal murder of Mrs. Cyrus E. Dennis, of Liberty, N. Y., whose head was split open apparently with a hatchet. On returning from school at the noon recess her young son, Horace, found his mother dead in an upper hallway. With a shriek the boy fell fainting over his mother's body. Neighbors found the woman's husband at work in the stable. He was arrested.

ONE KILLED AND TWO SCORE HURT IN I. C. WRECK.

Trains in Head-On Collision at Parnell City—Victims Delegates to Sunday School Convention.

One person killed and two score injured, many probably fatally, is the reported result of a head-end collision between passenger trains on the Illinois Central at Parnell, Ill. Almost all the victims, including the dead, were delegates to a Sunday school convention held at Parmer City, Ill., a few miles south of Parnell, in from the State fair at Springfield.

Parnell is about six miles south of Farmer City. It is a way station without a train dispatcher or any telegraph connection. The train crews received at Clinton, a hand car having been used to reach the telegraph office across the country, at 5 o'clock the news was wired. A relief train with the necessary doctors on board was sent to the academy and to have them appointed every three years, instead of every four years as at present. The present strength of the corps of cadets at West Point was established many years ago, when the army consisted of only 2,500 men. In 1898 the army was increased to its present strength of 30,000 men and 4,000 officers. About the same time Congress authorized a project for enlarging the plant at the military academy and has appropriated altogether about $6,500,000 for the construction of new buildings and the enlargement of existing ones. Col. Scott says that by next spring the improvements will have been advanced sufficiently to accommodate 125 cadets.

MANY PRAIRIE DOGS DIE.

More than 750,000 Killed by Government Poisoner in Southwest.

More than 750,000 prairie dogs have been killed in the last eight months by J. W. Holman, the recognized government poisoner of the pests in the Southwestern States. Mr. Holman has been in Kansas City to obtain a new supply of strychnine and will start on a second expedition within a few days. "I shall kill at least 1,500,000 dogs in the next eight months," said he. "The prairie dogs are a pest in the Southwest, and especially in Texas. They are destroying pasture land and their burrows make it dangerous for horsemen. They cannot be trapped or shot, but it is easy to poison them by placing strychnine on wheat, which they eat readily." Under Mr. Holman's direction the government has used 175 cents a head for destroying the dogs.

17,000,000 CHILDREN IN SCHOOLS OF UNITED STATES.

An enormous array of children is engaged in the regular school emulation for education. This peaceful force numbers more than 17,000,000 persons. Those composing it will range in age from 5 to 18 years. It represents the common school system of the States.

The bureau of education is a branch of the general government and collects statistics concerning the schools. Complete returns for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, have been received from every State except Delaware and Montana. This makes it possible to compile the most complete and valuable data ever available.

The figures obtained by the bureau of education show that at the close of the school year in June, 1907, there was a total enrollment of 16,930,218 children in the common schools of the various States. This included 4,738,787 in the public schools of the 651 cities having more than 8,000 population, 14.1 in the 651 cities, and 14.1 in the rural districts. As for the whole country, the average number of days' attendance was 121.2 out of the 180 days' session, or 67.3 per cent. On the total array of school children for the present campaign will be largely in excess of 17,000,000.

Census officials estimated the total population of the country in June, 1907, to be 85,526,761. On that basis it was computed that the number of children ranging in age from 5 to 18 years was 21,282,856. The percentage in sex was not striking, the boys numbering 11,275,149 and the girls 11,007,707. The estimated number of male persons more than 21 years of age was 23,848,[illegible].

Taking the above figures as a foundation, it was found that enrollment of 16,930,218 of all ages between 5 and 18 was equal to 69.61 per cent of the school population. The per cent of enrollment showed a decrease, and in 1905 it was 72.41 per cent. In 1898 it was 68.61 per cent; in 1890 it was 65.56 per cent and in 1870 the percentage was 61.45.

The sex difference in enrollment was less than in the matter of school population, it was found. Of the total 8,375,921 boys and 8,516,887 girls were enrolled. This represented 19.75 per cent of the total population.

That attendance of work was found for truant officers and persistent truants is found in the fact that the average daily attendance at school was 11,925,672, or 70.60 per cent of the entire enrollment.

The average length of the annual school term was a fraction more than

INDIANA MAN IS MURDERED.

T. A. Morgan, a resident of Lake County, Indiana, was found dead the other morning a short distance north of the union station at Benton Harbor. There is every reason to believe that Morgan was murdered by a companion, whose identity is unknown to the sheriff of Lake County. Friends of Morgan was shot on the Pere Marquette tracks and his body later was dragged from the right of way and placed in a half-concealed position in a ditch along the grade. At first the previous which the officials in the whole case found a shot fired in the locality where the body was found. Shortly afterward a man was observed running down the tracks, but nothing was thought of the affair until the discovery of Morgan's body, and the authorities are now in search of the man's companion. Morgan did not have much money in his possession, as he worked from day to day to earn a livelihood, so the theory that he was murdered and robbed is not entertaining over two years.

Joseph H. Miller, president of the Amsterdam Diamond Company, was arrested at Detroit charged with losing the mails for a battery scheme.

Two workmen were injured, one probably fatally, in the collapse of a scaffold on which they were working at the factory of the Central Paper Company in Muskegon.

Dr. Alfred M. Webster, secretary of the New Era Life Insurance Association, was found dead on the floor of his offices in Grand Rapids. He had been shot in the temple.

Gilmore Smith, aged 17 years, of South Park, was arrested, charged with breaking his apprenticeship with the Draper Manufacturing Company and going to work for another company. This is the first case of the kind known there for a long time.

A piston rod on the engine at the mills of the Kalamazoo Paper Company broke and with its force from a speed of seventy revolutions a minute, carried with it through a 12-inch brick wall the end of the steam chest, as the result of which Albert Deakin is fatally injured and Edward Weymes is seriously injured.

Hiram Jackson, the Yale young man who shot a boy last Christmas, as a result of an accident at the Yale Woolen mills, was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced from the county jail to the hospital. The physicians believe that he will be released on the ground of insanity when if operation is performed that will remove a piece of bone from his skull.

The University of Michigan opened the other day in all departments. The advance registration of students showed a total enrollment of 4,738 in the literary department, 1,000 in the medical department, 1,000 in the law department, 1,000 in the dental department, 1,000 in the pharmacy department, 1,000 in the engineering department, 1,000 in the department of architecture, 1,000 in the department of forestry and 1,000 in the department of music.

Frank A. Bush, president in social and business life in Kalamazoo, died after an illness of six months, due to the hardening of the liver. Bush was a son of the late Frederick Bush, one of the leading citizens of that section of the State and a nephew of Senator Bush. He was 51 years of age and until two years ago was actively identified with a number of manufacturing institutions there.

Claude Fall, aged 25, unmarried, a Michigan Central section man, got on a train at Owosso to go to his home in Ionia. He was drunk and abusive. Conductor W. H. Loomis tried to put the young man off the train, whereupon Fall attacked Loomis, who has but one leg and could not defend himself. Fall was sentenced to ninety days in the Detroit house of correction, without a chance to pay a fine.

Mrs. Andrew E. McAdoo and her son, A. E. McAdoo, were killed by a train at Ann Arbor while crossing at Yipsilanti, while Mr. McAdoo was driving his buggy out of the station, which she expected to take a train for Detroit. Mr. McAdoo did not see the approaching railroad crossing the street at a short angle and buildings hid the train. Mrs. McAdoo was 76 years old and her son 15 and unmarried.

After three hours' deliberation a Circuit Court jury in Battle Creek pronounced J. W. Loomis of Marshall guilty of mistreating his juvenile helper, Ernest Boland, 12 years old. It was charged that numerous other hardships young Boland was required to go into the meadows barefooted after cattle even while the frost was on the ground. The jury recommended that Loomis be whipped the boy with a board with nails on it.

Fifteen years old, 17 years old, hanged himself by his suspender from two rubber vents of Carson City. Peculiarly tragic in the suicide of the two children is thought to have been the cause.

William O. Sutton, aged 18 years, who is under arrest in Lansing for the murder of Ethel Ward, near Ionia, last Christmas, is said to have confessed to the murder of the young girl.

Thomas Hale, 14 years old, of Oscoda, tried a stilt out in a swamp directly back of his home, which is on the outskirts of the village. He proved his marksmanship by killing instantly a black bear. The animal weighed 350 pounds and measured 52 inches from tip to tip.

Mrs. Mathew Lord, 49 years of age, a resident of Minneapolis, was accidentally killed on the White River road, when her horse became frightened by a train and ran away. Mrs. Lord was thrown from the buggy and her neck broken.

Political Comment.

Mr. Bryan Gets a Real Issue.

Mr. Bryan and Senator Bailey of Texas are engaged in an animated controversy about the tariff. They have threatened even to hold a joint debate, though this appears now to be far off.

It seems that Mr. Bryan went down in Texas a few weeks ago and made a speech in Dallas. In that speech he severely criticised those Democrats who voted for a tax on raw materials, he said their course was anti-Democratic.

This roused Senator Bailey. He had voted for that tax. In order to vindicate his Democracy he made a few speeches himself. He said he was willing to take the tax off raw materials when the tax on the manufactured product was proportionately reduced. Not till then.

The controversy between Mr. Bryan and Senator Bailey is significant. Mr. Bryan has set out to get the party together on certain tariff planks which emphasize the doctrine of free raw materials—iron ore, wool, coal, hides, etc. He announced these planks in a recent issue of the Commoner. The disagreement with Senator Bailey is thus not an isolated incident. It is a skirmish in Mr. Bryan's campaign within the party.

Senator Bailey has little to learn from Mr. Bryan about forcible popular presentation. His speeches show that he has Commoner-like ability to sustain his view. But while Mr. Bailey is ably defending himself, Mr. Bryan is doing good National and State policies. He is doing this for the first time in his career. He seems to have seized the situation.

This is certainly the time for a Democrat to emphasize the tariff issue. The reason is that Democrats who favor a tariff fill are always hazardous for the party to power. Witness 1850 and 1894, when the Democrats were overwhelmingly shifted by overwhelming majorities to the opposition.

Every tariff bill, no matter how good, is generally unsatisfactory. No man can get his whole wants, nor even the others minus have something. Hence the discontent and the danger.

Mr. Bryan occupies a peculiarly advantageous personal position. Free raw materials would suit Nebraska. They unanimously make a strong appeal in a district from other Western States. Now that the Minnesota man has got his tariff on timber, he probably finds it easier to criticise his indignation when he thinks that the country is deprived of free wood, free iron ore, free hides, free oil and free other things. And he is typical of thousands in the other States.

At last Mr. Bryan is out on a definite, tangible, arguable, historic Democratic issue that may help his party in the North—the low tariff issue. This is a Democratic issue. It is a Democratic standpoint. Democrats should be entirely proud of it. It unfolds the Democratic ideal. It appeals to the independent voter. It offers such a service, but the main will be divided between the rival lines.

Free Raw Materials.

Mr. Bryan's Democratic ideal is free raw materials. Free raw materials would benefit the consumer. The consumer is the man who pays the tariff. The tariff is a tax on the consumer. It is a tax on the people. Free raw materials would benefit the consumer. The consumer is the man who pays the tariff. The tariff is a tax on the people. Free raw materials would benefit the people.

Free raw materials would benefit the people. Free raw materials would benefit the people. Free raw materials would benefit the people.

—The sugar beet harvest is now on with full force, and stock is coming in to the sheds regularly. The times thus far—15 to 17—percent, are satisfactory to all concerned, and the yield of tons per acre is fully up to expectations and may be said to be well up to measure of desire.

—The Traverse City Record, in speaking of the trial at Leland of Ass Allen, charged with murder says that "the case has occasioned considerable interest and it is believed that the jury will either acquit Allen or will bring in a verdict of not guilty." There is considerable Irish in that opinion.

—The announcement of the death of Associate Justice Peckham at his home in Albany is of local interest, inasmuch as Mr. S. A. Widdifield, of this city, was his private secretary. It is not known at this writing what effect the death of Justice Peckham will have upon the position of "Ole," but he is too valuable a man to be long out of a job.

—Deputy Warden Eddy has called our attention to the item we published late last week from the Cheboygan Tribune, regarding the arrest of the owner of the tug Ogontz for fishing without a license. He says there is no law requiring a license. The claim is that the Ogontz was substituting for the tug Arthur, which was temporarily under repairs, and that the Arthur's license therefore covered her work. Mr. Eddy says the Ogontz should have applied to the warden for a permit, which would have protected him. The deputies must take things as they find them. The whole article, Mr. Eddy claims, is a substantial tissue of facts.

—D. S. Payton, director of the West Michigan Development Bureau received Monday from Benton Harbor, his badge of office, which he will wear for duty in this territory and the Straits. The Inspector, Commander Edgar, U. S. N., came here on the Sunday last week, but returned to Chicago by rail.

—Cheboygan special: The board of supervisors, in the Friday afternoon session, knocked out the plans of the anti-saloon workers, and Cheboygan county will remain "wet" for another year at least. The action, it is said, was in accordance with the wishes of a majority of the business men, was accomplished by adjourning sine die by a vote of 12 to 10. The "drys" advocates failed to get enough names on their petitions for the submission of the question to the electorate, and asked the board to adjourn till Jan. 10, when they hoped to have a sufficient number of signers.

—At the local option rally at the opera house, a couple of weeks since, some of the speakers charged that the "law and order league" organized in Cheboygan was in the interests of the "wets" and against local option. Emmet county voted local option on September 7, according to the Petoskey News, the citizens of that city found it necessary to organize a law and order league in that city county and it was meeting was called by the Business Men's class of the M. E. church for the organization of a league to secure a more rigid observance of the local option law in that city, which was attended by about 225 and a committee appointed to plan for forming a permanent organization.—Cheboygan Tribune. It this be true the Petoskey organization should change its name, as there is a state organization known as the "law and Order League," which under the pretense of enforcing the law in wet counties, has for its chief purpose the restoration of the saloons in the dry counties. It is working in the interest of the breweries and distilleries. It is the "wolf in sheep's clothing."

Cadillac News: Elsewhere in this issue is given a news report from Saint Ste. Marie which says that Charlevoix has formally entered the list as a candidate for governor. —The new hand in making good progress in affecting its organization. They ordered six new instruments Tuesday and have engaged Mr. McCallum, the well known Petoskey musician and teacher, and he began his work with the boys last night. There is plenty of young musical talent in Charlevoix with which to organize a good band and we hope there is a corresponding musical spirit among the business men. A good band cannot be maintained without the aid and encouragement of the public.

—Marshall Wenster, of Waukegan, who has been visiting his aunt, Mrs John O'Neill, returned home Monday.

—Director Dayton has just sent another bunch of Charlevoix County farm photographs to the West Michigan Development Bureau.

—Thirty counties in Michigan will have local option fights on their hands the coming winter, twenty-four of them are in the lower peninsula.

—New ads this week:—H. W. Miller, M. A. Lechman & Co., J. L. Crane, Kalamazoo Furnishing and Tailoring Co., F. E. Frazier and A. Powers.

—A. E. Hulsge and wife left Tuesday for Chicago. After a short visit with friends there they will take an automobile trip into Wisconsin, provided the weather permits.

—G. H. Green, chief book keeper for the Booth Fisheries Co. in this city, has been detailed for six weeks special work for the company at Erie, Pa. His brother, Fred W. Green, takes his place in the local office during his absence.

—The warden steamer, Chase S. Osborn, deputy Eddy in charge, dragged up a bunch of nets in Round Lake last Friday. If Mr. Eddy knows to whom the nets belong he will not tell, for good reasons, but he intimates that we may hear something dropping. It is also reported that nets are being set in Pine Lake. The deputy says this business is bound to get somebody into trouble.

—On Saturday and Sunday last Capt. Wm. Finnegan was the guest of Capt. Hubbard on the lighthouse tender Sumac on a trip among the straits lights and buoys. Capt Hubbard will make this port his headquarters the remainder of the season for duty in this territory and the Straits. The Inspector, Commander Edgar, U. S. N., came here on the Sunday last week, but returned to Chicago by rail.

—Cheboygan special: The board of supervisors, in the Friday afternoon session, knocked out the plans of the anti-saloon workers, and Cheboygan county will remain "wet" for another year at least. The action, it is said, was in accordance with the wishes of a majority of the business men, was accomplished by adjourning sine die by a vote of 12 to 10. The "drys" advocates failed to get enough names on their petitions for the submission of the question to the electorate, and asked the board to adjourn till Jan. 10, when they hoped to have a sufficient number of signers.

—Grant M. Morse, former state game warden, was in the city Saturday. We cannot speak authoritatively, but we have a well grounded suspicion that Mr. Morse is looking over the field in the interest of a certain lower peninsula candidate for governor.

—H. M. Enos is still quite ill at his home. While hopes are entertained that he will pull through all right, there is very little probability that he will resume his work at the Argo Milling Co. office this winter. The office community is sincerely wishing that he may fully recover and for many years to come continue to hold the city, as he has for the years that have passed.

—A dramatic club formed among the young people of this city for the purpose of studying dramatic art, and furnishing good wholesome amusement for the patrons of the theatre, will, under the direction of Agnes M Jarvis, produce at the Bridge Theatre the very laughable farce comedy, "The Gilded Youth" interspersed with songs, recitations, choruses, etc. Look for date next week.

—Traverse City Record: When the reports of the hurricane at Key West were received here last week, the friends of the Rev. and Mrs. C. T. Stout, formerly of this city, were much relieved to know that they were in Chicago instead of Key West. At that time no details of the disaster were received. It has been learned since, however, that the parsonage where Mr. and Mrs. Stout lived was wrecked entirely and that St. James church, of which Mr. Stout is rector, was damaged very badly.

—At the local option rally at the opera house, a couple of weeks since, some of the speakers charged that the "law and order league" organized in Cheboygan was in the interests of the "wets" and against local option. Emmet county voted local option on September 7, according to the Petoskey News, the citizens of that city found it necessary to organize a law and order league in that city county and it was meeting was called by the Business Men's class of the M. E. church for the organization of a league to secure a more rigid observance of the local option law in that city, which was attended by about 225 and a committee appointed to plan for forming a permanent organization.—Cheboygan Tribune. It this be true the Petoskey organization should change its name, as there is a state organization known as the "law and Order League," which under the pretense of enforcing the law in wet counties, has for its chief purpose the restoration of the saloons in the dry counties. It is working in the interest of the breweries and distilleries. It is the "wolf in sheep's clothing."

Open Evenings on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

THE SATURDAY EXHIBIT

The Inauguration of the Local Fruit and Vegetable Show a Success.

The farmers' competitive exhibit of fruit and vegetables at the Wilbur store building on Saturday made up fully in quality what it lacked in extent.

While the exhibit was embellished with a good assortment of splendid specimens of the field and garden, the apple and pear feature was well worth seeing, and it was viewed by many during the day.

The apple exhibit, especially, was a splendid show of fruit, and would of itself make a great showing in any county or state fair. The baskets and crates contrasted a picture that would make your mouth water. No finer fruit was ever picked from a tree anywhere. It was marked and alluring to the take to the Grand Rapids newspaper that recently stated that the Michigan fruit belt ended at Grand Traverse county.

Baldwin—1st. Wm. Bird; 2d. Louis Gravelin.

Russet—1st. James O'Brien; 2d. A. Reynolds.

Squash—1st. Fred Sneathen; 2d. Edi. Reed.

Pumpkin—1st. Fred Sneathen; 2d. Edi. Ross.

Cabbage—1st. Wm. Lyndklip; 2d. High McCartney.

This competitive exhibit, which was under the auspices of the Charlevoix Retail Merchants' Association, constituted the inauguration of a movement to make the market conditions of Charlevoix by bringing the merchants and farmers into closer relation socially and commercially.

The movement is a commendable one, and, aside from bringing into a more consciousness revelation the agricultural and pomological advantages of this particular section of the Grand Traverse region will serve to stimulate local business activity.

High School Notes.

Arrangements have been made between Boyne City and Charlevoix high schools to continue the spelling contest which began last year. Each school selects ten lists of twenty-five words, alternate weeks, these to be placed on the board Thursday morning and pronounced Friday morning. The contest to be closed by a "spelling down" match held in Charlevoix in the spring.

The H. S. foot ball team met defeat at Petoskey, Saturday, Oct. 23 by a score 11 to 0. The team was somewhat crippled by the absence of Dalton and Inglis, and by Mayne making it necessary to put in substitutes. The boys played a consistent game throughout and are not discouraged but are determined to win the three remaining games with Boyne City, East Jordan and Traverse City. The Boyne City teams come to Charlevoix Saturday Nov. 1, the game at 1:30 p. m. between the two second teams and at 2:30 p. m. between the first teams. The boys need the encouragement of the Charlevoix people for their Saturday game at the Boyne City team has not yet been scored upon.

ROWE SEEMS HUSTLER

Traverse City Eagle: George H. Rowe returned this afternoon from Chicago, where he has been this week to arrange several matters in connection with the exposition. While there he arranged for the painting of three scenes from western Michigan to form a part of the frieze around the building. The scenes will be typical of this section and were chosen with reference to advertising features as well as beauty.

Messrs. Church, George and Rowe arranged for the printing of the booklet while there and the contract calls for 250,000 copies of the work at a cost of $7,000. This booklet will contain about 40 halftones that will represent as far as possible all the principal industries of this section and will add greatly to the appearance of the work. The booklet will be ready to go in the hands of the printers by Nov. 6.

The bureau has engaged Paul Sweitzer to do the writing of the matter, and he will make personal visits to the various sections and write them up in the most advantageous manner possible. He will arrange the material at the local office and will be assisted in the work by the officers of the bureau.

Arrangements have been made whereby the bureau will have the use of the large lecture room of the exposition for a half hour each day, and arrangements will be made to have some expert in the different lines of business in the district talk upon his particular subject.

Cullen Must Take His Medicine.

The Commissioner of Labor has written J. M. Harris as follows:

"Your letter of the 5th received and contents fully noted. In regard to the Cullen bribery case I beg leave to state that I never knew very much about Mr. Cullen before he was connected with my department. He was recommended to me by the Probate judge of Midland county, Floyd L. Post, and Representative G. A. Curry of the same county. I was very sorry to see the trouble he got himself into, but as he has made his bed he will have to lie on it and I told the Chief Clerk to erase his name from the pay roll as soon as I received your telegram. He only worked for this department two and one-half months and as far as I am concerned the law will have to take its course in his case as I can do nothing, nor will I try to do anything to assist him in any way or manner. If he had any respect for me or the department which he represented he would not have attempted to do what he did, as far as I am concerned he will have to suffer the consequences."

Local Option Matters.

As was expected, the Michigan Christian Endeavor union cast its influence on the side of the campaign now in progress to rid Michigan of saloons. The alliance came in the form of a resolution adopted lately without a negative vote pledging the assistance of Michigan's 35,000 Endeavorers to the Anti-Saloon league, the organization which is back of the local option movement.

The action of the convention means that Endeavorers throughout the state will at once join in the fight for local option.

Over in Lenawee county, there will be an active battle. The supervisors have considered the petitions favorably and the question will go before the people next spring. The "dry" workers regard it as a foregone conclusion that the county will join the prohibition territory, but there are others who take the opposite view. In Antrim county, the question will also be voted upon this spring and according to statements from various towns within its confines, the sentiment is strongly in favor of the drys.

DID YOU notice it, that everybody goes to Joel Johnston at Boyne City for real estate bargains. I have good farms in all parts of Charlevoix county to sell cheap, also city property to trade for farms. 17-21

It occurred to him that if he left the body where it was until it decayed, he eventually discovered. It would afford the proper amount of foul play. But that if he dragged it back again to the road and hid it with the rest of the dead, against the wall, which he used as a stepping stone, it might pass for an accident.

Once more that tedious, senile or crawling fit up the face which in these few moments had undergone all the modifications of a lifetime, suddenly ceased of the tongue or outlook, disappeared, as he was interrupted, and he was exposed to view, lad seized it, dragged it back and placed it with the shadows under art in the position which his criminal intent contemplated.

As it lay there in the road nothing could have served more naturally than that it had fallen from the house, he felt sure. Nothing could have been more in the nature of a still more aggravated form of foul play than that it should be found in the place where it was and in the position which he intended it should be found in.

"Why I am happy to see you glad, sweet and the cheerful youth, whose heart by in his breast, and the sweet face, the countenance was writhing with a fakers of silence like he had never seen previously. They unbarked and known and unobserved, but as soon as the great corroded mouth, the most singular beauty and omnend appeal, such made the man's heart leap with eyes.

"Who is the splendid fellow?" soon as asked each other, as David passed through the crowd, and the people under their breaths then declared that his companion was the most beautiful man who had ever set foot on a Mississippi steamer.

David was in need of excitement. The thought of the coming day was mostly agitating his heart, the prediction of the doctor was ever ringing steadily sound on his forehead was never absent from his thoughts, even through all the conscious rumble of the stream, he could hear the voice of the stone upon the hard aisle. The effects of the shock had not over the horrible sensation that crushed him and he found himself in the morning from a nightmare. He succeeded in sleep for four or more words which would bring him and which would not bring him. Sometimes Had he been on shore he would have fled to the solitude of a forest but here he was continually impelled to that other solitude, the crowd, necessity of being gay with his beautiful bride and of entertaining every stem in his terror and memories loved his renewing to their utmost limit, and in spite of himself he was forced to keep up with him all day long. At the close she was completely exhausted, and retired early to her stateroom. Freed from her company and carrying other from thought, David made his way straight to the gambling saloon where the mainly games were in full swing.

In the months which they had spent together the quack had indoctrinated David into all the best-known secrets of this vice, and besides this, had furnished him with the use of a certain "hold out" of his own invention, with which he had achieved incredible results and which was now to the front in the game of life. Having withdrawn the players for a long time, David continued himself in the crowd and play this trick successfully, and took from the table over.

David felt his way along with a consciousness that accorded himself, and he was experienced with the delicate apparatus concealed in his sleeve and with a skillfulness through that he was unobtrusive. With a sweet smile on his face, he drew the weakes larger and larger, and his stimulated increased as rapidly as he gained his decrease of attention. He proceeded to the table, and he was the cynosure because handsome. The gamblers were fascinated, and his fame spread. As their horse failed them, Insists accompanied by a thousand dollars by upon the table, and he was soon surrounded by a skilled and desperate efforts.

The game had been interrupted and required the gamblers to such a degree that he was compelled to stop and change at their physical disposition to recuperate. The change of the game was not interrupted, and he was surrounded by a thousand dollars by upon the table. He seemed to have lost his skill and genius of fortune. Nothing could have prevented

JUST A HEADACHE.

Find Out Whether This Malady is Inevitable in Your Case.

You all know the woman who seems to think that she acquires merit by having a headache.

A headache is her constant companion, and, what's more, if she doesn't actually make herself ill she chefishes such the same feeling toward it that a martyr does toward her martyr's crown. Headache is not without its compensation of glory, you know, unless it endures to him a self imposed martyrdom or at least a martyrdom to an empty cause.

And there are such things the headache martyrs. The headache martyr is the one who has had headaches so often that she has a headache smile.

"It's just a headache," she says, with a wan smile, as if headaches with her were as much a part of the program as her meals.

If that is the case with this poor sufferer she is greatly to be pitied. There are numberless cases on record where people have had persistent headaches the cause of which has stubbornly baffled the physicians. Such a state of affairs is highly reprehensible. But how many women have taken the pains to assure themselves that their headaches are inevitable? This sort of mask established to the inevitable, it must be remembered, is only one of many ways in which the inevitable is assumed and to be avoided. And a lot of things are called inevitable that have simply never been questioned.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, writing in the Dellineator, says:

"Pain wherever found is nature's abrupt command 'Halt!'—her imperative order to stop. When you have taken that step you have taken the most important single step toward a cure.

"A headache always means something—not mark some of the things to says it may mean—overwork, indiscretion, eye strain, undereating. Some error," he adds, "is being committed, some bad physical habit is being dropped into."

So what's the use of pitying the woman with the headache problem if she hasn't at least done one of the simple things of reason and sense to find out just the trouble?

"There are a dozen different reasons why that will stop pain," says this author, "some opium and chloroform down to the real headache, but not one of them cures it in the sense of doing anything toward removing the cause."

WISE MAN UNDERSTOOD.

A wise man once went to the market place of a town, where a lot of people were buying and selling things, and he called out in a loud voice, "Hi, listen to me, all you people! I have been ordered by the king to collect all the corn in people's possession, and I now offer to him, because he wishes to reward them."

All that heard him said they were clever, and they all gathered round, when he called for a third voice.

"Hi, he, you people, listen to me! The king has just sent me word that he needs to reward only those who are fools, so all those who are not fools must go with me to the palace."

All the people of the town looked at one another and then one by one they joined him again because, so they said, they were fools.

The wise man shook his head smilingly and he sighed as he said: "Ah the world goes as the wind blows! Ha, ha, you people listen to me! You can go back to the market place as quick as you can, for you first said you were clever and then you said you were not, and you can't be both."

The wise man knew quite well that the people only wanted the reward.

How Sarah Bernhardt Rests.

In a letter to a friend Sarah Bernhardt tells how she spends the days of her vacation in Belle-Isle-en-Mer. She believes in the "rests" by effort herself. There is a daily schedule. At 7 in the morning she is awakened. After a cup of coffee she takes her gun and goes hunting for birds. At 9 she returns to the house, has a light breakfast and goes to the study to full for literary work. This occupies two hours. At 11 she leaves her letter, takes her bath and is ready for luncheon at 12:30. After luncheon comes the hour for the siesta, which she observes in a sacred institution in the routine of her household. One hand not necessarily alone, but the command is to keep still for two hours. At 2:30 she goes to her studio, where she reads manuscripts, looks over her parts or makes up her sculpture. The tennis hour is 5 o'clock. Dinner follows the game. After dinner there is music, and by 9 o'clock everyone is in bed. In calling her letter Mme. Bernhardt says: "This man my Mary in Belle Isle. They all are alike. They are charming and splendid. I have a divine sensation of being alive these days more than all the rest of the days of the year."

How to Fasten Hair Bows.

Little girls often have their hair "bobbed" and it is the fashion for nurses who must tie on the large bows are often perplexed as to how to do it. These large ribbons to the small wisp of hair. There is a very good arrangement which overcomes the difficulty and at the same time preserves the sentimental low ribbon necessitating relying it each day. Make the large bow with a strip of ribbon fifty ribbon of the same color underneath. Wind the narrow ribbon around the bow several times, tie in a tight bowknot and it will hold nicely.

How to Prevent Rusting.

It is better to use wooden pegs in bathrooms or kitchens, where damp towels or clothes are apt to be hung, otherwise the iron may rust from the iron. If iron hooks are already in place and it is not convenient to change them, give them a coat of white enamel or paint. It prevents danger of rusting and is sanitary as nothing is lodged in the paper. If the iron has already been rusted it may be removed by rubbing with lemon juice and salt.

Woman's World

A QUEEN'S PEN NAME.

How Carmen Sylva Found Her Quaint and Charming Pseudonym.

One of the loveliest couples on a throne are King Carol of Roumania and his wife, Elizabeth, a daughter of Prince Hermann zu Wied-Neuwied. Although the royal pair are not blessed with children and queen Elizabeth has never ceased to mourn the death of her only child—a daughter, who died quite young—the love the Roumanians have for their king and queen speaks volumes for their splendid characters.

Not only is Queen Elizabeth very popular among her people, but they are proud of her achievements as a poetess and a writer. She generally writes about Roumania and the Roumanians and has thus made the civilized world familiar with the noble characteristics of the population of her small kingdom. Living in this island of Slav raises, Roumania proudly claims Latin descent, and the people think and live differently to the populations of the other principalities by whom they are surrounded.

Queen Elizabeth begin to devote herself to writing soon after the death of her child, whom she worshiped, and keeps the wall of rooms where this daughter died undisturbed. It hurts her to go often to that castle, and she visits it regularly on the anniversary of the little dead's death daily.

It was during an illness at Sinaia, the favorite country residence of the king and queen, that the latter, considered to be lost in death's pallor, began to spend much of her time writing poems and stories. Many of her friends, who admire the great genius of Queen Elizabeth, begged her to have her writings published and thus give the world a chance to enjoy the charm and poetry of the children of her brain. The queen was not averse to a project, but she hesitated about that "pseudonym must be found to officially take the identity of the royal author." In discussing the question of nonsensity one day with the lady in attendance on her Queen Elizabeth said, "I am queen of a Latin country and belong now to a Latin people. Therefore I must have a Latin name, but it must sound as if it were a Slav. Do tell me what is the Latin for a wood?" The doctor replied, "A wood is called sylva." "That sounds lovely," said the queen. "Then what is the Latin for bird?" "Avis." "I don't like this," was the reply. "It does you sound well. 'Avis' is the Latin for sound, 'sing is called avis,'" was the answer. The queen seemed her delight at this and exclaimed: "I have found my pseudonym. In my native tongue I am called 'Sylva Wood' (Waldesang). In Latin 'Carmen-Sylvae,' but sylvae the genitive—we we sound like a kind of name, so my name must be carmen sylva and my pseudonym. Living in this island of Slav raises, Roumania proudly claims Latin descent, and the people think and live differently to the populations of the other principalities by whom they are surrounded.

DISFIGURING SCARS.

How to Prevent Them After Being Burned or Wounded.

Scars are mainly the result of careless treatment, and once formed there are no instructions to be given to the manicurist for their removal. A good surgeon will be able at least to restore a moderate amount of suppleness, even though he cannot wholly eradicate the scar. But when a wound has been received, if it is likely to leave a scar and one cannot strictly adhere to all given rules and advice, it should at once be put under the care of a skillful surgeon. If he is all that is desired, there will be scarcely a mark to tell of the accident unless the wound is unusually deep. Care must be taken not to draw the edges of the surrounding tissues out of shape. When the wound is dressed it positively must be limited that the raw and bleeding edges should be cleansed from all particles of dust and dirt or any foreign matter, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

The reason that oily and creamy remedies are used is that any application that is of a grease nature soothes the surrounding tender cuticle. Masks and bandages exclude the air and protect the wound from drying too quickly. If this should happen, it may be noticed that the skin becomes dry and shriveled, surely resulting in a scar, however small. If the skin is kept soft and elastic it stands to reason that these disfiguring contractions will to a certain extent lose something of their tension and in that way become less noticeable. Even after the wound has apparently healed and all bandages may be removed a soothing lotion should be used quite frequently, about three or four times daily, and painfully at night, especially if unfortunate one has received burns upon the face, arms or hands because upon the exposed parts of the body the scar would be more noticeable and unsightly.

A lotion which is very soothing and may be used for such purpose is composed of four ounces of filtered rainwater or rosewater and one dram of peroxide of hydrogen, one dram of tannin and two drams of glycerin. Agitate thoroughly and apply. One will be thoroughly rewarded for patience and persistence in using these applications, especially after a severe burn, as then the tissues will have been deprived of their fatty substance by the extreme heat and will need nourishment.

How to Travel Without Fatigue.

The secret of traveling without fatigue is to abandon thoughts of amusement and to conserve the energies. Do not let your nerves get the upper hand of you. Refrain as much as possible from conversation, for in the noise of travel talking soon becomes tiring. Avoid reading, for the use of the eyes while the train is in motion seems to induce sick headaches and nausea. All this, you will have an uninteresting and tiresome journey, but if your trip is a short one isn't it worth while to do all you can to reach your destination bright eyed and with an unbroken spirit, ready to enter gaily into anything that is expected of you?

How to Soothe Tired Feet.

People who do not stand at their work all day should wear very comfortable shoes with broad soles, well fitting arches, and proper heels. This is the only possible way of being comfortable under the circumstances. If it be well also to wear high shoes, buttoned or lced closely around the ankles, which are apt to swell from the long strain of standing. The feet should be given a hot bath every night as well as a morning bath, when they should be scrubbed with a stiff brush. A soothing bath for tired feet is warm water with a little baking soda or borax dissolved in it. A vigorous rub with alcohol is also good. Another soothing application is to rub the feet with a piece of lemon.

City Life is Lopsided.

"I sometimes think," says Mr. Blackburn, "that only men with brains have to live in the city, God never made a city for brains a garden. City life is largely the cause of the general nervous breakdown of the race. This is an age of nerves, and the city is responsible for it. My idea is to live but less than two hours and freedom of the country, and yet is within easy reach of the town, where men can go and transact business. In my business, that of making verse, I need the peace of the country, which is the power of the Sun. I like to come in contact with men, and so I go to town. I think the city of the future will not be crowded by city dwellers—we are coming to know too much for that. But, for the present, mankind is still lopsided."—Suburban Life.

The Sargasso Sea.

In the middle of the North Atlantic there is an area of comparatively still water about equal in continental Europe in extent and more or less covered with floating seaweed. It was known to the ancient navigators of Phoenicia and the early navigators and in the Sargasso sea of modern geographers.

The "seaweed was formerly supposed to have grown near the islands and Florida shores, and to have drifted to its present position. It is now, however, known to grow and propagate itself near the Bermudas, in one area found globular masses of weed containing fish eggs and known as fish weeds.

Recent investigations show that the floating weed of the Sargasso sea is the chosen breeding place of species of flying fish.—Field.

Wit Offers an Affliction.

Wit is an affliction unless used with discretion and good sense. The instinct of being invariably assuming self being you into great disfavor. The sharp-tongued woman who will have her fling at the expense of her relations may well pay dearly for her fun. It is as much an art to be quiet and commonplace as it is to be vivacious and entertaining, and the woman who can adjust her words to the occasion is the one who made herself remarkably most popular member of any community.

A Way Out.

A broker and banker, who was a member of the Russian relief committee that had to charge the transportation of food to Russia from Philadelphia a few years ago during a famine, likes to tell of an unusual experience he had while soliciting for the relief fund. In speaking of it he said: "I tell it because it shows the speed with which some people think I called on a man who was always a generous contributor to charity. He was out of sorts when I saw him and after I explained my mission he said: 'You fellows are always begging for something.' I was taken aback for a few seconds and when I recovered myself I asked, 'What would you do if the wolf were at your door?' He stared at me in a terrifying manner for a second and then blurted out, 'Why, you fool, I would eat the wolf.' I noticed when I was passing out the door he was still watching me sharply. I have never served on a relief committee since then."

WILLING TO LET HIM DRAW.

Pellegrini was an artist who an ex ceedingly liberal sociability, upon which he would draw freely for the edification of the Bohemian club, of which he was a member. There was the fellow member of the club, says J. C. Carr in a book called "Some Distinct Victorians," who was seen to sit at the table with little his pounds sketches, which he executed with a certain degree of facility.

The humorist display of artistic power offended Pellegrini who, possibly moved by a measure of jealousy, that any one should encroach upon his special province, lashed with sarcasm that a club was not the place for such exercises.

"I like the boy," he said to me one evening, and when he talk, I listen, but this pity he draw."

It was only a few evenings later that I entered the room and found the young friend who had been the subject of Pellegrini's criticism absorbing the entire concentration of the assembled clubs. Pellegrini was present, and I could see that he was growing restless under the artist's unceasing flow of conversation.

In a momentary pause he turned to me, and in an audible whisper delivered this scathing judgment:

"Dear I love mad, but tolerable. This better he draw."—Youth's Companion.

KIDNAPED CHILDREN FOUND.

Tomaso and Grace Viviano, children kidnaped in St. Louis last July and held for a $25,000 ransom, have been found wandering, abandoned, on the streets of Chicago. Suffering from exposure and with a wail developed at lack of nourishment the little girl was taken to the Passavant Hospital and placed in the care of physicians. The child cries constantly when her cousin is out of sight, and to keep her contented the boy also has been quartered at the hospital. Captain John Bohm of the Chicago avenue police station wired the parents of the kidnaped children, Peter and Jo Ann Viviano, in St. Louis.

Immediately after the discovery of the identity of the children detectives from central, Chicago avenue, and the Hudson avenue stations were detailed to search the neighborhood where they were found in an effort to explain the mystery. No trace of the custodians of the boy and girl or clues of custody have been obtained. The youngsters are doing to have fed well—but not comfortably clothed. Both children have been crazed into silence and it was with difficulty they were persuaded to talk.

It is desired that several strange features in connection with the case will be cleared up. It having been reported at St. Louis that the Vivianos received $1,000 of the $25,000 ransom demanded by the kidnapers.

GOSSIP GIVES MURDER CLUE.

One Told "Secret" at Party and Dr. George A. Fritch Was Arrested.

Women's gossip is responsible for a new development in the Hazelle Stillman murder mystery in Detroit. It was at a tea party in Michigan avenue that the story came. "I knew a woman who could tell a whole lot about Dr. Fritch and Hazelle," one of the guests whispered to her hostess. Dr. Fritch was arrested and confronted with the statement. Anthony Hoeber of 319 Michigan avenue.

Some one sent an anonymous letter to Sheriff Gaston and some one else sent one to Canada McDonald of the Pinkerton office, who was in Detroit to the $1,000 reward, gave Prosecutor Van Zile direct hints. All this was followed by conference of a special grand jury.

Mrs. Hoeber was questioned and gave information that led to the arrest of Dr. George A. Fritch and to the detention of his chauffeur, "Chris" Lynch. When the chauffeur got into the police station he was told about carrying three lots of something to the river near Lake and had thrown them in. It was near Ecorse that the dismembered parts of Miss Stillman's body were found.

UNSUCCESSFUL BANK RAID.

Lone Robber Dies by Own Hand When Run to Cover.

A lone robber, going about his business in a harmless looking buggy driven by a chauffeur who says he was ignorant of the fact it was being used as a stolen buggy in the crime, Wednesday, walked into the D. M. Erskine & Co. bank, at Highland Park, Ill., and held the employes into an iron cage at the point of a pistol and walked off with the cash drawer and got outside of the building with his plunder. Then, pursued by a posse, he ran into the building carefully laid plan failed him, he ended his life where he ran to cover.

Failure of an automobile to start compelled the robber to do on foot. Meantime the whole community, a fashionable one, had been aroused, and the posse followed in which policemen and street laborers footed citizens and in their motor carriages.

Hunted into an old building, the bandit answered shots of his pursuers by bullets from his own revolver, mortally wounded and feeling himself about to fall from loss of blood he he resolved upon a last dash for liberty.

BANK GUARANTY LAW INVALID

Nebraska Measure Fatally Hit by Supreme Bench Decision.

The Nebraska bank guaranty law, enacted by the last legislature, is invalid, the federal court decided Saturday. Judges Vandeventer and Sanborn of Lincoln handed down a decision affirming the decision of the lower court and making permanent the temporary injunction granted by the district court preventing the law from going into operation.

"I shall not say whether I will call an extra session for the enactment of another law or not until I have read the decision," said Gov. Shallenberger when told of the decision. "If the decision points out the weak points of the law, and they appear to be fatal I may call an extra session." Some weeks ago the Governor said emphatically if the decision was against the law he would reconvene the Legislature to enact a new law.

EXPRESS BOODY MAY BE $10,000.

Twice That Amount Overlooked by Robber at Seattle—No Clew.

A check obtained of the Northern Express Company have refused to make public the amount obtained by the man who robbed the office in the Seattle street passenger station in Seattle, Saturday afternoon. With the list of reported dead totaling fifteen, with scores injured, and with the property loss reaching $100,000 or more, the havoc and destruction of the storm which swept middle and west Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and portions of Arkansas and South Carolina late Thursday afternoon and the following night, grew hourly as reports were received from remote points.

The storm was probably the worst that has visited that section of the South, the path being intense in its destroying fury and wide-reaching in its sweep. Hundreds of counties were left in unsafe and rude. Towns were destroyed and plantations were greatly damaged. The storm broke over middle and west Tennessee and proceeded in a southeasterly direction across the State into Alabama and Georgia, assuming the proportions of a West Indian hurricane.

Fifteen persons were killed at Hasburg, Tenn., where the National cemetery of the battlefield of Shiloh is situated, by the tornado that passed Thursday night. The damage was very heavy. The Town Hale room was destroyed. The storm leveled Hasburg's storehouses and dwellings and uprooted trees. The hotel and a large store house at Pittsburg Landing, on the Tennessee River, a few miles from Hasburg, were destroyed. At least three persons were killed there and several injured, and several towns and villages demolished as the cyclonic storm swept through Western Tennessee. Crossing the southeast the wind tore frail, strong houses into bits and moved more substantial buildings off the foundations. Barns, sheds, poultry houses were razed, and numerous buildings were uprooted.

Dennark, Madison County, suffered greatly, and the school house practically demolished, the school being in session at the time. Jackson, Tenn., felt the storm's force in the form of a tornado, which left a path of ruin in its wake.

Reports from over the storm area show that Hickman County, Ky., was in the path of the storm. Eighteen of the same number of houses were torn off their foundations and wrecked, while smaller buildings were demolished. Dennark has a population of about 300 persons, and was one of the oldest towns in Tennessee. Of the known fatalities two occurred there. Albert Harris and his infant child were crushed during falling timbers of their house and crushed to death.

Near Mulberry, in Lincoln County, Thomas Hollis was killed and Dorothy Hollis and wife were injured. Near Wartrace a negro settlement was swept away. Thoroughbred, Cortland, Stanton, and Bristol reported similar reports, other minor damage. Along towns reported damage to Atlantic Railway from Atlanta there is evidence of the fury of the storm. Presentation to Judge Cutting in the Probate Court in Chicago of more than $2,000 worth of claims against the estate of the late James H. Eckels revealed the insolvency of the estate of the former Comptroller of the Currency, who, at the time of his death was president of the Commercial National Bank and one of the foremost financiers of the nation.

Claims totaling more than $750,000 had already been allowed against this estate, and the prospect of carrying this total over the $1,000,000 mark seemed completely to wipe on the approximate total of $500,000 worth of assets shown by the inventory in the estate. The original petition for the appointment of administrators placed the value of the estate at only $100,000. By far the largest portion of the claims which have been filed in the probate court is for money advanced to the dead banker as personal loans, and many of them rests in detail stock and bond transactions in which he was involved.

FLAG GOES TO PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, four times winner of the National league pennant, became the champion baseball team of the world Saturday afternoon, when its husky athletes vanquished Detroit by the score of 8 to 3 in the seventh and deciding contest of the series. This victory keeps the big flag in the current league for the third year, Detroit having three times in succession the biggest bid for that goes with baseball from the National League pennant winners. Manager Jennings and his band of pirates put up the game of their life, and Detroit had to do that to have a chance against the champions of the diamond. The wildness of the opposing pitchers, Newman and Mullin, combined with terrific drives, won the hard-earned victory.

CRANE IS OUSTED.

Notified by Secretary Knox that His Resignation Is Wanted.

Secretary of State Knox on Tuesday night sent a letter to Charles R. Crane, of Chicago, who was in Washington, notifying him that his resignation as minister of the United States to China would be accepted. Mr. Crane already had advised the Secretary that he was prepared to resign if the recent developments had made his further service in that position embarrassing to the department. Mr. Knox has advised President Taft of his action. Mr. Crane's resignation will be addressed, not to the State Department, but to the President, who appointed him.

While the deepest secrecy guarded the nature of the complaint against Mr. Crane, it was well understood that he was accused of revealing confidential information and talking slightingly too much about the intimate affairs of the State Department.

Appointed by President Taft after Storyanski, Phillips and other well-known men had declined the China post, Mr. Crane had resigned final instructions and engaged state rooms on a steamer sailing from San Francisco last Wednesday. Just before sailing he received a telegram from Secretary Knox in reply to Secretary Knox in Washington.

Mr. Crane arrived in Washington Sunday. During the trip east he stated that his public statements about Chinese affairs had been made with the sanction of President Taft. Immediately on arriving in Washington he was closeted with Secretary Knox an hour, and learned the secret of his recall, which he declined to allege. President Taft received a long telegram Monday from Secretary Knox, which is reported to contain further action in Mr. Crane's case was understood to depend.

Through unofficial sources the State Department allowed it to be known that the reports of indiscretions with Mr. Crane was an article of a Chicago newspaper of Sept. 27, stating that somewhat minute acquaintance with affairs supposed to be known only to officials in the State Department and especially by Mr. Crane, relative to the attitude of the United States government toward the two treaties recently concluded between China and Japan. That publication was highly objectionable to the Department of State in that it disclosed the possibility of protest on the part of the United States against the consummation of these treaties. Secretary Knox and his associates in the department held Minister Crane responsible for these disclosures.

COINERS WORK IN CAPITAL.

Turning Out Bogus Coin Almost in Shadow of Treasury.

Counterfeiters working almost in the shadow of the treasury, have invaded certain districts of Washington, D. C., with spurious coin. The counterfeits are so clever that the secret service gathered after the issue of 1903, but according to the secret service officials no arrests have yet resulted. Chief Operator George E. Frost, who has taken personal charge of the investigation and several operatives are scoiling the city in an effort to find the guilty parties, has been informed, there are not many of the counterfeits in circulation, but that there are enough to convince the secretary of the treasury that the counterfeiters have their headquarters in the national capital, and it is thought that they may be putting out their product elsewhere through confederates.

DIPLOMAT DIES IN LONDON.

W. I. Buchanan, Formerly Minister to Panama, Found Senseless.

W. I. Buchanan, formerly United States Minister to Panama, was discovered in an unconscious condition at midnight Saturday in Park Lane, London, and removed to St. George's Hospital, where he died shortly after ward. He was in evening dress, and it is believed his death was due to an apoplectic stroke. Mr. Buchanan arrived in London from Paris the previous Thursday, and called at the American Embassy. He then seemed in good health and spirits, and at the time showed any symptoms of apoplexy.

Mr. Buchanan is credited with being responsible for the continuation of the anti-Castro regime in Venezuela by his action in assist in floating bonds for Governor Gomez. Mr. Buchanan has appeared in such over important issue between the United States and Mexican and South American republics for the last fifteen years, he was the first United States Minister to Panama, Minister to Argentine, Brazil, special commissioner to Venezuela, minister to Chile and Argentine, and performed a half dozen other diplomatic missions. He was operated with Secretary Root in the latter's mission to the South American republics. Mr. Buchanan came into notice more than twenty years ago as the builder of the corn palace at the Ilinois City exposition.

When Castro's government was toppled Mr. Buchanan was selected to prop up the Gomez government. He succeeded and also in bringing the settlement and arbitration the five great claims of United States citizens against Venezuela. Mr. Buchanan was also prominently connected with the preliminary negotiations among the Southern republics which led to the peace conference of 1907 at Washington.

Nicaragua Has Revolution.

A revolution broke out here when President J. Estrada has been elected the provisional president of Nicaragua. The revolutionists are evidently long been preparing for the blow that was struck Thursday night at Bluefields. They claim that they have the majority of voters with them in their fight.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

Business has been setting for $8.51 per hundred weight at Pittsburg, Kan., highest price ever have been brought in that district. Ten years ago it was a nuisance of about four cents, the shortage lodging in Smith's left arm and abdomen. Two bullets remained in the left the other lastnd got at Eldon, when Mrs. Peet shouted, "Don't shoot him: he isn't a burglar." He rode a mile and a second ultrin. Eldon took the wounded man to the hospital as quickly as possible, and although he is in a serious condition from loss of blood, it is believed he will recover.

DOCTOR AGAIN HELD AS SLAYER.

Police Believe the Mayhelle Millman Death Mystery Is Cleared.

With the removal the other night of Dr. George A. Fritch on a charge of murdering his wife, Hazelle Millman of Ann Arbor, the police believe the mystery of Miss Millman's death is cleared. The police found Joseph W. Leach, an automobile driver, who after a long examination said he had taken the bags containing the dismembered body of Miss Millman to the creek. Miss Millman told her mother on Aug. 11 that she was going to Detroit to visit her aunt, wholesale, Miss Martha Henning. On Sept. 5 a weighted bag containing the arms of a young woman was found in Ecorse creek. The next day the head was found in Detroit. The body was identified by Miss Henning as that of her chum. On Sept. 8 the legs were found and buried at Ann Arbor, another bag containing the rest of the body was found in the Detroit river. The discovery of a young woman was found in Ecorse creek. Fritch was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Coroner Dr. Jakie Rader, the world's champion, broke the five-mile motor cycle record in the Chicago motor cycle race. Rader's time was being discussed by Wisconsin-Illinois manufacturers for use in their factories during the winter.

CHICAGO SLAIN IN OMAHA.

Henry R. Frankland, a cook whose home was at 1148 Wilcot avenue, Chicago, was found under a viaduct in Omaha with his throat cut and his pockets turned inside out. He died a few minutes later. William W. Tull, a Dullesan porter who found him and who was known to have been in his company during the day, is under arrest. A search is being made for another negro who was with him.

CHICAGO.

Dun's Review, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says:

Trading dealers exhibit some increase above the normal, but in a high daily average of payments through the banks is in evidence and the industrial conditions tently to unsettled progress in production and distribution.

New demands form a notably large aggregate for iron and steel, with prices for foundry supplies firmer for distant deliveries. Rolling mills have ample contracts for steady day and night work until mid-spring. Contracts for structural materials and involving rather large tonnages are under negotiation.

Stormy weather and the Columbus holiday interrupted movements of commodities, factory outputs, grain and flour, and the markets for lumber are were quieter than in previous weeks, but the stock market rallied moderately and there were larger shipments of corn and provisions. The aggregate clearings of bank exchanges showed more rush for vacets to move mine and forest products, and the freight rate for grain to Buffalo rose to the highest this season.

"Earnings of the Chicago steam roads sustain favorable comparison with those of other lines, and have been sufficient to allow the installation of new rolling stock and planning for track extensions and other important facilities to meet expanding demands of transportation.

"Lower but demand for limited wider activity in general merchandise here and throughout the Northwest, with some seasonable reduction in the leading retail lines, especially in ready-to-wear clothing, waists, housewares and food products.

"Bank clearings for week ending, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 9.5 per cent, and compare with those of 1907 by 1.7 per cent.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number 24, against last week, 21 in 1908 and 18 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 19, against 7 last week, 2 in 1908 and 5 in 1907."

NEW YORK.

Improvement in the sale of the day in trade, commerce and industry. Freezing temperature, light snows, or lasting frosts, exercised a stimulating movement, have helped retail trade and collections at the West and North, while lower temperatures and skill prices and free marketing of crops have materially distributed the south. Jobbing trade has been colorless, but orders are forthcoming to fill broken stocks, and the distributive trade side accordingly presents a favorable appearance.

Trade at first hands feels the stimulus of a more confident buying, for varying, though the unsettlement in the stock market, the volume of industrial and talk of enrollment, still represents a check to speculative trade, the tendency of cotton goods is undoubtedly upward, and buying appears sufficiently confident at the lower prices asked. From Industrial lines the same feeling is in evidence and of longer hours now comes, payrolls are expanding, and available skilled labor is reported closely employed, with less idleness noted than for two years past.

Business failures in United States for the week ending with Oct. 11, were 222, against 196 last week, 244 in the same week of 1908; 207 in 1907; 170 in 1906, and 175 in 1905.—Bradstreet's.

As the result of falling into a tub of hot water which had been left on the floor, Antoinette Carlo, 3-year-old daughter of John Carlo, is dead at Jeffersville. The child was horribly scalded. Her 7-year-old brother in the Carlo iron range has caused the death of Michael Gribbolo of Ironwood. The man was crushed to death by a fall of ore at the Newport mine. He was 40 years old and leaves a wife and five children.

QUITS TAX COMMISSION.

Secretary Wells L. Evans Resigns to Accept Private Clerkship.

Wells L. Evans, who has been connected with the State Tax Commission as secretary and clerk for the past three years, has resigned his position and will become the confidential clerk of H. Dale, the wholesale manufacturer of Lansing. Mr. Brown will assay his connection with the Tax Commission the first of the month.

UNCLE SAM WARS ON THE RAT.

"Worst Mammal Pest" Blamed for the Loss of Millions.

Rat clubs and other societies for systematic warfare on destructive rodents may be into popular favor among housekeepers, now that the government has officially sanctioned this method of extermination of the worst mammal pest in the United States. The rat has been recognized by the government as a problem. Its activity in disseminating infectious diseases has long loosed up as a danger signal to the health authorities, and losses from its depredations run into many million dollars a year, according to an official statement, just issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Dr. David E. Lantz of the Bureau of biological survey has taken vigorous hold of the question, and that he proceeds to throw a bomb into the camp of believers in the rat as a pet destroyer. "However valuable cats may be as mousers, few of them learn to catch rats. The house cat is too well fed and consequently too lazy to undertake the capture of an animal as formidable as the brown rat."

The department in a bulletin emphasizes the importance of rat clubs and suggests that interest in organized rat hunts may be stimulated by offering prizes or rewards in various communities, to the individual hauling forth the greatest number of dead rats and bring them to the trustee.

Pamphlets dealing with the rodent problem are issued free of charge by the department, and suggestive of ways in which the rat may be eventually rooted from its haunts have been scattered broadcast among the farms and villages all over the United States, and other inquiries are to issue the campaign in this direction one of thoroughness.

—The editor leaves to day for alanskee to attend the annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Press Club.

—The Lake house on the north side, now owned by Mrs. Williams of Harbor Springs, is being retouch and very much improved.

—See "Oscar and Adolf" on Foot Ball next Monday. Henry Partridge and Sam Levinson will take these roles between acts of "The Gilded Youth."

—Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Palmer, of Valentine, Neb., who were for the time in New York, were called here Monday last week by the serious illness of Mrs. Palmer's mother, Mrs. Chaloupka.

—E. C. Waller, of Chicago, a prominent member of the Chicago Club, of this city, and who owns a farm just north of town, has recently received three seven hood of thoroughbred cattle from the farm of the Northern Michigan Asylum, at Traverse City.

—Two important state appointments came to Northern Michigan last week, when Gov. Warner named Ira Adams, of Bellaire, as chairman of the Mackinac Island Park Commission, and F. A. Dwyer, of East Jordan, as superintendent of the Park. Both are excellent and deserved appointments.

—Sunday was the most beautiful autumn day in the calendar thus far this year. With a mild temperature, a clear sky, the remaining maple leaves in "the red and yellow," and the green lawns peeping through the dead leaves, it was a day fit for the gods. The carriages, automobiles and baby carriages were all out, and good music prevailed.

—The merry grass widows club was entertained saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Rose Taylor by a most elegant supper, a biscuit sating contest being the feature of the meal. We dare not tell who got the prize. After supper Mrs. Taylor invited the ladies to a theatre party and all report a first class time. After enjoying all the pleasure of the evening one guest left for Petoskey to meet her husband.

—The schooner, Little George, was in port lately, after apples and potatoes. The line is interested in old times because of the fact that the Little George is probably the oldest sail craft on Lake Michigan. She was built in 1870 in Sheboygan, and the writer remembers her as one of the small "Lake Huron" fleet in 1871, the summer he was six years old, the schooner as sailed the lakes.

—Local sportsmen are out after partridge these days, and some very good bags have been brought in. Birds are plentiful about everywhere, several having come to their death by venturing too far into the city limits and colliding with houses. There are millions of beech nuts, and the birds are rolling fat. Just watch this office for a vacant editorial chair some fine morning, and then watch Park avenue for a triumphant return from the woods.

—Fred H. Thomas has completed his fine residence on Clinton street.

—Hay Kant, who has been working with the harbor engineers at Empire, is home on a visit.

—"The Gilded Youth" with Amelia Mayo as Sammy Gilder will be the most successful farce comedy played here by amateurs.

—Married, at Cadillac, at the home of the bride's mother, Oct. 27th, Mr. Guy Green to Miss Zillee Collyer, of Cadillac. Mr. and Mrs. Green will reside in Chicago.

—Work on the Carnegie Library is progressing rapidly. The plasterers have almost completed their work, and interior wood work will soon be begun. The roof is ready for the slate.

—Regular monthly meeting of Baxter Post No. 119, G. A. R., will be held Saturday p. m. at two o'clock. Veterans who live in Old Fellows Hall, Comrades are earnestly invited to answer to roll call.

—Special instruction of Charlevoix Chapter R. A. M., on Monday evening, November 8th. Work on P. M. and M. E. M. degrees. Companions are cordially invited to be present. By order of the E. H. P.

—While the lighthouse tender Sumac was unshouldered here last week, repairs were cleaned. While an oiler was inside the empty boiler, but yet hot, water was turned on. The government badly scalded the man, and for a time it was thought to be a serious matter, but the Sumac left here Sunday night with the man doing well.

—A party of lady friends of Mrs. Clara Dennis surprised her at the residence of Mr. Chas. Gallinger, Wednesday p. m. by bringing their supper and staying a while. When the supper was spread, she was presented a beautiful souvenir spoon of Michigan to remind her of the many loving friends she leaves in Charlevoix who wish for her happiness and prosperity in her new home in Texas.

—Another civil war veteran has passed to the beyond. E. B. Hodge died at his home in this city Saturday last after a long illness. Mr. Hodge was a member of Baxter Post since July 14th, 1881. He enlisted Nov. 2, 1863 in Co. D, 14th N. Y. Heavy Artillery and was discharged June 7, 1865. He was born in Morristown, N. Y., May 11th, 1845. Deceased was a brother of Mrs. G. R. Bellinger, Mrs. E. C. Newberry and Mrs. L. J. Newberry, all of this city. The funeral occurred Tuesday afternoon under the auspices of Baxter Post.

—The Chebeygan Tribune in commenting on the recent defeat by the board of supervisors of the submission of the local option question, says several supervisors who are responsible for the result and who represent townships where a sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of submission. Asserting that a very large majority of the people of Cheboygan county favor prohibition, the Tribune adds: "However, the fight is not over. Next April the matter will be up again. There will be another board of supervisors. It will doubtless include some new members, men elected to replace those who failed in their duty at this session. The average voter understands that he has a right to be represented by his supervisor and that the majority rules. Justice and fairness are fundamental principles of American citizenship. Right or wrong the majority should control in public matters. Injustice and unfairness will eventually defeat their own ends."

—The Two Step Club will have its second party at Baker's Inn, Friday evening of this week.

—In conformity to an ancient custom the SENTINEL will take about fifteen bushels of potatoes on subscription account. Do not all come at once.

—The local fish hatchery is being put in shape for the annual hatching under the charge of Mr. Chas. Cole, of Northville. Mr. A. T. Stewart is at St. James for the spawning season.

—Prosecutor Nicholson was in the city Monday on a trial before Justice Collins. A beer field Pobock appropriated two ducks from another beer field Pobock, and the docks cost him $25, including costs.

—A Traverse county prophet says that on August 20, 1910, a tremendous earthquake will destroy Traverse City, turn the peninsula upside down, merging the two areas into one and making the town Walton will be wiped off the map and Leland and Northport be under water. Thank heaven, Charlevoix is safe, but Norwood is uncomfortably close to the border-land of the Pillaites.

—The prospects are not showing any strength this week and the indications are that there will be little change for some time to come, as the demand for Michigan stock is very light in all the markets, and especially so at Chicago, where Wisconsin stock is selling at least 15 cents per bushel more than the Michigan tubers. This is due from the fact that the potatoes from this section of the state are too green to sell to any advantage on that market. The large size is also against them, as the consumer prefers to buy the medium sized kinds for table use. The price at all the buying points in northern Michigan are now running from 25 to 35 cents per bushel.

—The street down on the government pier has been given a fine coat of varnished with a fine row of residences for the crew to be named. Fred H. Thomas has completed his fine residence on Clinton street.

In the controversy between Capt. Billy Lincoln and Capt. Pete Campbell, of the Shiffest Shipmasters' Society, the Society acted, at its last meeting, on the report of the grievance committee which was the submission of a "true bill" against Capt. Pete, on the charges as recently given in these columns.

Capt. Billy presented in evidence a letter recently received from Mr. Geo. D. Webb, of Chicago, and a summer resident of Charlevoix, in which Mr. Webb declared himself as a "character witness" in defense of the Manitou skipper.

Capt. Pete objected to the introduction of this testimony on the grounds that it was incompetent and irrelevant. The acting president, Capt. Wilbur, ruled it out, remarking that "it was a horse, jaspiece" when it came to character, and "neither one of them had much to brag of."

The Society finally voted Capt. Pete guilty as charged, in that "he did, on the 27th day of August, 1909, neglect or refuse to respond to a master's salute from the steamship Manitou, of which the complainant was master, in direct violation of the bye-laws of this Society and in violation of the custom of courtesy between masters." The acting president imposed a fine of seventy-five cents costs of suit, this latter involving a package of "All Leaf" tobacco and five nickle cigars.

Up to this writing the fine has not been paid, and the amount will be added to the $2.42 funds of the Society that for two years Capt. Pete has held.

Capt. Billy was inclined to be merciful, and asked that the fine be remitted, but a large majority of those present were obdurate.

When Capt. Wilbur surrendered the chair to Capt. Finucan he brought out the old chestnut about rent, fuel and lights, but he was howled down. He then pointedly intimated that the Society could hereafter go elsewhere for accommodations, and that he would make another row that was only ended by Capt. George Weaver moving an adjournment, and that the next meeting be held in the cabin of the Beaver.

Capt. Billy snubbed the latter part of the motion by absolutely refusing to be present. The remarks of Capt. Pete are not proper material for publication.

Probably the next meeting will be held in the Sanctum, unless, or when the matter was mentioned Capt. Pete avowed he would not attend a meeting at that place and as Mr. Dooley would say, "there ye are."

County Normal Notes.

Mrs. O. Nordrum visited the normal room Thursday, October 28.

A postal card was received from Bessie Crasser, class of '08, who is teaching six miles from Hayes City.

All of the County Normal teachers of the state, with the exception of one, were present at the meeting held in Saginaw.

The work in the normal and training rooms continued without interruption during the absence of Miss Hines and Miss Reed.

Misses Alma Francis, Lola and Maud Cross attended the State Teachers' Meeting. Alma Francis, class of '08, is teaching in a kindergarten in Saginaw. Lola Cross, class of '08, is now attending school at Mt. Pleasant. Maud Cross, class of '09, is teaching at East Jordan.

Miss Hines and Miss Reed returned home from Saginaw October 30, where they attended the State Teachers' Institute Association and County Normal Teachers' Meeting. While away Miss Hines visited the West Saginaw County Normal, and Miss Reed visited one of the best grades, where she observed the work of forty children.

DID YOU notice it, that everybody goes to Joel Johnston at Boyne City for real value bargains. I have good farms in all parts of Charlevoix county to sell cheap, also city property to trade for farms. 17-21

Do not entertain the delusion that John A. Lynn, the original "Rustic Man," is dead or sleeping. He is very much alive and as chock full of rustic originality as ever.

A last week he was summoned to St. Louis and New York by wire. The telegram came from Aug. A. Busch. John returned from his trip Wednesday night, having incidentally seen all the sights of the chief city, through the "open-sesame" of a letter Mr. Busch gave him to the Anheuser-Busch manager in New York.

Mr. Busch is to give Mr. Lynn carte blanche in the erection of a big rustic cascade on Broadway, 42nd street and Broadway, and he returns immediately to study the ground and gather information upon which to make estimates and plans.

He was also at St. Louis and practically secured the contract for building a rustic cascade for the Anheuser-Busch people.

An important feature of these deals is the fact that all the material for both these places will be gathered here—a work that will create quite a lively industry. Preliminary steps have already been taken to this end, and two carloads have now being chipped.

The extent of the jobs may be judged by the fact that they will require fully a dozen car loads of material—a good sized freight train.

Beaver Island's Opportunity.

Under the quickening influence of the Western Michigan Development Bureau in, crest in agriculture is being stimulated all along the line. Especially is this true of fruit culture.

Charlevoix county is in the Michigan fruit belt, "trongly entrenched, and abundantly able to prove its right to be there.

The apple crop of Charlevoix county this fall has clinched the claim with copper rivets. The forthcoming fruit exhibit at Chicago will proclaim to the world that the adaptability of Charlevoix county to fruit culture can never again be questioned.

It is therefore important that idle acres everywhere within the borders of the county should be made to contribute to the recuperation of Beaver Island is a part of Charlevoix county, and most of its land is as productive as any in Northern Michigan. While there are few orchards on the island, fruit culture there has been neglected.

The Island and the Traverse Bay peninsula possess the same climatic conditions, and the latter have for many years been famous for pomology. Owners of land on the Manitou and even the Fox Islands are to plant great orchards there. Why should not Beaver Island wake up to the importance of the opportunity?

There is wealth for the Islanders in apples. It is very regretable that this matter has so long been neglected there, but better late than never.

We hope to see many thousands of apple trees planted on the Island within the next year. There should be no hesitation. The profit of an apple orchard is certain.

How to Make Kitchen Aprons.

The women who does her own work there is great satisfaction in a neat, well made apron, and such a necessary article may be easily and quickly made at home and prove much more attractive than the ready made ones. An admirable apron can be cut with a pair front that extends to the hand and fitted side gores that are finished with a band of bertram around the waist. A bias band around the neck is slightly shaped and fastened to the pattern front, but may be slipped on over the head without unbuttoning. There is a shaped pocket at the side, and if one is desired on the front at the front it may be added. Aprons may be prepared in solid colors or checked ginghams are usually chosen for work aprons, but for more elaborate ones dotted or checked muslins are very stylish and usually well. The latter may be bordered up with lace edged ruffles and with insertion through which colored ribbons are run, pockets set on with fine feather-stitching or embroidery, and instead of the plain belt about the waist ribbon strings may be substituted.

For the Babies.

Although this advice is more directly for ladies visiting for the first year of life, the sense of it applies quite as well to other children.

Don't overfeed them and don't let them overfeed themselves.

Don't give them rich foods—meats, gravies, pastries, cake, etc.—nor a variety. The simpler and plainer the better—plenty of milk, whole wheat bread, oatmeal, baked potatoes, baked apples and fresh fruits of all kinds, except bananas, in season but no more than fruit is ripe and fresh.

Keep up the daily bath until it becomes a third meal.

Keep them out in the open air as much as possible. Let them be outdoors whenever you can do so, not only in places where the water is pure.

Keep them cool.

Don't overdress them. The lighter and simpler the clothing the better.

How to Remove Rust From Steel.

To remove rust from steel, dissolve a quarter of an ounce of camphor gum in nearly half a pound of lard. When the solution is cooled it will be found take off the scum, and when it begins to thicken add enough black lead to give a deep iron color. Rub the ornaments with the mixture and leave them for a day and night; then polish them with a soft cloth and a brush that will get into the crevices and aperture. Another remedy for cast steel that is not easily rusted is fine emery powder mixed with vaseline or petrolin. This is rubbed thoroughly into the steel work, and the gritty powder is supplied with oil and rubbed off with a soft cloth. To prevent cut steel ornaments from rusting it is a good idea to run them occasionally with vaseline.

Nagging a Poor Policy.

Here is another lesson for the nagging woman. Nagging never accomplished anything either in domestic life or in politics.

Sarah Grand, the author of the "Heavenly Twins," claims that nagging is the curse of the suffragette cause. She herself is a suffragist, but not a suffragette—see the distinction—and she thinks that the suffragettes have made a fatal mistake where they might have made a brilliant stroke. When they first broke out and startled the world by their militant tactics they did a brilliant thing and made a brilliant political play. The thing failed simply when they began to nag. Dr. as she expresses it, they exhibited themselves in the most offensive of human relationships, that of nagging.

Nobody ever had any sympathy or admiration for a nagging man or woman. The object of a nag is worse than futile; it is disastrous. It has alienated friends and converted the indifferent into enemies.

That is the way the bright woman has ruined herself by the nagging habit, and, whether the practice is applied to politics or neighborly business, her estimation of it is wholly true.

Petoskey News: Some of the papers published along with intelligence to the famous Island Route have been quoting Commodore Hamill as their land authority for saying that such is not the case, but that the route has made money, and that the number of trips run, more passengers have been carried on each trip than in any previous season, but owing to the low stage of water obtaining all season, only about two thirds the usual number of trips were made, and neither the class of people or local option cut any figure in the matter, only unavoidable providence. However, as the Commodore is planning a new, light draft boat to displace the Tophsher nasty uncc trips will be made next season.

Cheboygan special: The board of supervisors has taken a hand in the controversy between the state game warden's department and J. B. Hill born, local independent fisherman, whose tug, Oggie, was seized by the state game warden for fishing without a license. The board adopted a resolution reciting that the breach of the law by Mr. Hilleen was a purely technical one that "the seizure of his boat by the game and fish warden's department was an unwarranted assumption of authority and a gross and malicious abuse of power, pointing to the conclusion that the department is being conducted in the interest of the left trust, and engaged in an earnest effort to harass its competitors off the lakes," and demanding of Governor Warner that he "cause a rigid examination to be made of the action. In case the governor fails promptly to comply with this demand, the circuit judge of this circuit be requested to call a grand jury to investigate the matter."

The Woman's Relief Corps.

The following is the official report of Baxter W. R. C. for four month beginning July 9th and ending October 14th.

The July meeting was so poorly attended on account of the busy season that it was decided to put over our next meeting to Sept. 9th on which date we had a better turn out. On Oct. 14th there was a good attendance and a very interesting session, programs etc. it was voted to invite Mrs. Henstreet, Department inspector of Michigan, to visit us Nov. 14th, our next regular meeting. It was also voted to make Mrs. Kanagy of Atwood a life member of our order.

Oct. 9th the first tea tea for flower fund was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Geer and well attended. After a pleasant afternoon and a sumptuous supper we bade our host and hostess good bye wishing them a pleasant winter and a safe return in the spring to their friends in Charlevoix the Beautiful.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Jenkins, of Harbor Springs and Mrs. Black, of St. James.

Grand Traverse county took a step in advance Thursday when the board of supervisors passed the resolution calling for the employment of prisoners in the county jail upon the roads or some other public work. This move was made possible by a law passed by the last legislature which made it optional with the counties of the state to pass such a resolution if they saw fit to do so.

Petoskey News: A Voltier, representing the West Michigan Sugar Beet company of Charlevoix, reported that William Preston, one of our most enterprising farmers, has five acres of sugar beets that will turn out 12 tons to the acre this fail. As the average cost per acre for raising this crop is about $17.00 and the selling price $20.00, the net profit should interest more of our farmers than it does.

Central Lake Torch: The second annual meeting of the Antrim County Development Association was held in Bellaire last Monday. At this meeting the organization of the association was completed, officers elected and a good workable set of by-laws adopted. Officers elected were as follows: President, E. A. Fox, Central Lake; vice president, F. H. Williams, Elk Rapids; secretary, E. H. Harris, Ellsworth; treasurer, William Bishop, Bellaire. These officers, together with the supervisor from each township constitute the board of control. As its name indicates, the purpose of the association is the development of the resources of Antrim county.

A resident of the northern part of western Michigan, recently put himself on record as follows: "We have many fine buildings, well improved farms, large orchards and the convenience of telephone and rural delivery. We raise successfully oats, wheat, rye, barley, corn and potatoes, in fact all grains and root crops that may be grown in our climate. We have good roads, churches and schoolhouses. We raise immense crops of potatoes in this country and they will average a yield of from 100 to 250 per acre. Hay does exceptionally well on these lands as well as in this part of state. There are still many thousands of acres awaiting the coming of new settlers. We have a beauty welcome for all home-seekers and will lend a willing hand to help those who come to get themselves established."

Mancelona Herald: The county board of supervisors in session at Bellaire last week Wednesday received the petitions asking for the submission of the local option question to the voters of this (Antrim) county. The vote on the submission of the same was unanimous, every supervisor voting in favor of it. The election was ordered to take place at the time of the regular spring election next year. It is also said that every supervisor in the county is in favor of local option and will work and vote for it. This speaks well for the intelligence and the spirit of interest in the moral welfare of the people on the part of the county board of legislators, and we believe the voters of the county will ratify and sustain them and give a good majority in favor of this great moral question at next spring's election.

Cadillac News: At Saturday's session of the board of supervisors the question of the petition for resubmission of the local option question was taken up. Clerk Flynn read the report of the special committee consisting of Supervisors Meheany, Ogden and Averill, which stated that they had compared the signatures of the petitions from over the county and while there were many therein that under the strict wording of the law were not legal signatures, yet with all of those eliminated there were still more than enough to make the petition within the law. When the vote was taken there were no votes in the negative and the people of Wexford county have now entered upon a second local option campaign that will not be completed until election day next spring.

PLAN WIRELESS FEATS

Message to Be Sent 3,000 Miles Between Station in East and Warships.

HIGH TOWER ON BRANT ROCK

The navy is soon to conduct experiments in long-distance wireless telegraphy. Impressed with the importance of a system which will in cases of necessity transmit messages from some place on the Atlantic seaboard for a distance of 3,000 miles, the naval authorities are now making a near zero. The desirability of such long-distance communication, the officials say, is obvious, for in times of war it would prove invaluable to the government.

By its means the Navy Department will be able to control and direct readily from shore the movements of its fleet. This, together with the proposition to install wireless apparatus on ships so that they may be able to communicate with each other at a distance of 1,000 miles, will put the government in the position where directions given to one vessel quickly may be transmitted to another.

The experiment in question covering 3,000 miles are to take place at Brant Rock, Mass., beginning probably late in December. Instruments constructed for this purpose have been installed in a tower on the 300 foot high. Two scout cruisers, the Salem and the Birmingham, are to be utilized as receiving stations. Besides to these vessels now under way will be completed one, the Chester, which will leave the United States for a trip which will take them within a radius of 3,000 miles of Brant Rock, the present programme contemplating a cruise from the Seattle round Cape Horn and the west African coast and also in the American tropics. Meanwhile necessary will be sent to each of these vessels, both of which have been equipped with telephone-power receiving apparatus, capable, it is asserted, of recording the long-distance communications. At the same time the vessels will exchange messages for the purpose of testing the apparatus for communication 1,000 miles at sea.

TAKE FIFTY IN PLOT.

Assassins Shoot Italian Second Time—Bosses Police.

Fifty arrests were made by the Chicago police in efforts to clear up the murder of Salvatore Pinelli, who was followed to Chicago from a hospital in Streator, Ill., where he had been three months after being shot by agents of the Black Hand, and was shot a second time in Chicago. There is positive evidence that the Black Hand, or a band of Italian extortioners, have decided to destroy the Pinelli family, brothers, who were accused of the crime by Pinelli. Pinelli was wounded the second time with a shotgun. Physicians at the hospital, to which he was taken, held out little hope for his recovery. His body was full of shot. The shooting of Pinelli was the sixth murder traced to the Black Hand society within a year. Pinelli told the police that he came to this country three years ago from Italy and went to Streator, where he was a section hand for the Santa Fe Railroad. The sufferer had not been in the town long, when the Little Italy ers, who were in Chicago, began to write him threatening letters demanding money. "We will tell the police that you are a member of the Black Hand," one anonymous letter read. It was written in one letter, the threatener, of the Wheeler & Wilson Manufacturing Company, owes his life to the sacrifice of Dr. Philip W. Hill, who gave of his own arterios and allowed the transfusion of a pint of his blood to Mr. Wheeler, when while on his latter was in a serious condition from an affection of the stomach.

MAJOR GENERAL OTIS IS DEAD

Major General Elwell Stephen Otis, U. S. A., retired, died at his home in Rochester, N. Y., at 1:20 Thursday morning. His ailment was diagnosed as senile debility combined with a severe cold. General Otis was born in Hallowell, Me., in 1838 and graduated from West Point in 1861. Such is the decision of the Supreme Court, handed down by Justice Brewer last month to recover the office from John Sullivan after the latter had assumed it on a subsequent appointment by Governor Harrison. The demurrer of Morris to the answer of the defendant, Sullivan, is overruled and the petition of Morris is dismissed.

J. M. BARRIE WANTS WIFE BACK

Writer Offering All Sorts of Inducements for Her to Return.

J. M. Barrie, the English novelist, who should have his wife within a week, now wants her back again. He does not want to marry Dorothy Chase, the beautiful young word, he has declared. He loves his wife; he is willing—despite proofs at court of her guilt—to have her come back to him. And he is offering her all sorts of inducements to return.

All England is literally astounded by the sudden change in the affairs of its most popular playwright and novelist. For days it has become known Barrie has been writing letters to his wife into an was Mary Ansell, as actress), humbling himself, begging her pardon for having instituted the suit, forgiving her misdemeanor and delicately begging her to wed him again. He has offered to settle $250,000 on her in a ring sum if she will again be his wife. Mrs. Barrie thinks he has been altogether caressonable.

HUNT TWO IN TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Kansas City Police Fail to Attempt to Trail Slayers with Dogs.

The finding of another bullet hole in the body of Alonzo van Royen, one of the victims of the triple murder near Kansas City, Kan., convinced the police that at least two men committed the crime. Mrs. van Royen was shot three times and her sister, Miss Rose McAdams, six times. Van Royen was shot four times. The firing of thirteen shots, the police say, makes it seem that one man did not kill the three victims. Immediately after the story, the police extended the hunt to include two or even three men. Bloodhounds were taken to the small store half mile from the scene of the murder. The police officers were detailed and as a result of which, suspicion records were completely destroyed. The fire had been smoldering for probably an hour when it was discovered. The victims had been communicated to other parts of the building. The telegraph wires of several roads were tied up for some time.

TITLE TO OHIO OFFICE SETTLED.

T. C. Harris Appointment to State Commissioner Illegal.

Appointment of J. C. Morris as member of the Ohio Railroad Commission by Governor Andrew L. Harris, was illegal, the court of appeals in a decision rendered last Tuesday, the ground that the office Harris attempted to fill was not vacant, Judson Harmon, had assumed his duties and qualified. Such is the decision of the Supreme Court, handed down by Justice Brewer last month to recover the office from John Sullivan after the latter had assumed it on a subsequent appointment by Governor Harmon. The demurrer of Morris to the answer of the defendant, Sullivan, is overruled and the petition of Morris is dismissed.

MANY WOMEN SLAIN!

Disclosures Expected as Result of Arrest in Long Island Case.

Admissions made under severe cross-examination by Otto Mueller, an Austria, L. I., plasterer, arrested on the ground that he may know something of the strange circumstances of the death of Anna Latter, the young German woman whose skeleton was found at Islip, L. I., are expected by the police to bring to light a tale of wholesale marriage and murder seldom equaled in criminal records.

Mueller is an alleged bigamist under the name of Frederick Gebhardt on the formal charge of bigamy, but the police expect to lodge a more serious charge against him. Mrs. Gebhardt informed the authorities that she has lived in terror of her husband for many years and that on the occasion he was overheard while intoxicated to say that she was his eighth wife and that those who preceded her were in their graves.

Another point on which clues is laid by the police is the finding of four notes scribbled by Mueller, the author thereof admitted the handwriting to be disguised. All are dated Oct. 23, the day of the man's arrest, and contain instructions for the disposal of his property. One of the notes is addressed to the Brooklyn Eagle City Editor and follows: "Please pay my account to my wife Anna Gebhardt. I am leaving dead." Mueller confessed that he married his Latter girl in Polsey, Ark., 1898, but says he deserted her three months later and does not know her whereabouts.

A box of 32-caliber revolver cartridges found in Mueller's room in the search of the house Mueller occupied at Astoria. A flattened 32-caliber bullet was near the head of the girl.

BANK ROBBERS HOLD UP POSSE

Five masked bandits, who robbed the State Bank of Gilmanton, Wis., of several thousand dollars early Wednesday morning, held up the pursuing posse of sheriffs, who surrounded them in the depot at Hazelhurst, a few miles south of Ogden, and then escaped eastward in a nearby junction. The posse had been running for the four masked bandits all day. At 7:30 o'clock in the evening the bandits came out of the woods and took refuge in the railway station at Hazelhurst. They were discovered in the station by the village marshal, who swore in several deputies and then ordered the bandits to surrender. Immediately a volley of several rifles were pointed through the door and windows of the station and then the masked robbers came out, still covering their pursuers, backing the posse into the middle of the street, they again escaped to the woods, while they kept their pursuers covered.

CHICAGO

The weekly review of Chicago trade compiled by R. G. Dun & Co. says:

Evidently there are some 17,000 persons in Michigan who are of the opinion that marriage is a failure, as the record of divorce cases at the office of the Secretary of State shows that at the close of last year 15,387 cases were pending. It is shown that 2,015 divorces were granted in Michigan during 1903 and only 19 were refused. About 200 cases were withdrawn. In the last ten years there has been a wonderful increase in the number of divorce cases in Michigan. The records show that Jan. 1, 1898, there were only 2,475 cases on file, while Jan. 1, 1904, there were 10,357.

Creditors Claims on F. P. Glazier Adjusted by Agreement.

United States District Judge Swan has ratified an agreement reached by the creditors of Frank G. Glazier of Chelsea, who went into bankruptcy in December, 1897, and whose liabilities of more than a million dollars included $275,000 in bonds issued by Frank Glazier then held in his possession as State treasurer. Glazier's bondsmen involved the failure of the Chelsea Savings Bank in his home town and the Glazier Stove Company of Chelsea. Under the terms of the agreement reached now it is estimated that the bond creditors will receive about 12 cents on the dollar.

FALOONISTS SCARED BY OLD LAW

U. S. May Execute Statute Which Makes Offenders Hard Labor.

Liquor men of northern Michigan are much wrought up over the story circulated that under a law of the United States authorities may exercise the old law under which the lands in northern Michigan, northern Wisconsin and northern Minnesota are known as Indian lands, and may prohibit the sale of liquor and drive the saloons out of existence. The law is to be tested in Duluth by the Civic League. It would affect about 700 liquor dealers in northern Michigan alone.

Holding Alistacon Pace.

When the time arrived for refusing to forget this 5th day of October anniversary this state will be glad to be that this baby was born and transplanted into this forty years ago, and for further consideration, they little dreamed of the War of the Rebellion has been written by private soldiers. We are sure of one to whom the effect brings satisfaction. So, what of it, if we stop this fortieth anniversary to dwell reflectingly upon this great little event in our native life.

Do you know that forty years ago this day a few of the nation were upon Allatoona Pass, Georgia, earthquaked for the future cause by less than 2,000 young men? Perhaps the destiny of a nation of 80,000,000 people depended on the courage, integrity, patriotism and fidelity of those boys.

There is a feeling that the old soldiers are getting tired of our ever-the-same stories, but this Oct. 5th anniversary is another and a bigger anything that is not true. In the presence of five great little events which occurred in the same "Ho, My Comrades, See the Signal Waving in the Sky," in the present and the future doing comrades, we can afford to tell the truth, only.

The truth only, suggests thoughts for memory and for tears.

It was Abraham Lincoln's second campaign. The great problem whether 100,000 of people could govern themselves was on trial. The Union army under Sherman had captured Atlanta. Atlanta was to be had been planned. Sherman's army was to be transported by rail to Atlanta. Allatoona Pass is eighteen miles north of Kennesaw. Here 2,000 men, mostly from Illinois, were stationed for Sherman's army, about all that was between Sherman's army and Atlanta to the sea. Six thousand Confederates, infantry and artillery, under General Hood, came to take the place of Sherman's main army and surround the Allatoona garrison. Before the fog of truce, French sent a message to General Corse in command of the Union forces, telling him he would give the garrison five minutes to which he surrender "or save the necessary effusion of blood." Corse sent back word that the garrison was ready for that effusion as soon as his assailant chose to begin it. Then followed the greatest little battle of the century.

After eight hours of the most desperate musketry and artillery duel on this side of Gettysburg, the Union men had held the fort. The 2,000,000 rattles and cheers that greeted the news were for Sherman's army. The battle was over, and the march to the sea could be made. For a little while quiet reigned; then a shout of triumph was heard from the Allatoona hills. The wounded joined in the rejoicing. The dying looked up at the flag and cheered. The dead lay there proudly floating over the fort, and the living knew that they had been left to keep it there.

The Union forces of less than 2,000 with 12 times as many the enemy was repulsed, over one-third of the number killed, wounded and captured in the battle, but maybe is that.

History tells us that the Confederates lost 1,500 killed and wounded, and they left 800 guns on the field.

Of the 2,000 men in the Union forces except four were either killed or wounded, and nobody knew or cared anything to be around loose that could possibly be used. In the fall of 1864 we were encamped near Louisville, Ky., and had for neighbors the 25th regiment Indiana boys. One night some of our boys went out and confiscated two stands of bees. They hived the bees in the hat and cloaks followed late camp, but strange as it may seem, the bees stayed with us and our camp guard they left the trail, which was perfectly plain, and passed on to the camp of the Hoosiers, saying they knew the Michigan boys never stole but always bought what they wanted. In December, 1862, we were lying in front of Vicksburg, Miss., in muddy, and while out scouting, and about two miles from camp, one of the plunderers and pillagers ever found in Dixie camp. On his arrival at camp I asked him what he stole that for.

"Oh," said he, "it will come handy to sharpen our knives on."

"Do you think you will get transportation for grindstones when we return?" I asked.

To which he replied: "I should not be surprised if we stayed in this campaign until we mustered out."

He was terribly disappointed when a few days after we received marching orders, and his grindstone was the best for a joke whenever any of our slaves wanted sharpening.

Not Afraid.

Personal courage literals its owned with a particular kind of bravery that afforded by outside forces. An illustration of this is given in the "Recollections of a Private Soldier." "Recollections of a Private Soldier." "Recollections of a Private Soldier." where he gives this incident:

"In 1864 Colonel Daniels of the Seventh Illinois Cavalry, accompanied with some of his command, and a regiment of infantry, came into the rear of the enemy now sought to convert that victory into defeat in a single day. The Union forces, being in the rear, found would have been a terrible disaster.

"The boys were for the fight and victory that day had the backbone to remain loyal to their trust. The men boys who would take a message to Garcia."

"They sent a message back to the enemy, which thus caused Tennessee throughout the world.

"Of the men who held Allatoona Pass there are only a few left to tell the story of the day's work on the 5th of Oct., which originated the gospel hymn, "Hold the Fort, for I Am Coming."

General Sherman made this battle an occasion, an order, in which he said, among other things: "The thanks of this army are due and are hereby accorded the officers and men for the determined gallant action of Allatoona, and it is made an example to illustrate the importance of preparing in time and meeting danger boldly, manfully, and well."—J. F. Graw, in Hesmer County independent (Waverly, Iowa), Oct. 6, 1904.

With Methods at Ft. Chickamauga.

The recent death of General Edward McCook, calls attention to the fact that recalls the story of his gallantry at Chickamauga on September 19 and 20, 1863.

By Chickamauga's crooked stream the martial trumpets blew;
The South and South stood face to face, with war's dread work to do.
Yet, strange, the flow of the blood flowed in their veins.
All banner-led and bugle-stirred, they set them to the fight,
Hearing the God of slaughter leap from mountain height to height.
The ruddy, fair-haired giant North breathed loud and strove amain;
The wiry, shadowy, swarthy South did brave them to the strain.
As centaurs shouldered undersod, a cloud rolled overhead.
And serpent coils of flame out through and tapped and twisted red.
Where back and forth a bullet-stream went singing like a lassoo,
What time the trees fell, cannon-balls in splinters tore the trees.

"Make way, make way!" a voice boomed, "make way, scattering to the rear!"
The answer was the rebel yell and Waagg's artillery.
Where Negley's brigade, the cohorts gray, like snow-tossed clouds, were rent;
The noble Bragonian entered his men, Pat Cleburne answered back,
And tightly stormed, and life was naught in Walthall's bloody track.
Old Taylor's ridge rocked to its base, and Pigeon mountain shook,
And lists were down, and lyts died, and broken was McBook.
Van Cleve moved like a hurricane, a tempest blew with blood,
Awful the sweep of brickerridge across the flaming wood.
Never before did battle-roar such chords of thunder make,
Never, never, a million of man ever such barriers break.

"Stand fast, stand fast!" cried Rosecrans, and Thomas said, "I will!"
And crash on crash the batteries flash their thunderous down the hill.
Brave Longstreet's squadrons rush into the breach, whatever barred its way.
"Pill the "Rock of Chickamauga" hurled the roaring columns back,
And gave the jaws of victory a red tinge of defeat,
Adding a noble dignity to that hard name "retreat."

Two days they fought and overmore those days shall stand apart,
Reynolds and Longstreet, within the nation's heart.
Come, comrades, set the carven rocks to mark this glorious spot,
Here let Will Hazen's rocks, the thousands of his brigade,
Build, hands, this never monument of stone shall last as long
As sunset's yellow light turns on the breath of battle-smoke.
—Maurice Thompson.

Sherman's Tunes.

It was strange how little regard the soldiers of the late war had for the above motto. My regiment, the Twenty-fifth Michigan Infantry, had the reputation of being the most honest and upright of any that went down to Dixie, but I never knew anyone to be forced anything to lie around loose that could possibly be used. In the fall of 1864 we were encamped near Louisville, Ky., and had for neighbors the 25th regiment Indiana boys. One night some of our boys went out and confiscated two stands of bees. They hived the bees in the hat and cloaks followed late camp, but strange as it may seem, the bees stayed with us and our camp guard they left the trail, which was perfectly plain, and passed on to the camp of the Hoosiers, saying they knew the Michigan boys never stole but always bought what they wanted. Political Comment.

Mr. Taft Utters a Great Truth.

"The government of the United States must move slowly. It has to move with deliberation, and it has to move or its agents have to move within the lines of law; but ordinarily the government ultimately does justice."—The President at Grand Junction, Col.

The President was speaking with particular reference to a local situation, but he voiced a great truth, which deserves more attention than it has received of late from many well-meaning but really unthinking persons.

The most striking characteristic of many who of late have assumed to voice public opinion has been their incessant complaint that the government doesn't do some particular thing with celerity, or in some particular way, evil or nuisance—which they find it particularly "popular" to denounce. When real statesmen lead, a government always moves slowly, not because it is impossible to move swiftly, but because the blunders committed by a government in haste are so far reaching and have such lasting effect.

A wise statesman always questions the plausible and always refuses to express every possible intimate effect in order that blunders may be avoided.

For no repentance can wipe away the sin of a great and irretrievable blunder. It must always be paid for, and consequently the only code that is legal tender for its payment is suffering or blood.

Without going back to the reconstruction period, Mr. Taft pointed out for example the blunder that produced the disasters of 1893 and 1897.

Never were more plausible arguments or national interest and of what was widely supposed to be "natural law" advanced than those used for the legislative effort to maintain gold and silver in a mathematical relation as existed in the days of Cleopatra. As we now see, there was no "natural law" whatever, but simply a temporary trial accident, a passing condition, in the exploitation of the earth's mineral resources.

Yet because responsible men in government could not or would not see that this industrial accident was passing into oblivion, a whole great nation, composed of people really the richest on earth, was early plunged into irretrievable, and utterly disgraceful bankruptcy.

It is not necessary to speak of other governmental blunders since, further than to point out that our recent panic was mainly the result of efforts to exalt agents of government above the law, to substitute for government of laws a government of men, that "it is not necessary to avoid other governmental blunders since, further than to point out that our recent panic was mainly the result of efforts to exalt agents of government above the law, to substitute for government of laws a government of men, that

WHY NOT TRY FREE WOOL?

Sheep Raisers Wondering When Free Trade Will Reach Them.

The farmers of the agricultural states are afraid that the next movement toward free trade will be the removal of the duty from wool. Wool is called a raw material. It is a necessary article of clothing. If the American people were not producers of wool, it might reasonably be argued that wool should be put on the free list. But wool is a great American product. The sheep industry is a large one, and its existence depends entirely upon the protective tariff. Shutting wool on the free list would mean to the American farmers would go out of the sheep business entirely. Sheep are managed with great economy and with great productiveness in Wyoming, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico. Among the older States Ohio is the leading producer of wool. In one of these States—or Territories—can sheep be grown and cared for as cheaply as in any other part of the world. America has a monopoly on raw cotton, and can defy all tariff tinkers who talk seriously of free wool. If it is decided that we are not justified in devoting our broad prairies to the production of sheep, then the duty ought to be removed from everything of any value that is made of wool. We have often said that a protective tariff is not a th

Osborn's Cause Strengthening.

The movement to make Chase S. Osborn governor of Michigan grows by what it feeds upon—the people's abiding faith in the candidate and the crystalizing conviction that he represents a logical solution of an existing political problem.

Mr. Osborn stands on neutral ground so far as the gubernatorial campaign is concerned. Within our memory there has never existed in Michigan a political situation that was fraught with greater danger to party success than now, and there has never been a perplexing political situation in the history of Michigan republicanism when a clearer pathway to solid, safe footing was marked out than that which leads from Chippewa county to this canvas.

There has never been a campaign within our recollection when geographical political conditions and the personality and record of a candidate combined to give greater power to a movement than does the presentation of Chase S. Osborn by the upper peninsula. There is not a flaw in the logic of the argument.

The long-continued confidence of the party in the loyalty of the upper counties should not lead it into the error of assuming that loyalty there is as immutable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Even the Presbyterians have revised their creed—a creed that for generations was supposed to be of divine inspiration. The warning influence of big majorities above the straits may sometime be transformed into a cold blast from the rugged Michigan shores of Lake Superior.

Chase S. Osborn can harmonize every element of discord, lead the party to certain victory, and give the people of Michigan an administration of strength and character.

Traverse City Record. The meeting of the executive committee of the Western Michigan Development bureau held last night in the State bank building was attended by Messrs. H. J. Church of Chicago of the Northern Michigan Transportation company, E. C. Hutchins of Detroit, J. A. Mitchell of Manistee, Fred K. Stange of Detroit, T. M. Sawyer of Ludington, R. H. Hansel of Manistee and P. Derkett of Traverse City. It was decided by the committee to hold a meeting of the bureau on Friday afternoon, November 5, at which time it is expected two directors from each county are expected to be present. All reports seem to have been very satisfactory, and some of the final preparations for holding the big exhibit in Chicago were gone over.

Kills Her Foe Of 20 Years.

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan, of Haynesville, Me., "was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. After among remedies had failed and several doctors gave me up, I tried Electric Bitters, which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything. I am 70 years old and am overjoyed to get my health and strength back again." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Kidney Trouble, Liver Bowels, Female Complaints, be unequaled. Only 50c at F. G. A FAMOUS SENTENCE.

Steele's "To Love Her Was a Liberal Education."

The remarks widely beside made in reference, as is generally supposed, to Lady Elizabeth Hastings has often been quoted and almost as often quoted incorrectly. Steele wrote, "Though her mien certainly much more imitative than command, to behold her is an immediate check to loose behavior; to love her was a liberal education." There are two curious misquotations of this delightful and famous sentence, which Thackeray declared to be "the finest compliment to a woman that perhaps ever was offered." One is in the notes on Pope contained in James Russell Lowell's "My Study Windows." Was it not in this age, says Mr. Lowell, "that some Dick Steele paid to his wife the finest compliment ever paid to woman when he said that to know her was a liberal education?" How are two distinct errors committed by so careful a writer as Mr. Lowell. Yet he is not alone in this. Arthur Helps in his treasure of "Realmah" has this sentence: "Steele also has not it described, though he felt the charm of ladies with a woman who has genuine admired when he said 'that to be man with her was in itself a liberal education.'" We are also told that Dick Steele once in quoting the remark incorrectly applied it to Congreve. Here then are three distinct writers of high rank who have chosen how to a moment of careless composition they were led astray to by apparently no coincidence. They had a desire to adequate their author, and they gave the substance. But they grievously failed in the words themselves and one of them at least in their application.—Argonaut.

A LESSON IN LOGIC.

It is only within the memory of living man that vivisection has undertaken to protect domestic animals from the cruelty of their cruelty. Cruelty was hard to be absolute by most, but there was one man in England a hundred years ago who could demonstrate the miserable nature of this theory. This man was Thomas Erskine, one of the greatest lawyers and advocates of his age. A tradition survives at Hampstead, the residence of Lord Erskine, which touches G. Harper has put into his book, "Hunt Nooks Round London," and which shows how the legal minority would have admonished some cruel wretch.

It is related that the celebrated Lord Erskine, walking one day on Hampstead heath, saw a ruffianly driver shamefully thrashing a miserably ill conditioned horse.

My lord remonstrated with the driver on the cruelty of it, whereupon the fellow retorted, "It's my own. Maybe I can do as I please?" Thus he started wheeling the wretched animal worse than ever.

Erskine, greatly annoyed, laid his walking stick over the shoulders of the offender, who, cursing and growling, asked my lord what he meant by the interference. Erskine, calmly replied, "Why, why, Erskine, 'the stick's my own. Maybe I can do as I please?'"

How to Slip Rubber Plants.

When a rubber plant has grown too large to be convenient it can be slipped and the slips planted, and they should then grow into fine, healthy plants. Young ones are easily for the slipping process but a fancy forty says that for those who live in a city or town the sponge method is better. A large sponge of the very finest quality is cut in lengths and cut into small pieces or the bits of sponge one can get are chosen to be 3 and to cents will do equally well. Next one must get young healthy shoots and cut them off the top of the plant, make an incision in the stem, and insert a bit of the sponge with the cut. The rind or skin should be intact. Then the sponge should be wet and tied over the incision. This must be kept moist constantly. In a short time little bubbles roots will be thrown out of the sponge, and when these have fairly strong the branch should be severed below the sponge and the new plant potted, sponge and all. A small piece at first and afterward a sunny one will best suit the young plants.

How to Keep Silverware Bright.

Here is a good homemade liquid for keeping silver clean. It is a great help to every one who has tried it:

Make a strong alum water and skim off all the particles that will not dissolve. To this add shavings of pure white soap. Let them dissolve and bottle it. After the silver has been scoured with whitening off any other soap or liquid that comes for that purpose rub each piece with a clean bit of chamois soaked with this same water. It adds luster and keeps the silver clean for quite some time. If it is found that any silver spoons or cups are even stained by medicine or rub a cloth in sulphuric acid, rub the stained part until it disappears, then wash the place in soap and water.

Some Doubt About It.

A reception was given by the Medical club in Pittsburgh in honor of Sir Lauder Brunton, a noted English physician, and in course of the proceeding he was engaged in a discussion of nervous ill temper. After he had described the baneful effects of vexatious drugs upon nervous ill tempers he said:

"I remember a middle aged woman of most nervous disposition who was in the habit of taking her husband with her in her carriage when she went out on her business.

"John, I know I am cross at times. I know that you find me making office, I know that I make you feel bad, I love you. But, John, remember, when I take nervous tonic I don't mean you that I had my life to live over again I'd marry you just the same."

"I'm not so sure of that," John replied shortly.—Philadelphia Press.

The new air pressure system of raising water from the big wells which supply Boyne City is proving successful. The forcing of air has already increased the flow considerably and the water works plant can be run at a greatly reduced cost.

Petoskey News: And speaking of potatoes, Allegan Olson, living four and a half miles northeast of the city says that he raised this season, 482 bushels of spuds from two acres, which he sold at forty cents per bushel.

Petoskey News: The funeral of Barbie H. Henika took place at the residence this morning at 10 o'clock. The services were read by Rev. Bedford Inter, and the ceremonies were conducted by M. J. Erwin of Harbor Springs. The remains were laid to rest in Greenwood. Mr. Henika was the oldest and one of the most respected business men of the city, having been actively engaged in the same business, and in the same location for thirty-five years. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the remaining members of the family.

Petoskey News: Mr. Eli Voper, superintendent of the sugar beet factory at Charlevoix, stopped off yesterday on his way to Charlevoix, to visit his uncle, Mr. Edward Dean in this city. Mr. Voper estimates the beet crop this season at about 15,000 tons, a little less than last year on account of the dry weather. But the per cent of sugar is much higher, running on test to 15 per cent, 12 per cent being the average during other seasons. Every 1 per cent of sugar found over the average of 12 per cent brings the farmer $1.00 a ton more for his beets.

S. T. Jackson, of Southern Ohio, has been at Mancelona for three weeks leasing land for the Jennings Oil and Gas company. Many stories have been told and many opinions offered concerning the possibilities of gas and oil lying underneath the surface of Antrim county. Mr. Jackson is from the oil fields of Ohio and after making some investigation of the conditions he laid the matter before the Jennings Oil and Gas company of Zanesville, Ohio, who felt that the indications were good enough to warrant a little well cutting.

The next meeting of Charlevoix Pomona Grange will be held with Peninsula Grange, Thursday, November 4. An interesting program will be carried out, as well as reports of the work of officers and the completion of arrangements for the trip to the State Grange meeting and the exhibits of the products of farms at Traverse City. Several other matters of importance will also be decided so that will probably be the last chance for Patrons to receive the degree of Pomona in full form, which will entitle them to all the benefits of the State Grange, before the state meeting.

After careful and extended investigation in this and other parts of northern Michigan, outside parties have decided to purchase several hundred acres of land near East Jordan for the establishment of a large scientific fruit farm, with apples as a specialty. The site chosen is about five miles from East Jordan on the west side of the South Arm of Pine Lake and has an admirable frontage on the lake, a portion of which will doubtless be used for the erection of a number of summer homes. Prof. Taft of the Michigan Agricultural college, made a special investigation of the site chosen.

Traverse City Record: J. B. Sandbey, with several men, will go to High Island, one of the Beavers, on the steamer J. S. Crouse, and begin operations at once for getting the timber camp of George Helmforth in readiness for the whaler's cut. Mr. Helmforth has 3,700 acre of standing timber, and his machinery is on the ground, having been installed previous to the panic. When business over the country came to a standstill Mr. Helmforth was wise enough to cease operations at once, leaving his machinery on the ground, well protected from the elements, so now he is ready to begin the work which he postponed at that time. Additional supplies are awaiting the Crouse on the Hannah & Lay dock, Mr. Sandbey to take charge of them and install them on the island.

WHEN YOU BUY FENCE

There's a lot of cheap fence on the market, but you must remember when you buy fencing at a cheap price you get just what you pay for—poorly made, unservicable fence—nothing more.

PEERLESS WOVEN WIRE FENCE

will outlast fence made from cheap soft wire, twice over, and the difference in price is trifling when you consider the difference in fencing. He can get it for you.

IS NOT A MILITARY EMBLEM.

The cockade originated simply in the knot of ribbons or strings by which the broad tops of the seventeenth century round hat were "cocked" or drawn up to the brim in fine weather, and thus originated the true-cornered hat as well as the cocked hat of later times. There was nothing specially military about the usage, as the lackeys assert. The same strings survive in the livery of the ground, having been imitated by national dignitaries in Great Britain. In the strings of the hats worn by French corps and squadrons of the padoes and in the cords which are at times seen on the hats of some livery servants.

It naturally became the custom for military men to "cock" their hats with the livery color of the prince they served, and as the Hanoverian color was the convenient one of black, the "black cockade" became associated in the minds of the people with military uniform. In an old Scotch song of Killiecrankie, sung Woodward's handbook, we read of "thirsted coat lads with black cockades," and a knot of white ribbons was naturally chosen as the badge of their opponents. When the old use of the strings was forgotten, the knot, in the form of a rosette of ribbon, survived, just as did the buttons on the backs of our coats, which were intended to fasten back the flap in riding or marching.—"Justice of the Peace."

Animals Are Poor Sailors.

The polar bear is the only wild animal that likes a trip on the waves, according to a French scientist who has just studied its behavior at sea. He is quite jolly when aboard ship, but all the reindeer are miserably seasick on a voyage and vociferously give vent to their feelings until seasickness brings silence.

The tiger suffers most of all. He whines pitifully, his eyes water continually and he rubs his stomach with his terrible paws. The lioness are bad sailors and often die on a sea voyage.

Oxen are heroic in their attempts not to give way to sickness. Elephants do not like the sea, but they are amenable to medical treatment. They are given in a bucket of hot water containing three and a half pints of whisky and seven ounces of quinine.—Par Nemo.

...ter Choice.

They were sisters-in-law and reasonably well discussed toward each other. One was the mother of George, aged six months, and the other the mother of Marion, aged six months and four days. It was impossible that a sill gift parental rivalry should be no longer suppressed.

"Darlin' dear, does not seem to grow very fast," said the mother of George, with a suggestion of commiseration in her tones. "George is much heavier (meaning being measured in inches).

"Oh, well," responded the sister-in-law, with a sweet and blandness superiority, "of course I should not wish George to be a stock."

The Fake Robbery Again.

It was a fishy looking story. The local agent of a New York corporation out in a Wisconsin town, handling its funds daily, reported a robbery. Two men had come into the office into at night, when he was at work on the books, and at the point of pistols he had yielded up $2,000 of the company's funds. Two days later the confidential traveling agent of the corporation dropped into the town and talked it over with the local man in a quiet way. "In five minutes," he told Tip, "I knew there had never been any robbery. How did I know? Instinct. The story he told was too sweet. There wasn't a saw in it. It was like a fairy-tale alibi. You know the best alibi, until you can knock it out, is the one that is invented for the occasion."

A HYPOTHETICAL NAMELESS RIVAL.

His Suppositious Case Brought His Sweetheart to Terms.

By HENRY WALKER.

(Copyrighted, 1898, by Associated Literary Press.)

They sat at the end of the pier and discussed the situation calmly. It was altogether too torrid for heated argument. If they felt any inward impulse they vented it through their fingers rather than their tongues, she by pulling her palm leaf fan idly to pieces and he by ruthlessly stripping the best cigar he had.

"What's your objection to next fall, Jean? I'm not quitting you, you know, but I do feel a sort of inquisitorial curiosity."

"Next fall? Why, it's August now, and fall begins with September, and then it's no time before it's winter. And—I can't possibly fancy myself a settled, married person next winter."

"Rather, indeed! Matrimony doesn't make people settled nowadays. You know you'll be on the go when you're married as well as now."

"Yes, I know that. Mamma's always bringing a fiftieth cousin home to marry me. Mamma's a fiftieth cousin herself, you see. Well, suppose that a young fellow of some twenty-six years, with the average allotment of good looks and talents and a broken collar bone. Suppose you were sent up to recuperate in a Vermont farmhouse without a resident or friend within eighty miles—you must suppose giddy things sometimes, you know, when you go. Well, suppose that a young lady of unusual beauty and charm, of unusual intelligence and high intelligence and unusual intelligence and high intelligence and cause intelligence drive from the wax, or, rather, from Burlington, who would you do, even if you were engaged? Come, now, be honest! Would you not fall in love with her?

"I am by quite a little bit high. The little upward curves of her mouth and her smile a slightly stupified look, she gave an unconscious shrug at his question.

"Hesitation! I never heard of that corner of the world. And what was this remarkable young person's name? You never mentioned her before."

"Oh, surely you don't want particulars. In this weather! Your glasses forecast not me thinking. Perhaps we have not adaptability. I suppose that's why we've liked each other so well. Don't it awful to think that the opinions that attract people before marriage may be the very ones to entrance them afterward?"

"Awful! Did Miss Tallington have English opinions? Previous strongly addicted to golf, mainly, have?"

"You're not going back on golf, I hope. Consider the Corsican cup! But, as I was saying, if an engaged man proved to a certain point to be simply himself and not a duly wedded individual? It's only a difference of degree, you know."

"Unfortunately I can't duplicate my experience. I've never broken my collar bone, for one thing, and for another thing, the moment a girl is engaged all her admirable acquaintances feel bound to whitewash themselves by washing me, and I'm left—well, I'm left to the trade. That must be the friend point you can select, namely the front door. After they have let the front door a good long time they most generally turn back again, take off the chain and peek them again. Now it is the turn of another cousin to be Mr. and Mrs. Jones, and the other they get have tried the couple who made the trip in the steamer first are judged the winners.

"It is best to use coats and hats that you do not need to treat carefully, for naturally they are apt to get rumpled in the excitement of the game. Don't forget the other, in which you spend a large staid, for it always is interesting to see any one in a hurry struggle with a spectacle case."

The Hat Trick.

Practical joking, as a rule, is objectionable and not to be encouraged, but in the following no well results can possibly happen, and the "victim" of the experiment will be as much as those who planned it.

Take an old brush and saw off six inches of its handle. Into the shorter piece insert a needle nonforemost and, placing your friend's hat on carefully behind the brush, fasten the needle well home. Now apparently the brush passes through the crown of the hat. The needle keeping all secure in position. Place the hat in a corner or elsewhere and await results.

A Question of Age.

The great Napoleon, as you know, leveled the wonderful corsar upon his little more than a youth. When he was offered the command of the troops in Paris during the troubles of the time the directory some one objected to him on account of his youth. His answer to that objection is famous. "Your grandfathers," he said, "ask for bread, sir." A ready witted lawyer made good use of that age question once when Napoleon became suspicious. The lawyer had been recommended for appointment as prefect of one of the departments, and some one presented him to the emperor. Napoleon scanned the prefect at his youthful appearance and said: "You look quite young for such a responsible position. May I ask how old you are?" "The same age as that of your mother when she won the battle of Marengo," answered the lawyer, and he got the appointment.—Chicago News.

The Game of Twilight.

To play the game called twilight each child takes the name of a flower, and seats are provided for all but one, who stands in the middle of the dusky spins a wooden plate, calling the name of a flower at the same time. The girl whose flower name is called leaps up to catch the plate before it falls, and the unfort chale is taken to the spinner. If the plate is not caught before it falls a forfeit is required from the one who fails to catch, unless it is caught by the flower name, in which case the spinner is considered the loser.

If, instead of a flower, "twilight" is called, all stand in their places and the one who fails to secure a seat becomes spinner. If "moonlight" is called all must stand and any one who jumps up is liable to forfeit. If "double twilight" is called a double change of seats is made.

Local Critics.

"Local color" is an excellent adjunct to a good story, but it cannot supply the place of invention and character. A young author now in possession of a growing reputation has twisted how this fact was first painfully impressed upon his mind. He had spent the summer in an ancient seaport of New England and desired to reproduce its atmosphere of quaint, old fashioned tranquillity in a story.

He worked hard over it. When the tale was done it occurred to him to try its effect upon a native resident, a retired sea captain, unlettered, but intelligent.

"Have it seem natural? Is it like the place?"

"Yes, oh, yes," replied the old man promptly. "It's like the place. But you see to me there's one thing and another, and so I been kind o' wishin' all along for something to do good, and the fust thing I knew I'd have to do it end."

Still more crushing was the comment of another local critic who read the story after it was published and was asked for if it were not well written.

"Well, you see," said he, "I'm a retired lieutenant and life like as nature, only whatever did he write it for?"

The Man Chaperon.

London matrons are said to be trying the experiment of the man chaperon on the occasions upon which they are not able to take charge of their daughters. There are always a number of old bachelors or widowers ready to dance attendance upon young girls, and this would be much more satisfactory to the girl as a general thing than the elderly women chaperons.

CHAPTER XIII.

After wandering aimlessly about the city for a while the half-crazed gambler turned his footsteps toward home. He entered, both hoping and fearing that Popsie would be asleep. He had a vague presentiment that he was on the verge of some great crisis. The guilty secret so long hidden in the depths of his soul threatened to be forced its way downward least in the surface, and he felt that if anything more should happen to irritate him he might do something desperate.

He said had been his movements that he stood at Popsie's door before the door had yielded and entered the dark hall, where he stumbled against a bulge, and when he saw by a sombre lamp that he had stumbled against his foot in her bulging, distorted face, he felt horrorstruck. The sensitive, nervous man was mentally expecting it, hastily answer.

She smiled him a sickly smile, and he vaulted her form, but did not control her sadness, and he suffering, pale, and preaching him, extended her hands for an embrace. He pushed her aside and flung himself heavily into a chair.

"I'm tired," she said, sadly, and sat down and sighed.

He did not answer, and her eyes both tranquilized and frosted him. She stared long and hard at the face which she always prepared with her own hands and which she knew so well and yet I see my duty! If he is my husband, I must go back to him. A wife's place is by her husband's side. I do not know how I can do it, but I must. How hard it is! I cannot realize it. The very thought of it makes him seem like a stranger. Oh, I wish I could go to sleep!"

"It is impossible," gasped the trembling creature to whom she looked for confirmation.

"Why impossible?"

"Because, because—he is—dead," he whispered, through his dry lips.

"Dead!" the wife cried, in a shrill tone. "Where did he die? How did he die?"

"I killed him," he shouted, arraigning his left and wavering his hands wildly. "Three! It was told itself. I know it would. I knew it would come to me out of my heart, for months. I should have died if I had kept it secret for another moment. I feel relieved already. You do not know what it means to guard a secret night and day for years, to carry it with you, to be afraid to tell it at last. I killed him! I killed him! I struck him with the pistol and crushed his skull and turned him face downward in the road and left him there so that when they found him they would think that he had fallen from his horse. It was well done, for he was who had put us together in crime. No one has suspected it. I am in no danger. And yet I could not keep the secret any longer, and now that I have told it, I feel so much happier, so like myself again. I feel as if I should never be unkind or irritable any more. The load has fallen from my heart. Come, Tom, and kiss me."

Extending his hands, he approached her. As he did so, the look of horror with which she had regarded him intensified and she retreated before him with she reached the door. Then like a scared hunted animal a prisoner by a storm. Such dread was on her face that he dared not touch her.

"What is the matter?" he said. "Are you afraid of me?"

"Afraid of you, said, 'for seeming even for a moment to despise and pity him, and, in a tone of pity, said, 'I mean to condemn you. I do not mean to act or feel as if I were any less guilty than you are in all this wrong. But when one has to do something awful without preparation, one's heart is so scared that one does not know what to do. We are both guilty, David. I think that it is because I have had so large a share in all the rest that has been wrong that I shall be so much more guilty than I think I could. It is true that I have helped me terribly and terrifyingly. It is true that your hands are stained with blood, and yet I love you. My heart yearns for you this moment as never before. We are both guilty, each other. But there is a video which to my soul that I have taken no part. We could not respect and therefore we could not have been married. Into every moment of our lives that I have spent with you I have lied. It is impossible. I see it clearly. Ev-ery-thing is changed. We can never more pain."

"We shall not part!" he cried, springing towards her and seizing her by the arms. "We are bound to each other by ties as by virtue. This secret will drive us together. We are bound to each other from each other. Let the dead rest by its dead! Let us be happy!"

"No," she answered, calmly, "it is impossible. You must not expect, for comfort, to be happy and exciting, and do wrong. I have met, and touch me! I hate you!"

"Hate me!" she shrieked, "hate me? Oh, David! You cannot mean it. You cannot mean it. You cannot, you cannot!"

"But I do!" he exclaimed, bitterly. "I hate you. You have ruined me. I now you continue it. From the time I first saw you I have never been happy. You are a pleasure. Who did you ever cross my path? Curse you, and you! Curse you! Curse my happiness and infinite misery! Curse the day I met you!"

"Curse me, curse me! I am ruined. I am and alone. You have ruined me. Curse me! Curse me! What will you say after I tell you that you are indebted to a man who has ruined both down?"

"A curse," she cried, clasping her hands in terror.

"Curse, curse! You need not look so frightened. You are as guilty as I, or at least you are as guilty as I thinks. We are bound together in misery. We are doomed."

"Doomed! Doomed! What do you mean? Tell me! I implore you! I speak in riddles!"

"Will you?" he said, in a tone of entreaty.

"Will you? Do you wish to know? Are you in earnest? Then I will! You are not in danger. Do you love me best?"

Popsie sprang to her feet and stood staring at him in horror.

"I decline to answer. I were married to your boast of a husband lawfully and legally. I love him. I love him willingly, I determined that you should know it. I love him. I am ashamed of the justice so desirous you."

"You brilliant, Justice—deceiver!"

"Yes, brilliant! Do you understand? Yes, brilliant! Yes, brilliant! Yes, brilliant!

CONTROL THE EMOTIONS.

One of the Essential Conditions of Nervous Balance.

Now, then, can the nervous sufferer help himself? To begin with, he should ask himself: "What is there in my physical life which may account for my nervous weakness? Is my diet sufficient in quantity and nutritious in quality? Do I get enough sleep? Is my work congenial? Is my environment in good degree suited to my tastes and aptitudes?" These are simple questions, and yet upon their answer often depends the possibility of nervous health or nervous disease. If the sufferer discovers that any of the physical causes of a nervous breakdown are in operation it is obvious that it is his first duty to fight against these causes, to lessen them and if possible to remove them altogether. In the next place, did this be especially to be noted by nervous women—one of the essential conditions of nervous health is the control of the emotions. The tendency on the slightest provocation to give way to a paroxysm of tears is dangerous, because it tends to weaken health and mental. No doubt there are moments of poignant agony when tears are nature's helpful provision for some relief to an overstrained nervous and mental organism, but these moments come at rare intervals in our lives, and, as a rule, so far from weakening our moral or mental life, they uplift and purify it. When nervous people must be warned against is the tendency to let themselves go because of some petty worry or some right domestic difference or thirteen gross morbid impulse to self pity.—Dr. S. S. McCombs in Harper's Bazar.

DUTCH SPORTS.

Holland the Land of Sleighing, Sledging and Skating.

Probably no girls and girls had better times than the Dutch boys and girls in old and new Netherland. Irving says of them in his fun book, "The Story of New Netherland," in the art of skating and sledding. Children with young people hardly learn to skate; they begin it naturally and have it as all their lives. Whether for fun or business or to go to the market, to church, to visit or to carry the news by rapid transit on steel. A pair of skates is a passport to complete which.

Every child and each lady knows on Holland canals or ponds was represented on the Mohawk and Hudson. There was the fashion of sailboat runners, sometimes reduced for swift times to a long plank with crossbeams for seats and with skate irons. Equipped with sail, canvas and some coats, it scarcely seemed to run with the wind itself.

As for coasting, wherever that Holland could show a hill or slope of Friesland, furnished forty or more of these sleds, while husband or sweetheart pulled or kicked.

All this shows the reason why Newburg on the Hudson and Albany and the hills of Troy are so famous for coasting and the North river for ice yachts and well they were the first generation of sitters the Dutch-American towns were noted for sledding, sleighing and skating.

A Fishing Story.

Angling has some very unfavorable surroundings among its many records. Dissepitus has its true tale of a duck which became entangled in a trout line and, breaking off the gut, trailed the fly behind her and actually hooked a fair sized fish. The struggle between the two must have been as extraordinary as that of the Dauphin—a tender which became similarly attached to a line and hook hauled with dead frog.

In this case a voracious pike seized, and, overbalance tug of war ensued, in which the astonished bird performed sundry somersaults on the surface of the water until victory at last rewarded the feathered angler, which towed to shore one of the largest fish ever caught in that perilous lake, and that the pike is true makes it all the more interesting.—London Black and White.

Girls With Boys' Names.

Girls with boys' names and boys with girls' have received them in many instances no doubt by accident. It was so in the case of George Aimee Bellamy, the famous eighteenth century actress, who played Juliet to Garrick's Romeo. Born on St. George day, she was to be called Georgiana, but somebody's blunder at the time of her christening split this into George Aimee. The "corn law rhymer" Ebenezer Elliott, and a daughter named Noah, whose passport is said to have given her much trouble abroad. But here, as in the case of other girls' names, it was only other people's blunder. Ignorance that was not at fault, for turn up Numbers Cxxvi, 33, and you will find that Mahlah, Tirzah, Hoglah, Milcah and Noah were the daughters of Zelophehad.—London Graphic.

How to Clean White Leather Shoes.

Soft white leather shoes can be cleaned in gasoline, and when not too badly soiled they clean nicely with almost any white powder. Pipe clay then shoes should be washed, but often if merely dusty they can be cleaned with white chalk or four. The regular white shoe polish can be used on them. A white polish is made with whiting and water, made medium thick and applied with a cloth. Rub the shoes free from dry powder after they have dried. Chamois hootees clean almost to rather strong possessions water. They should be washed in a pail with lukewarm water mixed in ammonia water and wiped dry with a towel. Do not dry chamois near artificial heat.

Just as Well.

"Statistics show that Japan has two earthquakes a day."

"Gee, a man might as well be married as to live in Japan!"—Houston Post.

BADLY MADE GOWNS.

Famous French Dressmakers Who Think Good Taste Should Begin Within.

The decision of a French court that an American must pay $3,000 for gowns she ordered in spite of her protest that they were lastly made will afford some satisfaction to other American women who have had the same experiences. They are not alone in refusing to pay, and they may not have been ordered to do so by a court of justice. But how many of them have protested in vain against the badly made, poorly sewed and ill fitting gowns that have been made for them by Paris dressmakers of repute? It used to be said that the hurry of most Americans made it necessary for the women to put the gowns together as best they could, but there is no longer any validity in that excuse. Gowns are put up skillfully put together as they ever were. American women they ever were. American women who are landing for the first time in Paris are astonished at the careless sewing which is accepted as a matter of course. And it is in the expensive shops where the time die in Paris that this defect is most likely to exist. The number contributes in the streets far away from the haunts of the strangers are more careful about their work, although in neatness and thoroughness they stand far behind the American dressmaker.

Most Americans in the habit of buying gowns made in Europe are prejudiced in the methods in the sewing rooms and mind over their gowns to their own minds to have their pretty fingers repair the damage that the first wearing is sure to produce. It is the inexperienced alone that go rushing back to the dressmaker to complain or let her know of her error. There is the inefficiency expression of regret and surprise, and the dress is sent to the workroom to be repaired and is delivered the next day—in exactly the same condition. No amount of complaining will have the least effect on the garment.

Wise women take them as they are, are thankful for the exactness to the general design, which is all that even the Parisian dressmakers are able to put into a dress.

"It is not only the American that suffer from the ill made clothes," said one of the buyers for a dressmaker when we came back from Paris the other day. "The Frenchwomen have just as thoroughly opened to expert well made dresses. They have their minds sew them up after the first few wearings just as a matter of course. The average Paris dressmaker considers it beneath her dignity to look after such unimportant things as whether the stitches will hold or not. Her ambition is to supply something smart, something that will look well as to the outside on the moments she has made it for. She has no time to bother her head as to whether the seams are holding inside or not."

Clearing House Operations.

A clearing house is an agency established by the banks of a city to which all checks drawn upon one city bank and deposited in another are sent for payment. Every morning there is a clearing, or settlement, of accounts, in which the checks deposited in each bank are separately summed up and compared. If there is some deposited in a bank then there is drawn upon it the bank receives the difference in cash. If the reverse is the case the bank pays the balance limited or receiving it. The item clearing house either the act of settlement or the sum of all the checks presented for payment. The amount of business done in the clearing house is a pretty sure index of the general condition of business.—New York American.

Forced Into Exile.

Wm Upperman of Glen Oak, Okla., was an exile from home. Mountain air, he thought, would cure a frightful lung trouble—cough that had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, death dogging his steps. "When I began to use King's New Discovery," he writes, "I was after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung diseases. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it dispels Hoarseness and Sore Throat. Cures Grip, Bronchitis, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough. 50c and $1.00, trial bottle free, guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

Boyne Johnnie: E. R. Newville of Livonia, N. Y., a nephew of H. E. Newville, arrived in the city last night. He represents the Automatic Transportation Company, with headquarters at Buffalo, and is in the city to make a demonstration of the automatic electrical device which is owned by the company. This is a transportation system which is designed for practically all purposes. A line running through the farming district would carry the mail both ways and bring in the farmers products as well as take his supplies to him. A passenger service could also be maintained on the same line and it would all be worked automatically. Mail would be collected and deposited while the car was making 25 miles an hour and when a farmer desired to send a load of produce to town he would telephone to the central office and a car would automatically be switched on a siding at his place which he could load at his pleasure when it would go to town with the load.

A Hallowe'en supper and party was given in honor of the foot ball boys at the home of Cora Meeds, Saturday evening Oct. 30, by the girls who attended the foot ball game at Petoskey the week before.

The house was decorated with jack-o-lanterns, corn stalks and apples were hanging from every archway. The dining room which was filled promptly at 6:30 p. m. by nineteen boys, was decorated with the athletic colors, red and white. The boys after partaking of the three course supper which was prepared for them departed to the parlor where they sang songs and told stories till the girls were ready to entertain. Hand painted place cards were given to each boy as a souvenir.

After supper Mr. Miller, the Science teacher offered his services as fortune teller and was very soon surrounded by a crowd of girls. The boys determined their fates by means of a pumpkin carved with initials which was suspended from an archway. The boys were also given slips of paper which directed them to five different places about the house, and at the end of their search were rewarded by a box of home make candy.

The party broke up at 10:30, every one declaring it to be a most enjoyable affair.

THEATRICAL

Now comes the season amateur plays. "Drop your troubles and worries," as the sand for they will drop of their own accord on seeing the "Gilded Youth" in all his glory, glittering with that rich silk and humor which is only found in a high class play such as "The Gilded Youth," Monday, November 8 shall see the first production by the only and original Charlevoix Dramatic Club. The club was formed only to study the Dramatic Art. Among the people who will take part in this first play are such well known theatrical amateurs as Mae Felts, Bessie Cohen, Henry Partridge, Aimlie Mayne and Sam Levinson, and, under the direction of Mr. Agnes Jarvis a success is assured. "The Gilded Youth" is not only a good farce comedy but interspersed with it are song, specialties and choruses. Music and specialties the best that can be produced. See "Oscar and Adolf" on "Foot ball" The funniest act yet and a subject both original and interesting. And also Dixie Jarvis in his original "Hallowed Rag." Something the people of Charlevoix have not had the opportunity to see here. By Misses Cohen and Felts there will be songs that are musical and songs that are humorous. The prices of admission are lowered to 15-25-35c as this club was not formed for financial purposes. Remember the date Monday, Nov. 8.

Charlevoix Cleans Up On Foot Ball With Boyne City.

The hopes of Boyne City of adding a second victory over Charlevoix to their list, were badly shattered when the locals turned the tables, winning by a score of 6 to 5.

Like the former game between the two teams, which resulted in a victory for Boyne City, the game was a continual see-saw, few star plays being made. The punting of Charlevoix was very weak and was out distanced by their opponents. The game was lacking to any of the ordinary accessions of rough play or unfair decisions, both sides playing a clean game.

The local boys were encouraged by a fair sized crowd and showed their appreciation of it by going into the game with a vim that could not help but win.

The game started by Boyne kicking to Charlevoix, the latter choosing the north goal. For the first few minutes of play the ball was in Charlevoix's territory, little gain being made by either side; then Boyne got the ball and worked it within 20 yds. of their goal, where by a fake place kick formation, a neat forward pass was executed which resulted in a touch down. Goal was missed. Score 5-0.

That caused Charlevoix boys to plunge up and Tapineau was sent around end for a large gain, then Paddock decided it was time something was doing and grasping the pigskin under his trusty right arm sprinted up the field for a 65 yd. run across the goal line. Score 5-5. Durgan's boot added another point to the score by kicking goal. This finished the scoring for the first half. For the remainder of the half little progress was made. Several forward passes were tried but few worked successfully. Hull showed up well and played well.

In the second half the battle started by Charlevoix kicking off. Shortly after starting, time was taken out for Hull, who was slightly injured. The ball was in Boyne's territory most of the first part of the half and then Boyne dropped back for a punt. Carey broke through and broke up the play by generally knocking the punter down and gently falling on top of him. The ball was recovered on Boyne's 20 yd. line and it looked for a time as if the home team would score, but by a series of punts the ball was kicked out of danger. The game ended with the ball within 20 yds. of Charlevoix's goal.

The team as a body showed up better than their opponents although they were weak in punting.

Coach Wilson was very much pleased with the game, and said: "I think the fellows showed very well. We had a little hard luck during the week and I was obliged to place Paddock, who has been playing half, into left end. Kirby was changed from center to right tackle and Powers was put into the game for the first time at center. Hull was also changed from end to half and Carey from tackle to full back. Considering the changes made I am very much pleased."

The way the team went after Boyne after the first touchdown was made, was a sight for sore eyes. They showed all around Boyne from then on although not enough to get any more points.

For Friday night a game has been arranged with the Alumni who must be challenged by Capt. Levinson and fully decided that they will put our over on the regulars. Much interest is being taken in the game for although this game is purely local, both sides have many supporters and a large crowd is assured.

—Antoine Sharow, an old resident of Charlevoix, dropped dead on his porch as he returned from his days work Wednesday evening. Heart trouble is supposed to have caused his death. Deceased was an industrious, law abiding citizen. He leaves a wife, three sons and one daughter.

—Assessor from town and a considerable accumulation of work on our desk prevented our attendance at the "Gilded Youth" entertainment at the Charlevoix Theatre Monday night. The attendance was good and those who were present say the Charlevoix Dramatic Company under the direction of Mrs. Jarvis, acquitted itself with very much credit.

—The Congregational ladies wish to call the attention of all members and friends of the church, who have pledged their weekly papers and magazines, to have them ready by Nov. 18, so they may be collected and arrangements made for shipping the same at an early date.

—Sidney Dalbrock, who plays the part of "Harold Wayson" in "A Daughter's Devotion" has just closed a successful season as leading man of the Denver Stock Company. Mr. Dalbrock has selected the first week in a voting contest for the most popular actor playing in the western metropolis, which is certainly a well deserved tribute to a clean cut young player. Mr. Dalbrock is considered one of the handsomest actors on the American stage today. Charlevoix Theatre Saturday, Nov. 13.

—Spawn gathering here and at Beaver Island is quite successful. Fully 2,000,000 trout eggs have been gathered and shipped up to date—a large majority coming from the Island.

—About 1500 tons of beets are in the sheds at the sugar factory. Deliveries have been slow lately on account, but they are coming in faster this week and the force expects to be much busier from now on. The beets are very satisfactory.

—The tug Van Ella, of this port, has been chartered by J. O. Plank to run between Traverse City and Fox Islands until the ice closes up the bay. Capt. Peter McCafferty and Engineer John Kelly, now of the tug Taylor, will take the Van Ella, the Taylor having laid up.

—It would make any Northern Michigander proud and cause his mouth to water could he see the fruit display at Traverse City being prepared for the Chicago exhibit. Although the exhibit will officially represent western Michigan, most of it is the product of northern Michigan. The fruit exhibit is not yet in, but already it will open the eyes of those of more southern climes who think California and Oregon fruit is the only thing.

—Much of the most successful dramas is so. A Daughter's Devotion," which is seen at Charlevoix Theatre Saturday, Nov. 13. It is not often that theatregoers are so opportunity to witness such a high class performance at popular prices; as this company is one of the best on tour this season. Mason, supported by a capable company, including Miss Edith Clark, Marjorie Allyn, May Cecille Kennedy, Sidney Dalbrock, Donald Hunter, Robert Perry, John Duran, James Wilke and others.

—It is a question whether roads of limestone are stable enough to warrant building them," said Highway Commissioner Foy in speaking of the matter of road building in Michigan. "I begin to think that unless hard wood can be secured, the gravel road is the best, and that ultimately we should have to endeavor to bring down the trap rock from the upper peninsula for road building. You know this road construction is somewhat experimental yet, and I do not think the limestone roads are stand standing the wear the way they should. We could use the convicts at Marquette to get the stone out if we can get it transported down here for a reasonable price and furnish it at cost." Road building is growing in popularity all over the state," continued Mr. Foy. —The Congregationalists will hold a silver social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholls Friday evening of this week. The social is for the purpose of providing silver for the dining service of the church and a free will offering will be received.

—Judge Mayne lectured before the Central Lake Church club last Tuesday evening on "The Law and the Law Breaker." The Judge is now at Leland holding an adjourned term of court to try the water power dam case and is agitating that section of country.

—County fairs in the "dry" counties this year have scored unprecedented success in attendance, exhibits and finances. Of course this may not be due to the fact that the counties had no saloons, but if the fair in any "dry" county had proved a failure, the "wets" would have been prompt and loud in their claim that such a condition was due to local option, and the daily press would have heralded the news with scare heads.—Moderator Topics.

THE GRANGERS

Five Hundred of Them Will Go To Traverse City From Charlevoix County.

It is a significant fact in connection with the general campaign for the advertisement of the northern part of western Michigan, says the Boyne Journal, that the third session of the Michigan state grange is to be held at Traverse City. For thirty six years the meetings of this organization have been held in the larger cities in the southern part of the state. The people of thirty six years ago, however, was broken and the people of the Grand Traverse region are preparing to prove to those who will visit them from the south that the grangers of northwestern Michigan are as interpreting as any in the country, and coming second to none as an agricultural and horticultural section.

The first proposition is to be made clear by the matting of plans for the largest and most successful state session ever held. Among the new features to be introduced will be that of the decoration of the convention hall with products of the farm.

The wonderful drawing power of our agricultural lands is to be demonstrated by a collection of photographs of farms and orchards and samples of products of the soil. The just now are the grangers have been securing farm and orchard and now they are collecting the best that their fellows have produced in order to make a showing that will surprise the delegates from the southern counties.

The grangers of Charlevoix county are arranging for a special county exhibit and they have sent out word that they will be at the state meeting 500 strong to look up their exhibit and to make a Charlevoix county demonstration.

Traverse City is preparing for the reception of 2,000 visitors for grange week. She expects to do her best toward making the strangers believe that they are in the land of milk and honey. It is possible the stangers will be so impressed that they will return to their homes and give glowing accounts of the wonderful land that they have visited and the right royal good people that they met.

Obituary.

Following a severe operation, Mrs. William H. Dreimer, of Charlevoix, died on Friday last at Mercy Hospital in Cadillac. Mrs. Dreimer was before Miss Miss Mabel C. Kopf, daughter of Mr. John Kopf of Susan Lake, this county, was a teacher of ability and popular young woman, well known in Charlevoix for her sweetness of character and a friend of every unfortunate ability which she has expressed during several seasons as head of the home keeping department of the Chicago Club, to the great satisfaction of the management and members.

Mrs. Dreimer's remains were brought to Charlevoix from the house of her sister, Mrs. James A. Washburn, of Petoskey, and funeral was held here on Monday at the house of Mr. James Gaskin, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Pattinson, pastor of the Congregational Church. Many flowers that covered the casket came from loving friends and relatives, among the offerings being beautiful tributes from the Chicago Club, Mr. Nathan Follett of Pittsburg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Noble of Hotel Dalton and others. Interment was at Charlevoix cemetery.

Mrs. Dreimer is survived by her husband and father and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. James A. Washburn of Petoskey, Mrs. James Moran of Traverse City, Mrs. Frank Kopf of Chicago, Mrs. George Frowfelder of Greenville, Mrs. Andrew Struthers of Hayes, Mr. George Kopf of Battle Creek, Mr. John Kopf Jr. of Boyne City.

CARE OF FRUIT TREES.

Some Hints That Are Of Value To The Local Fruit Growers.

Although it will be some time before the fruit trees will be in danger from attacks by rabbits and mice it is time that protection against the rodents be given consideration since, if it is necessary to send for protectors, by the time they are received the danger will be with us. There are many home made remedies that are effectual. The mounding of earth about the base of the trunks is all that many of the most advanced growers provide. Others feel that the little extra cost of protectors and the short time required to put them on is not to be compared with the insurance that their trees get thereby. This, of course, will be influenced by the number of the pests in the different locations, as in some places the danger is not large and the wonderful stories that are all that could be asked, while in other localities where the animals are plentiful, or the sources of food for them are small, the danger is multiplied and the extra precautions are required. Usually where the protectors are used mounds are also provided as the shedding of water away from the crown of the tree is advantageous. The temptation to use tars, and oils on the bodies of the trees should be discouraged as the material has been tried out and the person is aware of what he is doing, for oils and tars are often source detrimental to the trees than the rabbits and mice, the substance penetrating to the growing parts, killing the tissue and destroying the trees. The writer has seen a young orchard in which a large number of the trees had been killed by the application of a coal tar to the trunks of the trees. There was no trouble from rabbits or mice, to be sure, but the remedy did many times the damage the animals could have done.—Michigan Farmer.

CHAPTER XV.

During several months of loneliness and sorrow a great change had been taking place in the mind of Priscilla, of which she scarcely vaguely comprehended. The strife which she had been undergoing began at last to be in some measure silenced.

Her vital force became depleted, her step grew feeble, the light died out of her eyes and deepened and crept therein about her room. The determinedness which she had at first manifested was now in her apart slowly edged undoubtedly to the apart slowly edged away. She was, other, at a moment, quite cheerful, and at another, she was heart-yearned unspeakably for the touch of her mother's hand. For the relaxes of her life, for the comfort of his presence.

This longing increased with every day, and the other, spiritual, beneficial, seemingly, undoubted her and all else, was overwhelmed in those feelings which never left her, yet, in fact, when life's necessity of the mind, was at all their focused point, all else was lost in the vague, indefinite, troubled, but a single passionate desire to look once upon her face to be allowed twice to look her inner sister in her home, and to be allowed to look in his sad and sick-in-sorrow.

It was just a period in her journey from New Orleans to Cincinnati. In those days, and in the mind of the young girl, the consolation of the world was, in her journey, to have begun to burn in her veins, she struggled with terror not her journey, and yet her fever she reached her journey's end. It was a little, quaint, old-fashioned place, straight, but that in so short time, in her fever, it was to her, in her fever, in her journey, wondrously her strength in the place, the calm breezes of the place, her were spinned with emotion. His sofa, the place, the place, the place, sleeper, and her tears dropped silently on the hand which she held in her hand.

For many days Priscilla's life hung in the balance, her spirit hovering inevitably about the portal, and it was only have that wound in, and it was only have that wound in, to be to life.

When at length, through careful nursing, she really recovered from the unfortunate sickness, she opened her eyes upon the walls of a little chamber that seemed familiar, as she looked into the living room of the Quaker house.

The silence was suddenly broken by a voice feeble and tremulous, but very musical and sweet. It was Priscilla, who glad around her in feeble, small and sweet in tones alone, "Where am I?"

Hannah was by her side in an instant, and taking the thin fingers in her strong hands, replied, "Thee is among friends."

Priscilla looked long into the calm face above her, and gathered reassurance; but her memory did not at once return.

"Have I ever been in this place before? Have I ever seen your face? Has something happened? Tell me!" she continued, raising with a frown into the calm eyes that looking down into her.

It almost tell-tales whether thee has ever seen us before, or few days that we have had our friends." said Hannah, in order the time, and she, and smiling.

Priscilla's eyes wandered about the room cautiously for a moment, and then more, and remembrance of the past came back.

"Did I come home in a great storm? she asked.

"Yes, did, indeed. The night was wild and cold."

"Did I come on the threshold?"

"Upon the very threshold, and let in much. Tell me, thee, because it thee had fallen at the gate or in the path, we should never have thought it so."

Priscilla struggled to a sitting posture, and, rather nervously, with her wide open eyes upon therefore and noticed, pathetically, "Where is her father? Does he know who thee means, said Deborah, leaning her head on her hand, and trying gently to push her back upon her pillow.

"Yes," she continued, "that I tell you I know, for it is one to me I know of if I see thee, Priscilla."

"I do not know my love," said Deborah, and, as she spoke, her face grew full of tenderness, "I do not know, I do not know, I do not know."

"Why, why I stay a little while?" it was quiet and tranquil here. I feel like a tired bird that has found a place for a nest. Tell me, Deborah, will your husband say, when he hears thee tell of me?"

"Thee need not be troubled about that, Priscilla, for we have sent upon to those who labor and are weary, and, if thee wishes, thee may be my fellower in labor, Priscilla. It was thee that I spoke of in my story."

"Then you knew me?"

"Yes, I knew thee."

"Then I will stay, oh, I will stay a little while, if thee wishes me to stay." Priscilla sank her head back upon the pillow and closed her eyes, the smile of genuine happiness lit up her face.

"Yes, who knows?" said Deborah, gently, as she rested her head upon her pillow, leaning the lovelid fall asleep again.

CHAPTER XVI.

In due time the news of the return of Deborah, the city of New York, and the heavy rumors of her present illness, reached and unknown into the metropolis of the New World.

With an instinct common to all survivors, he made his way to the Bowery. Amid its perpetual excitement, and boundless opportunities for adventure, David resumed the habits formed during that period of life upon which the doors had now closed. His reputation was followed him, and the new scenes, the physical restoration during the long voyage, the necessity of maintaining his fame, all conspired to help him take a place in the front rank of the devotees of the gambling game.

He did his best to enter into this new life with enthusiasm, but it was no power to banish or even to allay his grief. He therefore spent much of his time in wandering about among the wonders of the swiftly-growing city, standing by busy streets, her crowded wharfs, her libraries, museums and parks. This method pursuing frequently diverted his thoughts from that—haunted him which he ever returned, and which they were constantly coming deeper and deeper, and so helped him to accomplish the one aim of his wretched life, which was to become even for a single moment oblivious of himself and of memory.

Among the many experiments he had made in that realm of life to which his chose and his crime had constrained him, a single person had awakened in his inner emotions of interest and regard. There was in that circle of silent, terrible, remorseless energies of society, a young man whose classical face, exquisite manners, and varied accomplishments, at times apart from all the others. He was a young man of fortune, of leisure, unremunerative and unappropriated.

From the time of their first meeting he had treated David in an exceptional manner. In unobtrusive ways he had proffered many delicate advances of friendship, and had many times gone before the two boys, suspicious and restricted, and offered their hearts to the service of informal partnership and were living in common apartments. Were living in common apartments. Were living in common apartments.

At Two-Bar Ranch

By DONALD ALLEN

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

A manager, a housekeeper, a cook and twenty-six cowboys made up the complement at the Two-Bar ranch, and every one assumed that the manager was laboring under suppressed excitement. No orders had been promulgated, but the Saturday afternoon had been devoted by unanimous consent toward washing up, combing hair and shaving and white shirts and red neckties. Two weeks previously old Jim Brand, foreman, who was supposed to be deep in the confidence of the manager, had said to the storekeeper on Lame Calf creek:

"As to how?"

"That alone stinks."

"Nothing to brag of."

"Going to have a typewriting machine."

"Lord of lollies you can!"

"And now hold your breath, you old sensation, when I tell you the rest. We're going to have a girl to run the machine!"

"Also!"

"It's a fact. Coming from Chicago. Big curly crowd fightings. Black eyes too, I guess, stenographer and typewriter." Jim paused for a hundred miles around his gut one Old Two-Bar he shed on the prairie.

"Well?" spoke the storekeeper after a big pause.

"Well, I'm here to give you a tip. If you haven't got two chairs within shifts in stock, send for them quickest time thinkable. Send for red neckties. Send for silk handkerchiefs. Send for red cloth collars, and send for perfumery and toilet soap."

"Why?"

"Why, you galoot? Because every man on our ranch is going to come hoping over here and inquire for three very thinnes and don't going to waste silent drinks either. Because why? Because cause there is going to be a love with that girl before she gets within a mile of the ranch and is going to throw up and let her was what a Jim dandy he is. There can't but one more name for her, and the trial of the place will shed him."

It was a fin. The shirts and other things were used for, and the boys loped over. Forty-nine cent white shirts went for a dollar and a half and no questions asked. Perfumery and soap of all sorts with a free market, and neckties were in great demand.

And now the great day had finally arrived. Old Two-Bar was sent over to be refitted with the hardwood to bring back the young women and her train. Every man had contributed to make the trip and when Old Two had been selected the group gathered around him, and its spokesman said:

"Thirsty as we are, we'll stand on a square deal or blackbird—no fitting or soft talk to get ahead of the rest of us. You've got an old woman down on the Brazos, Jim, and if you don't own up to that girl that you have off canoe your scalp."

Four hours later the hardwood was slashed with a hoodlum. Fifteen minutes after the announcement it could be made out with the naked eye. While it was still a mile away the cowboys formed in double line along the road to the house. At half a mile the remuda was halted and pulled out their alder frouns. At twenty rods their red neckties blo-lad furiously. And now old Tom, barking the dignity of a human arsenal, drove the vehicle between the lines, and the veiled lady bowed right and left as every man took his hand and scraped his right foot. Nothing further could have been desired by the most critical.

"And what does she look like?" was demanded of Old Tom as he reached the stables, where they waited for him.

"Boys, she's cute. She's a rocker. She's going to set hearts afire and cause forty different murders. You might just as well go home conveniences and resolve that every galoot of you is going to fall head over heels in love with her at first sight."

Old Tom's prediction was fulfilled. Every man as he got sight of Miss Glasier fell in love with her so thoughtlessly that it was week checkline kind of in a fortnight there was none at all. Every cowboy on the ranch wanted to sit around looking pretty, and the Chinaman cook didn't have time to wash half the white shirts getting him. Old Tom stormed and the managers complained, but things continued to slide and screw. Few of the men could make an around at the office. It was only while the typist was waiting out that they had sight of her. Three or four got up the nerve to approach her, and the hearing and laughing of all of them were after they bowed and scraped and cleared their throats and said—

"Good evening, marm. I'm hoping I see you well, marm. I'm hoping that everything agrees to you. I'm hoping you won't mind the galoots a-peeping at you from behind the hitching posts and the stables and showing what their bringing up has been. I'm hoping that you may decide to consider to settle down among us after finding a deserved husband—one perfectly willing to die for you any time of day or night."

And Miss Glasier would smile and blush and reply that she liked the country and the people and the cattle and the wolves and jack rabbits, and the man would back away bowing to the ground to assert to his comrades in waiter that he had made an impression and to be called a liar for the statement.

Cowboys come from other ranches, but were run off as fast as they appeared. Travelers rode out of their way, but were discouraged. At the end of three months the Two-Bar ranch had the reputation of being at home ends, and the manager's quarterly report effected the following reply from eastern stockholders:

"Not at all satisfactory. What is the matter out there?"

"I have a stenographer and typist," was telegraphed back.

"Then discharge or marry her," were the instructions.

The manager was a man of action. He had never discharged a stenographer from his employ, and he was not going to begin then—not if Miss Glasier would accept him and the other alternative. She blushed and said she would, but wanted to go back to Chicago for a couple of weeks to see her mother.

The men got hold of the news an hour later—that is, Old Tom told them generally and collectively that any of them who wanted to kill the target goodby would hit her in the office awaiting them. It was white hot and red neckties again. It was more hair oil and perfumery. They said goodbye to each other, but they read each other's thoughts. If a husband could keep that new girl at Two Bar she should have one. It was Old Tom who fixed them up and sent in the first man. The first man had his speech all ready. So did the second, third and fifth men up to the last, and those speeches were all alike. They began with a bow and a kick and a jump in the throat and proceeded.

"I hasten, mister-I-hasten that you are going away for to dwell in our midst no more."

"Yes, I am going back to Chicago."

"During your stay here, marm, you may have observed—you may have taken notice that I have cast my eyes on you as often as possible, and that in the greatest possible respect. It has been a case of love on my part, and I am now here to offer you my hand and heart and promise to do everything in my power to make you happy. I thought out I'm tender, I ain't edicated, but I'll never go for a divorce."

And the reply each one received was the same—

"I feel honored, but must tell you that I am to marry the manager on my return."

And when the last had filed in and filed out Old Tom suddenly broke forth:

"Now, you crowsnest, lop shouldered, knockkneed gang of galoots, the turtle doves have gut through cooing. Cupid's got a hinkle on him, and if you don't hustle around and bring Two-Bar back to her pinches glory I'll turn loose and bury the whole of you in one grave!"

Knew All Their Tricks.

"Gentlemen," said Frederick the Great, "I am entirely dissatisfied with the cavalry. The regiments are completely out of hand; there is no accuracy, no order, the men ride like tailors. I beg that this may not occur again and that each of you will pay more attention to his duty, but I know how things go on. You think I am not up to your dodges, but I know them all and will recapitulate them.

"When the season for riding drill comes on the cavalry sends for the sergeant major and says: 'I have an appointment this morning at —. Tell the first lieutenant to take the rides.' So the sergeant major goes to the senior subaltern and gives him the message, and the latter says: 'What! The captain will be away? Then I am off hunting. Tell the second lieutenant to take the rides.' And the second lieutenant, who is probably still in bed, says: 'What, both of them away? Then I will stay where I am. I was up till 2 this morning at a dance. Tell the corporal I am ill and he must take the rides.' Finally the corporal reminds 'Look here, sergeant major, what is the good of my sending out there in the cold? You know all about it much better than I do. You go and take them.' And so it goes, and what must be the end of it all? What can I hope for? I am entirely dissatisfied with my army."—History of Frederick the Great.

His Head For Trifles.

They were sitting in the gloaming, planning the to do to the best most, she was planning. George merely listened, pondered, listened and sighed.

"Wish we have one of those lovely velvety Turkey carpets for the dining room, George," she cooed.

"Oh, my pet," he lilted, "what a trouble the crumbs and dirtiness would be on a Turkey carpet. I can't bear the thought of my sweet heart brushing and brushing, and making those dear, sweet little hands rough like the hands of my common housemaid!"

"What a head you have for trifles, dear!" she cooed softly.

"Tell you what we'll do, dear," cackled George, "we'll send for 11 Tails for the Turkey carpet, heads for linoleum."

(Gasp! And the linoleum had it.

"Have money? murmured George as he sighed up the double bended penny. "How lucky it is to have a head for trifles—two heads, in fact!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Bavarian Apple Pie.

One of the most delicious ways to use apples in cookery is in a Bavarian pie. Line a deep dish with pastry, fill it with bread-crumbs and bake it until the pastry is done. Then remove the crumbs for the apples, which have prepared apples and sour and some sliced raisins, sweeten with sugar and flavor with nutmeg and cinnamon. Sprinkle with extra crumbs and bake till it is brown on top and the fruit within is thoroughly cooked. Spread over the top a thin layer of meringue and let it become a light brown in the oven. Set the pie aside to cool before serving.—New York Tribune.

THE HUNCHBACK.

Romance of the Duke de Richelieu and Mlle. de Rochechouart.

The Duke de Richelieu married when seventeen years of age Mlle. de Rochechouart, a little girl of twelve. As was the custom in the eighteenth century, the young bridegroom set out on his travels after the ceremony, and the child wife remained with his relations in Paris. Three years passed, and the duke chose Count de Chiboust, who had received many charming letters and a charming miniature from his wife during his absence, determined to return home.

On his arrival he was met on the grand staircase of the Hotel de Richelieu by his family, and, to his horror, instead of the pretty girl of fifteen that he expected to see, he saw a little hunchback who was none other than his wife. The unhappy young man, who was horror stricken, left Paris that night and for fifteen years remained away.

The poor little wife possessed a beautiful and generous disposition, and, to prevent her being embittered by her husband's behavior, she did her best to prevent any family dissension arising through it and went to live on her estate of Courseulles, near Paris. It is said that she was deeply in love with the duke, and in time the accounts of her unselfishness and devotion to his family so touched her husband that he went to visit her.

The next visit was to many, and this strange couple became fast friends and just before he died the duke contemplated wedding permanently at Courseulles with his wife, from whom he had fled in disgust many years before.—Chicago News.

TRANSPLANTED A POND.

Showing What an Enthusiast Will Do to Have a Garden.

Many a country laborer will do much for the sake of a garden, but few perhaps would be willing to go to such pains in the pursuit of their hobby as did an enthusiastic navvy with whom I met. Hode once came in contact.

This man, having obtained the position of gatekeeper on a railway, found himself in the possession of a barren gravel pit as an appendage for a garden. The dean, who lived the spot next, visited in some twelve months after the man had taken possession, and the sight which met his eyes astonished him.

"Was it a mirage I saw upon the sandy desert? There were vegetables, fruit, bushes and fruit trees, all in vigorous health. There were flowers and the queen flower is her grey."

"Why," I exclaimed, 'what have you done to the gravel pit?"

"Lor' bless yer," he replied, grinning, 'I hadn't been here a fortnight afore I swopped it for a pond."

A further inquiry elicited the fact that this most ardent garden lover had, after an agreement with a neighboring farmer, removed with pick and barrow his sandy stratum to the depth of about three feet and wheeled it to the margin of an old pond, which had been gradually filled up with leaves and silt. The rich, productive mold from the pond he had taken home to his garden, replacing it with gravel and beading as per contract.—Westminster Gazette.

Antiquity of Nicknames.

The origin of the world as well as the exact date of appearance of the custom of "nicknaming" is unknown. Such names are as old at least as the most venerable chronicles, for upon diving into ancient history we have no trouble at all in proving that Pepin was called the "Little Hot" and Sancho "Old Flat Nose." There isn't the least doubt but that many of our surnames came from nicknames applied to our ancestors, such, for instance, as "Debonair," "Operator," "Bright," "Lightfoot," "Walkingshaw," "Rob Roy," "Longsword," "Longfellow," etc. Julius Cæsar was popularly styled "Baldhead," and even the third Essex was said to have been known by an Egyptian word which signifies "Hungry." No one has been able to escape the blighting or benign influence of the nickname. Kings, queens, philosophers, divines, statesmen, as well as many other eminent persons have been made to suffer or suffer by having some appropriate or ridiculous sobriquet bestowed upon them.

How to Make Cookies.

If your family bankers after small cakes it will be found to be a paying investment to have special baking sheets made. Have your tinner cut and rivet together a sheet of tin turned up about a quarter of an inch or less. These should just fit the oven, but must not be so tight as to stick. Two or three of such sheets will suffice for a good sized baking, and there is no time lost wrapping cones to regions for a second lot. The tin also makes it easier to slip a knife under and slip the cake from the pan. For chocolate drops or cookies patterned papers can be used on the sheets.

I Remember.

I remember. I remember the house where I was born; the voice of that last bellowed forth to rouse me every morn; the glade that I always had to pass when winter breezes blew to clear the sidewalk of the snow, the chores I had to do. I remember, I remember, the old time days in school, the licklings I always got for breaking some school rule; the moonlight nights I used to go out in the old bob sleigh and hug and kiss the pretty girls beneath the robes and lap. I remember, I remember, oh, no, I'm not forget; I'd like to wander back again to those old days, you bet.—Los Angeles Express.

Just a Ruse.

"Will you take something to drink?" "With pleasure."

The photograph was taken, and the sitter said, "But what about that little fortnition?"

"Oh, sir, that is just a trade ruse of mine to give a natural and interested expression to the face."—London Answers.

BANK SHORTAGE IS GROWING.

$800,000 Found to Have Been Deposited in Mineral Point.

The deposits in the First National Bank of Mineral Point, Wis., should have been given as $700,000 instead of $570,000. This was the statement made by R. W. Goodhart, special bank examiner, who discovered the defalcations of Phil Allen Jr., and, on the failure of the directors to come to the rescue, closed the bank. Mr. Goodhart was on his way Monday to appear before the grand jury in La Crosse. It is expected even after his appearance before the jury an indictment will be found against Allen.

Mr. Goodhart's statement that there were several hundred thousand dollars more of deposits in the bank than was given on the books was based on the discovery of bank receipts given for money deposited with Allen, and for which the bank is liable. They aggregate $200,000 and are still coming in.

Examiner Goodhart says the defalcation was discovered when he checked Allen with trying to use some with forged signatures. The bank was then examined by Mr. Goodhart, who found that he was a defaulter and forger. Before the interview closed Goodhart had discovered forgery in forged paper that Allen admitted he says, was forged.

GREEK REVOLT ENDED.

Fleet of Four British War Vessels Arrives at Southern Port.

Four British war ships have arrived at Piraeus, near Piraeus, Greece, the capital, the ships being at least, is at an end. The last of the naval mutiny, which for 18 months offers has been received, the torpedo boat destroyer Velos is sailing to the port of the other mutineers, Lieutenant Theodios, here who was the leader in the revolt movement, is still at large.

There is a general belief that the government will consider the escape of Theodios and his companions in order to avoid the embarrassment their capture would entail, since the government would not venture to execute them because they are connected with the highest families in Greece. The cabinet could also decide to try the other mutineers in the ordinary courts.

All the newspapers condemn the mutiny and demand exemplary punishment of the ringleaders. Several of those closely identified with the political situation do not, however, conceal their apprehensions concerning the future. Some think the only solution of the crisis is for the king to invite the military league to form a cabinet.

CRAFT OF PRESIDENT TAFT IS BEHINDHAND

IS WELCOMED AT VICKSBURG

Other Officials Take to Railroad and Beat Chief Executive to Mississippi City.

President Taft and his party moved on Vicksburg Wednesday afternoon and water. The executive steamed in at night several hours behind time and found that his escort of thirty-two, Senators and Congressmen had taken him in by the base ruse of taking the railroad.

When the Gleander whistled for the Yazoo Canal it was 9:30 o'clock at night, but as the President slighted from the vessel half an hour later he found the steep streets of Vicksburg filled with people who had been waiting since early afternoon. Mr. Taft made a brief speech in which he did not refer to water ways, and then went to the public dinner which had been waiting for three hours. The President left on the Gleander at 11:35 p. m. for Natchez.

When the sailing orders were changed the previous night and each boat was told to stick along at fast as it could, the days of steamboat racing on the Mississippi were suddenly revived. Each boat tried to crowd as much out of his boiler as he could, and the smoke spouted from the stacks as the boats flew along. The state fish boat Illinois, commanded by Captain Nat Cohen, showing a clean pair of heels to the others and easily followed close astern of the Gleander, the President's craft.

When the Governors and other dignitaries woke up Thursday morning and peeled over the rail they discovered that they were left hopelessly behind. It looked as if they would reach Vicksburg long after the President had left the town. There was much pacing of the officers of the Lake-to-the-Gulf Deep Water Way Association and of the Business Men's League of St. Louis, under whose auspices the Civic trip is being given, came forward with explanations that they were not responsible for the change in sailing orders.

In order that the Governors and other honored guests might not be deprived of the trip over the battlefield and through the national cemetery, which had been looked forward to as one of the big features of the voyage, President Smith of the Business Men's League sent the steamer Alton ahead to Greenville to charter a special train. Shortly after noon the boat that had been left at the past drew up at the river's edge at Greenville and disgorged more celebrities than that city had even seen before.

While the difficulties of getting to Vicksburg appeared to chase water way talk to the woods for the time being they have given the traveling public a wholesome object lesson of the difficulties navigating the Mississippi in the present unimproved condition. It took the President's boat, the Gleander, one of the fastest on the river, over twice as long to get from Greenville by river as it did the others by rails, and at that the train did not time the rails by its speed.

FOOTBALL KILLS THREE.

West Point Schedule Called Off After Death of Cadet.

Football caused three more deaths Saturday in the United States, making a total of eleven for the season of 1909. George A. Byrne, the West Point cadet who was injured Saturday in the game with Harvard, succumbed early Monday morning. Col. Hugh L. Scott, superintendent of the military academy, announced that there would be no more football at West Point this year. The other victims were Hoy Ludwick, an Indian boy 19 years old, playing on the second eleven of the Carlisle team, who died at Dodge City of Shoemadosh, Pa., on Thanksgiving day, and Ernest Allen, a substitute player on the team of the Medicine College at Philadelphia. Syracuse's injury was received in a game with Dickinson, Nov. and he died at Easton City.

WANTED—A DEEP WATERWAY.

GENERAL O. O. HOWARD DEAD.

Last of Union Commanders of Civil War Succumbs to Heart Disease.

General Oliver O. Howard, last of the Union commanders of the Civil War, died at his home in Burlington, Vt., Tuesday night. Heart disease was given as the cause of the sound and dirt death. He was 79 years old.

The previous week General Howard was in Atlanta delivering his lecture on "Abraham Lincoln." His last public appearance was at London on Sunday night. Monday he returned to his home in Burlington and was approved by in his usual good health. Tuesday night, while sitting in a chair at his home, he was attacked by heart disease and was dead when a physician reached the house.

Including General Howard's services in the Indian wars he was probably the more engagements than any other officer in the United States army. General Howard, besides having been an able and efficient commanding officer who had the friendship and confidence of Lincoln, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan, was known as the religious general. He was known in European army circles as "The Havelock of America."

In 1865 General Howard was appointed head of the Freedman's bureau, various societies having been organized under this name to help the emancipated negroes. He established schools of general learning and also industrial schools during the years he continued at the head of the bureau. He received the thanks of Congress for his work. He was four colleges and of late years, since he retired from active work, wrote books. He was also a writer of magazine articles on military subjects and addressed many religious meetings.

NEW ENGLAND ROARS WELCOME TO TAFT

The Deep Waterways Convention Opens with the President as Headliner.

OTHER BIG ONES ARE PRESENT

To the roar of guns from the warships at anchor in substitute, salute of the deafening shrieks of sirens, the clanging of bells and the shrill cheers of one hundred enthusiastic citizens who lined the banks of the Mississippi, the President and suite landed yesterday in the enthusiasm of the throng, turning now and then to shake hands and lift his hat. As the salute guns of the battleship Mississippi ceased firing the band blew up the stirring strains of Sousa's Marshall in command of the occasion, the President stepped from the wonder rounded to and crept up to the wharf at the foot of Canal street. "That's the President," the people cheered, "remarked the pilot, "we have now proved to him that we are alive as" A moment later the reception committee was on board and the President was swept off his feet.

The delay in the arrival of President Taft was due to the delay in the starting of the parade, postponed the opening session of the Waterways convention. But as soon as President Wetlein's gavel fell the preparatory program moved with celerity. Following Mayor Behrman's address of welcome, William H. Wheeler, president of the water ways association, delivered his annual address, immediately following came the appointment of committees, the address of the secretary, F. W. Stone and the introduction of resolutions, followed by an adjournment until the afternoon, when Mr. Taft addressed the convention.

$5,000,000 LOSS IN STORM.

Two Known to Have Perished at Result of Cloudburst in Mexico.

Property damage estimated at $5,000,000 was the result of a cloudburst in the state of Jalisco, Mexico, Sunday. Following a week of days of incessant rain rivers are out of their banks, towns are inundated, thousands are homeless, and no relief is in sight.

From north to south, extending across the State from the Mexicanas and the Grijalva rivers, while that the two mines after forking near Ihilinguillo to the banks of the Lerma which, which for a short distance marks the boundary between Chiapas and Guatemala the country is a waste. Only the high mountain ranges and plateau farms escaped the onslaught of the waters.

Five hundred families are homeless in the city of Jalisco alone, three cities and towns inundated are Hunitlan, Tamazula, Tepic, Ixtlan, Tepic, Tlaxpa, Santa Rosa, and a number of smaller villages along the New Apaqua River, while on the south border of the State of Jalisco, Sahuayo, Cuitzeo, Tuxpan, and Santa Rosa, in the valley of the Tomatlata River, are badly damaged.

Kansas Man Tells of Triple Murder as Strange Fever Is Received.

While James McIlshaw was sitting in the sheriff's office in Kansas City, Kan., telling how he murdered his two sisters and his brother-in-law, Frank Lynch, a letter was delivered to the county prosecutor which advanced the theory that McIlshaw is a liar. The letter was dated Oct. 25 and signed L. Mc. Tuesday, Oct. 26, it was pretty nearly the exact details confessed by McIlshaw. Several of the statements in the letter were in confirmation to his confession James McIlshaw was arrested Oct. 26 by Deputy Sheriff Joseph Taggart, prosecuting attorney of Wyandotte County, and the charges would be placed only against James.

The gross earnings were $26,111,000 and the operating expenses were $16,304,000.

CHICAGO.

The weekly review of Chicago trade, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says: Favorable developments are sustained in the flow of new demands for raw and finished products, and in the high aggregate of solvent payments through the banks and increasing activity of money for manufacturing and mercantile purposes, which impact further firmness to current prices. A healthy situation in commercial credits is indicated by lower failure totals. Conditions generally favored wider activity, and with the same settled weather movements in grain, live stock, factory outputs and general merchandise became heavier. The markets for cotton materials reflect unusual absorption, and this cause increased efforts to accumulate supplies for the winter consumption.

Retail trade here and at the interior broadens under seasonable weather influences and strong demand for necessaries. Satisfactory mail and road orders maintain a good volume of business. Jobbers have benefited from dry and fancy goods, holiday novelties, footwear, clothing and food products.

Bank clearings, $263,095,675, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 24.7 per cent, and compare with $236,701,875 in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 21, against 14 last week, 45 in 1908, and 27 in 1907. These will probably be the smallest number of any week in 1908, and 13 in 1908, and 8 in 1907.

NEW YORK.

Trade as a whole is good, or better, the former so, at least, hardly suffering to characterize the buoyancy and health of business shown in many lines. Industry, in turn, responds with advice of full manufacturing of goods. Favorable to the trade, and general reports of an insufficiency of skillful help, and of increased wages. Together the situation is, all things considered, a very satisfactory one and the rate of improvement in the late months of the year promises to place 1909 ahead of the best of the last five years of prosperity.

Failures in this region announce shorter lines in operation, the coarser products showing the most strain. Iron and steel products are holding to large volume, though some advices of ease in pig iron are noted.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with Oct. 22 were 221, as against 214 last week, 241 in the like week of 1908, 222 in 1907, 189 in 1906, and 160 in 1905.

Business failures in Canada for the week numbered 24, which compares with 20 last week and 22 in the same week of 1908.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

George Ball, 85, ex postmaster of Traverse City, died suddenly Wednesday of last week. He is the father of Mrs. Julius Hannah.

The northern tier of townships in Manistee county talk of seceding and attaching themselves to Benzie county owing to dissatisfaction over tax valuation.

E. H. Harris has sold his stock of general merchandise at Ellsworth to Delpenhorst & Westrate, from Zeeland and Grand Rapids respectively. Mr. Harris will resign the postoffice about January 1, and will then devote his time exclusively to his farm and the duties of the probate office.

Boyne Journal: The boys at the Beulah Home are busy these days breaking ground and clearing up the lake front for the purpose of making a park for the Home. The Beulah Home owns the property fronting on the lake and will plant it with Carolina poplars and otherwise make the plot look as inviting as possible. They also expect to set out about 500 cherry trees on the farm next spring.

Traverse City Eagle: Frank J. Carlin, who for the past 12 years has been purser of the steamer Manitou and for the past few weeks has been in the head office of the Northern Michigan Transportation company, left this morning for Chicago, where he will finish the navigation season in the main offices of the company. About the first of December he will leave for Hot Springs, Ark., where he has accepted a position as cashier of the Arlington hotel, one of the largest hotels of that city.

Lake Linden Herald: The Board of State Park Commissioners met at Detroit last Friday and appointed Postmaster F. A. Kenyon as superintendent of the State Park at Mackinac Island. The appointment was a surprise to Mr. Kenyon who was not an applicant and who is at present undecided as to whether he wishes to take up the work or not. Ira A. Adams of Bellaire, chairman of the commission, recommended the appointment. The office has a salary of $1500 with house rent.

No Good for Charity.

"My good man" said the parson, "can you give me anything in the line of groceries as a contribution to the Woman's Missionary society? You see, we have done good work among the poor people of this section, and, as there are still many hungry mouths to feed, I wish you would try and help us out."

The big Teuton strolled a moment and replied: "Vell, I tell you, dot I know is something gut; but, you see, de only times vot I sell here is gut-natured goods, so dey wut be no gut for charity."

The minister went out the door after recovering from the shock, and perhaps is still wondering why gut natured goods are not to be dispensed to charity workers.—Philadelphia Times.

Great Soldier's Quick Thought.

Once during the iron Duke's campaign in the Peninsula it happened that Gen. Picton's dispositions for receiving the assault of Marshal Soult displeased him. The danger threatened from in front, and the difficulty lay in delaying the attack until Wellington could effect the change he wished. He was, as usual, equal to the occasion. Waving his hat in the air, he galloped to the front of a regiment as if he meant to order a charge. The whole of Picton's line cheered tumultuously, and as the rear died away Wellington was heard to remark, half to himself, "Thank God, I have got a leader, and will not attack in force without ascertaining the meaning of these cheers. They will leave time for the 5th division to come up, and we shall beat him." This was exactly what happened, and Soult sustained a bloody repulse where he might have won an easy victory.

Football.

After all their hopes and a plan into the alumni were forced to let their younger foes put one over on them saturday to the time of 5 to 0, in the most interesting game played here this season. With all their weight and knowledge of the game, Wilkins protegee simply outclassed their opponents, especially in knowing the new game. Lack of training and practice were the causes of the defeat for no team can play a fast game without these.

The first half was started by the high school kicking off. It took just twelve minutes for a touchdown to be just over and that was by Carey. By the way, it might be added that Carey played the game of his life and time after time went through the alumni's line for gains. Nothing else unusual happened in the first half. The high school played for their opponents wind and they got it. Full one to kick goal left the score at live.

Both teams started the second half by playing real football. Durgan was probably in evidence because of his playing as was also Wallace, who showed up well, especially in quarter back runs. Hull played good, as did the team as a whole, especially on defensive. This was shown in the second half when the alumni had worked the ball up to within one yard of their goal, but that was as far as they got. The ball was lost on downs and the high school quickly got out of danger by punting. This was the only time that the goal was in danger. Almost we practiced five yards for off side playing.

With five more minutes to play the high school had the ball within inches of their line and it looked very much like another touchdown but this was not to be, for soon the ball was slowly down the field and all hopes faded.

Bedford started once for a jaunt up the field for a touchdown, but all were not in favor of this and he was tackled much to his sorrow after he had traversed 15 yards. No scores were made in this half and the high school had to be satisfied with five. The half closed with the ball on the alumni's thirty yard line.

Levinson, Campbell, Miller and Bedford played well for the alumni and in fact all the back field showed they knew how to play ball.

Next Saturday comes the game with East Jordan. If the team can win this game along with the one with Traverse City, it can be ranked among the best teams in this section of the state although it has been defeated before this.

It is the boast of East Jordan that they are coming over with the intention of teaching the boys here a few things," but according to dope all the fellows are game enough to learn and when Saturday p. m. comes it is safe to say that East Jordan will have to play a little better ball than Charlevoix does before her boast comes true.

Elk Rapids Progress: It was a southern Michigan fruit grower—one from the "belt"—who said to us one day this week, "Give me 30 acres of good land, such as can be found in Milton, well set to choice varieties of apples in bearing, and let me care for the trees as I do my orchard down south, and with the favorable weather and almost certain crops of this section I could cuss mighty near owning the back twelve a few years." That's the opinion outsiders who visit this section take away with them.

Mrs. Vincent, living near Rapid City, an aged lady who had passed her 101st birthday, was buried Wednesday, her funeral services being conducted by Elder Joseph Haycraft, the "hog preacher." A 12-year old boy preached the funeral sermon for a person 101 years old.

The N. M. Newspaper Club Meeting at Manistee.

It was a lively clip that the Manistee Commercial club fed the members of the Northern Michigan Press club at the salt city last Thursday and Friday.

The gathering itself was a most profitable and interesting one, in both social and business features. The boys learned much from each other, and much in a general way that was beneficial.

The Manistee Commercial club, which was the host of the newspaper people, exhibited a sample of hospitality that could only be compared to cold-storage goods, because it was of the character that Manistee always has well preserved in salt for the stranger within her gates. It was unbounded, spontaneous and sincere. From the moment that the scribes arrived at the station until they checked out their baggage, they were the owners in fee simple of Manistee and its lares and penates.

The most of Friday was spent in autos, and the autos had the right of way wherever a press badge was visible to a citizen. The salt blocks, the watch factory, the magnificent iron works, the beautiful streets and palacial residences were all inspected.

The press banquet at the Birlinghan Friday night, with the president of the Commercial club "where McGregor sits"—at the head of the table, was an event that transcended anything of its class that the writer has ever enjoyed on a newspaper occasion save one, and that is the one that Charlevoix gave the Michigan Republican Newspaper Association at the inn several years ago. Local pride is all that compels us to make this exception, and we may be biased. But the Manistee banquet was a "feast of reason and a flow of soul" (pardon us for using that old chestnut) that was educational to every person present save the editors—they "know it all."

The post prandial program we omit, because "we" were in it, and we are modest. Editor Harley, of the Manistee News, a glorious chap with brains, was everywhere present as a personification of hospitality and courtesy.

The club is to have a spring meeting at Elk Rapids, when Editor Geo. W. Perry—who prints one of the best papers in northern Michigan, the Progress, will exhibit himself in a like manner before an admiring confraternity.

What a Citizen Thinks About The Park.

TO THE EDITOR:

"There is nothing romantic or beautiful about it." Such was an expression I heard in regard to our little park.

Then it was said that that it seemed like a waste of the people's money to throw it away on that "worthless plat of ground," as it is not suitable for the purpose for which it is kept. Then the nigger popped his head out in the next sentence. "It should be platted into lots and sold to private parties who would build cottages to rent if not for residences; then the people would be benefitted to the amount of taxes that would be collectable form the improvements."

It is really encouraging to know that we have citizens that are so sincerely interested in the welfare of the city as to figure so close as to look ahead to the great benefit of the taxes from that now worthless piece of ground. Of course they were not considering any benefit that they themselves would receive from the rents they would collect from the cottages they would build just for the accommodation of summer visitors.

It does one good to know that we have people among us with such kindly feeling for our summer visitors. However, though I could see that they had quite a feeling towards a little addition to their pocket supply, neither of the parties who talked in that way ever said anything to help improve that "worthless piece of city property" that they are so anxious to dispose of nor did they ever work an hour to help clear it of the rubbish, nor to protect it from being covered by dirt that in days gone by so often threatened it; but they would quite willingly see it disposed of in a manner that would help them indulge their speculative propensities.

Should that time come they no doubt would see both beauty and romance in it. I am aware that our park does not impress people with the feelings of admiration and wonder as would Central Park of New York or Lincoln Park of Chicago, yet there is that about it that either of those cities would pay thousands of dollars for if it could only be transferred to either of their parks to a man who, on a warm summer day, could sit in the shade of a clump of those natural grown evergreens on the knee of the bluff, or in some of the secluded nook at its base, and then say he could see nothing romantic about it, I would say he was void of all such feeling.

Should he stand on the bluff just where he could see through the tree the sun as he sinks behind the blue expanse, then the pink clouds arise from the deep and spread themselves over the western horizon, then gradually lose their lovely in the cooling shades of night, then say, "I see no beauty in it," I would conclude he had no locality in his soul.

Beauty or romance on that spot of ground is valuable to the city and should not be sold to speculators for any price. It is the only spot where the people can get to the beach without trespassing, and those very people who would sell it sold it to us with the first to say, "you can't go to the beach across my lot."

The hundreds of summer visitors who have been in the habit of going there day after day to picnic would be shut out of their great pleasure.

No, the people should never consent to the sale of that land. They rather should encourage the authorities to make needed improvements on it.

COMPOSED OF MANY ISLANDS.

Monroe County in Florida is Probably the Most Unique in the Whole Country.

Monroe county is the most unique county in the state, if not in the United States. The larger portion of the county is made up of a group of islands or, as they are called, keys, both on the east and west coasts. The only part of Monroe county on the mainland is the Cape Sable country, a peninsula south and east of the United States on the mainland.

The larger portion of this land is what is known as the Everglades, and but a limited number of acres are now under cultivation. What effect the proposed drainage of the Everglades will have in Monroe county is not known, but it is doubtful if any large areas will be drained, because of the flatness of the country and being so near sea level. In the vicinity of Cape Sable there are large bodies of rich alluvial land and a considerable quantity has been under cultivation for several years past.

All kinds of tropical and semi-tropical fruit trees grow luxuriantly on the keys and bear full crops of fruit each year. Every key is surrounded with water and the great portion of them have clean white sand beaches with bluffs varying in height above high water mark. All of these building sites are in full view of either the ocean, gulf or bays.—Jacksonville Times-Union.

—Two excellent clubbing offers—the SENTINEL and the Grand Rapids Daily Press for $3.00, and the SENTINEL and New York Weekly Tribune-Farmer for $2.00. This offer is only for new subscribers or those who pay one full year in advance. This is a good opportunity to secure plenty of winter reading.

—The potato market is phenomenally dull, few buyers being in the city. Local buyers are paying from 20 to 25c, the former price ruling. There seems to be no immediate prospect of improvement. Thousands of bushels will be buried for spring resurrection when the horn blows, provided it blows loud enough. As a matter of fact, the potato market looks gloomy.

—D. S. Payton, Charlevoix county director of the West Michigan Development Bureau, leaves today for Chicago on business connected with the county fruit exhibit in the Chicago exposition building. He will be absent ten days. While in Traverse City lately we learned from authoritive sources that Mr. Payton is considered one of the liveliest and most effective propositions in the working force of the Bureau.

—The sugar beets are about all out of the ground and they are coming into the sheds in great volume. About 5,000 tons are now in. The factory began operating Tuesday morning, and the "campaign" is now fairly on. The first product will come out about Saturday. Yield and tests are satisfactory to all concerned.

—An Owosso Special says: William H. Lyon was to have been married today. The morning he went down to the county clerk's office and procured two licenses, one to get married, the other to hunt deer. On a bet, it is said, that when he took his prospective bride to the parson, Rev. C. Hanks, he presented the hunting license to him, and the trick remained undiscovered until after the enduring knot was firmly tied. He later exchanged papers with the embarrassed clergyman and left with his bride for a honeymoon trip to the north woods.

—A lively bunch of young people from this place had a party this week at the Partridge residence on the north side, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barlow and Dr. and Mrs. J. Howard. The party consists of Misses Mattie Bedford, Marion Harris, Mary Kitchler, Sarah Leyhouse, Ruby Emory, Magdeline Stallon, Grace Gregory, and Messrs Joe Bulson, Jesse Vandermuelen, Richard Jackson, Dr. Harney, Fred Clark, Harry Cook, Harry Dodge, Bryce Levinson. And it is said that the chaperones are as young as the youngest of the outfit when it comes to having a rattling good time.

—The set date for closing the spawn fishing campaign is Saturday of this week, but it may be extended if the desired number of eggs are not secured. Sixty millions trout eggs are the figures chalked down for the season, but up to this writing but about forty millions have been gathered. They go to the Northville hatchery about every day. The query naturally is, what number of these eggs will hatch and, when the young fry is deposited, how many will mature? Sixty million trout eggs! Suppose forty million are hatched, which is a safe proposition. Should forty million fry mature to the dignity of fathead minnoity small would not sell for a cent a pound. But fish fry have enemies that are cannibals. We will assume that twenty millions are destroyed, then twenty million remain. Twenty millions of trout are a lot of fish! Just think of it!

—Speaking of the Manistee press banquet the Elk Rapids Progress warms the cockles of our heart by printing the following: "The last number on the program was a paper by Willard A. Smith of the Charlevoix SENTINEL on Forty Years of Newspaper Work in Northern Michigan." Mr. Smith is the dean of the profession in all that portion of the state north of Ludington county, having worked in Elk Rapids in 1868 and assisted in moving the Traverse Bay Eagle to Traverse City, and published an odd hand press the first copy of the Eagle in that place. Forty one years ago, before Charlevoix county was organized, and while all north of Antrim was attached to Emmet county, he founded the Charlevoix SENTINEL, which has kept to this hour conducted that able journal. His fearlessness and independence are proverbial, and his caustic and sparkling articles are admired by the profession. His paper was characteristic of the man, and at the conclusion the effect prayer of everyone present was that he might realize his ambition and record out a full half century of sublime journalistic work on the street that he founded and has seen grow from infancy to robust and vigorous manhood."

ARRESTED IN DETROIT

Chas. E. Turrell Pinched for Stealing Money From Telephone Pay Stations.

The Detective, a journal published for aiding in the identification of criminals, this month publishes a picture and gives an account of the act for which Charles Turrell, alias Watkins, alias Sloeina was arrested in Detroit last month. The picture presents a good likeness of a former Bellaire resident, Charles Turrell, says the Independent, which was quickly indentified by Sheriff Kittle and he at once notified the Detroit police department of the prisoner's name.

It seems that in some manner the person secured a duplicate key to the telephone pay station and whenever an opportunity presented it self would unlock the boxes and appropriate the cash contained therein. The telephone company had been robbed systematically for some months and had detectives put on the case with the result that a person answering to the name of Chas. E. Turrell was caught in the act with his pockets filled with nickels, dimes and quarters.

Reports have come to Bellaire the past several months that Mr. Turrell was in Detroit and that he had a very lucrative position and was doing the best in a financial way that he had ever done. When seen in Detroit a few weeks ago by a Bellairite he was in the company of Jack Johnson, the colored prize fighter, and was out riding with him in his (Johnson's) automobile, and to all appearances Charley had all kinds of money, which he was spending very freely.

Charley Turrell left Bellaire seven years ago, first going south and later back to Charlevoix, where he accepted a position as cashier in a bank, where he worked until about two years ago, when he became involved in a scandal there and left for Detroit. He was never heard from again until last summer, when Sheriff Kittle received word from Chicago to keep watch for him, as he had stolen an automobile. Later the machine was found by the police, badly damaged, and nothing further of this escapade was heard.

THE TEACHERS

Northern Michigan Pedagogues Will Meet at Reed City.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Teachers' association, which will be held at Traverse City November 26 and 27 promises to be the most largely attended of any ever held. George F. Roxbrough Traverse City president of the association is sending out the invitations. The program is as follows:

Friday, General Session—"The Child," Prof. S. B. Laird, department psychology, normal college; "The Rural Teacher," Prof. Ernest Burnham, rural school department, Western normal.

Section Meetings, 3:30. Primary Section—Methods and Materials in Teaching Literature in Primary Grades," Principal Christine M. Keck, Sigsbee school, Grand Rapids; discussion, Rosmond Root, County normal, Cadillac. Grammar and High School Section—"In the High School Fulfilling Its Function—Is It Adapted to Present Day Needs?" Professor Ladell, Ypsilanti, discussion by Superintendent E. C. Hartwell, Petoskey, and Principal John E. Potter, Cadillac. Commissioners' and Rural School Section—"Agriculture in Rural Schools," Professor Burnham, Kalamazoo; discussion, E. S. Jones, Traverse City.

Saturday morning Dr. Winship will speak on "The Rural and Its Critics," followed by Prof. Walter H. French of the M. A. C., subject "Agricultural Education." Department topics of interest will be presented by Hon. L. I. Wright, state superintendent of public instruction.

THE SUGAR BEET

"The Michigan beet sugar crop this year will be a record breaker," said Guy W. Rouse of the Worden Grocer company, who by reason of his business keeps in close touch with the sugar situation.

"The farmers have more beets to market than in former years and the beets are richer in sugar than usual. The weather at the close of the growing season was just right for quality, and the farmers will get more for their beets than in other seasons. When there is much rain toward the end of the growing period the beets run to size, while if the weather is dry the beets grow in saccharine, and this year the latter condition prevailed. I have an idea what the sugar production this year will be it. Michigan, but it will run well up into the millions of pounds. There are 16 factories in the state representing an invested capital of about $15,000,000. The factories are located at Holland, Saginaw, Bay City, Alma, St. Louis, Cheboygan, Charlevoix, Owosso, Lansing, Croswell and three or four other points, and they began their run in the October. The new sugar is already in the market and it is fine quality, but the factories will continue in operation another month or six weeks and not until spring will all the sugar be disposed of.

"Few realize how important this industry is to Michigan," continued Mr. Rouse. "It means from $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 kept in Michigan, which we used to send out to the state for our sugar supply. The Michigan farmers and Michigan labor get the money and there is enough of it to be an important factor in Michigan's prosperity. The profits from the industry are also widely distributed, instead of going into a few pockets. There are, I understand, between 300 and 400 stockholders in the Holland sugar factory and it is the same in many of the other factories. Many of the stockholders are farmers and they not only receive the value of their beets but share in the profits of manufacturing.

"I have visited several of the sugar factories in the state and have noticed that they bring prosperity to the farmers in the vicinity. There is good money in the crop and prosperity to the beet farmers seems to find its first expression in building good roads. Nearly every factory I have visited is a good roads center."

THE SECOND EXHIBIT

Last Saturday's Prizes Were Awarded to a Fine Display of Vegetables.

There were some magnificent samples of vegetables brought in last Saturday to the Retail Merchants' Association exhibit, and the attendance was large all the afternoon. No finer collection of products of the soil, for its size, was ever collected in Michigan.

Best potatoes, Geo. A. Dennis 1st; W. H. McNally 2d; Mrs. Lillie Black 3d.

Carrots, Joe Jackson 1st; Henry Black 2d.

Next Saturday, Nov. 23, is to be devoted to a fowl exhibit.

For the prizes see ad on an inside page. It is hoped that poultry fanciers, both of city and county, will bring in their fine birds.

—A Lansing special says: A conference was held here with Insurance Commissioner J. V. Barry by Rep. H. H. Baker, of Cheboygan; L. W. Orlatt, of Bay City; John F. White, of Coopersville, and J. W. Hutchins, of Hudson, a sub-committee of the executive committee of the state grange, which is preparing plans to organize a farmers' mutual fire insurance society for the benefit of its members. Details of the plans are being considered, in readiness for presentation to the state grange at its meeting in Traverse City this month. If that body approves the organization will be perfected as once as a subsidiary society to the grange. Both men and women are to be furnished insurance.

JOHN M SMYTH DIES.

Prominent in Mercantile and Political Life of Chicago.

John M. Smyth, one of the pioneer merchants of Chicago, died Thursday after a brief illness from bronchial pneumonia. He died at his residence in the heights of John H. Walsh, the former banker and a close business and personal associate of Mr. Smyth was one of the men who made commercial and political history in the early days of Chicago.

JOHN M. SMYTH.

Mr. Smyth lived nearly all his life on the West Side of Chicago, moving from the old homestead on West Adams street, only a few years ago. He was born July 4, 1843, in the storage of an emigrant vessel while ten days from the shores of Ireland. His parents, Michael K. Smyth and Bridget McDonnell Smyth, were coming from Dublin, County Mayo. They settled at Quebec, moved to Montreal and in 1844 came to Chicago. At the time of his death the elder Smyth was clerk of the North Town, but in his prosper ous circumstances. John, who had been attending school, was obliged to leave school to support the family. His first employment was selling newspapers. Later he was in the composing room, advertising solicitor and circulation manager of different papers. He was interested in Chicago in those days.

In 1867 he believed he savings sufficient to start business for himself. With Utica Bourne he purchased a small furniture store at what was then 62 West Madison street. The second place was more than a modest second-hand establishment. Eventually he bought out his partner and in 1880 moved to the present location of the big store, at 701 to 721 West Madison street. He held the school section lease on the entire block on which his establishment stands, in addition to owning considerable valuable real estate on the West Side. Business prospered steadily at this spot until general merchandise was added to the furniture, a mail order branch established and the store became one of the largest in the city. In April, 1891, it was destroyed by fire, but credits and wages for business came in November of that year.

Mr. Smyth married Miss Jane A. Hand June 16, 1875, and there had eight children. He early took up his father's interest in politics. From 1875 to 1882 he was chairman from the old Ninth Ward for several years the secretary of the Republican County Central Committee. In 1884 he managed the Blaine campaign in Chicago.

OUST "BIG 4" TREASURER.

Defeat of C. L. Warriner of Cincinnati May Reach $100,000.

C. L. Warriner, until last Monday treasurer of the Cincinnati offices of the "Big Four" Railroad passenger department, is accused by the Big Four of his accounts. While the amount is not given, it is believed to be somewhat over reach $100,000. Warriner made a statement in the office of Albert H. Harris, vice president of the Big Four and general counsel of the New York Central, in the Grand Central station in New York. Warriner admitted taking money, and it is said director stock gambling had been his rein. For years the accused treasurer was closely questioned by Mr. Harris

OFFICER KILLED BY ROBBER.

Carroll City, Ia., Marshal Victim of One of Two Men He Had Arrested.

Patrick Halton, city marshal of Carroll, Iowa, was shot and killed by one of two robbers he had arrested Tuesday morning near Glidden. Halton had followed the robbers from Carroll, where they entered a house. He had captured the man and while covering them with a revolver turned towards his team. Instantly one of the men shot him in the back. A posse of seventy-five men, with shotgunsand rifles, formed an hour later and captured the robbers in a cornfield.

BUDGET BILL PASSES COMMONS

The budget passed the House of Commons in London Thursday night on the third and final reading, backed by a vote of 379 to 149, and representing the whole strength of the party, including the labor members, and there is great rejoicing among the Liberals. The bill was passed formally on its first reading in the House of Lords Friday, the debate on the second reading, which will determine its fate, beginning Nov. 22.

Robbers Tortured With Fire.

M. J. Wright, farmer, was tortured and robbed within the city limits of Hamilton, Ohio, by two unidentified men. The men angled Wright's team with Utica Bourne to purchase a small furniture store at what was then 62 West Madison street. The second place was more than a modest second-hand establishment. Eventually he bought out his partner and in 1880 moved to the present location of the big store, at 701 to 721 West Madison street. LABOR OFFICIALS DEFEATED.

Case of Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison Decided by Court of Appeals.

The District Court of Appeals in Washington affirmed the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia adjudging President Samuel Gompers, Secretary Frank Morrison and Vice President John Mitchell, of the American Federation of Labor, guilty of contempt of court and imposing a jail sentence in the black Stone and rouge case. Chief Justice Shepard dissented from the opinion of the court on constitutional grounds. The court held that the fundamental issue was whether the constitutional agencies of government should be obeyed or defied. The mere fact that the defendants were the officers of organized labor in America, said the court, lent importance to the cause and added to the gravity of the situation, but it could not be permitted to influence the result.

"If an organization of citizens, however large," the court held, "may disobey the mandates of the court, the same reasoning would render them subject to individual defiance. Both are subject to the law and neither is above it. If a citizen, though he may honestly believe that his rights have been invaded, may elect when and to what extent he will obey the mandates of the court and the requirements of the law as interpreted by the court, instead of pursuing the orderly course of appeal, not only the courts but government itself would become powerless and society would be reduced to a state of anarchy."

AUTO PLUNGES INTO RIVER.

Two Persons, and Perhaps Four Others, Perish in Chicago.

An automobile containing several persons plunged into a bog, perhaps six-plunged into the river at the east approach of the Jackson boulevard bridge in Chicago at 10:10 o'clock Sunday night, while the drive was being operated at a passing steamer. The screaming occupants—at least one of them a woman—were carried southward by the swift current while men on the entire bridge made frantic attempts at rescue. They sank in a frightened silence drown on the water by an eddy alongside, scarcely five feet south of the Van Buren street bridge. A heavy fog was lifting at the time. The board of managers of the society accepted unanimously the report of its committee of arbitrators who had examined the explorer's records and proofs and found them to be corroborative of his claim that he had reached the pole. The board adopted a resolution that the question of "whether or not any explorer reached the north pole prior to 1909 shall be referred to a subcommittee of experts, with authority to call for papers or make such journeys as may be necessary to insure original records. This indicates that the society proposes as soon as possible to pass upon the records of Dr. Cook.

VERDICT OF VOTERS THE COUNTRY OVER

GAYNOR WINNER IN NEW YORK

Important State and municipal elections were held in many sections of the country on Tuesday, early reports on the results of which are briefly stated thus:

New York—Gaynor, Democrat, was elected mayor of New York City Tuesday by a plurality of more than 70,000 over his nearest competitor, Otto T. Bannard, Republican. He will be in complete isolation, however, in the board of estimate and apportionment. The borough president on Gaynor's ticket in Manhattan, the Bronx, Queens, Kings and Richmond were defeated. His associates on the Tammany ticket were defeated for controller and Galvin for president of the board of aldermen—lost by probably 60,000 votes.

The Chronicle and Call conceded the election of P. H. McCarthy, Union Labor candidate, as mayor of San Francisco, the Chronicle estimating his majority at 2,000 to 7,000 and the Call estimating it at 10,000. They both concede Fickert's election by 15,000 majority over Heney. The large majority by which Lane, anti-graft prosecutor, was snowed under shows that there has been a misunderstanding of the present administration, which is in the hands of civic reformers, from a section—were satired southward by the swift current while men on the entire bridge made frantic attempts at rescue. The Sporting World

The guidelines trotter Dorsen made the world's record in 2:14¾ at Philadelphia recently. He took the long route from the start, going almost the entire mile in the middle of the track.

Hambletonian winner Peter the Great, Chauncey stakes at Belmont Park, New York, gaining by three lengths over Grasmere, who kept the lead well until the final furlong pole was reached.

Peter Turk, backed from 12 to 1 to 6 to 1, won the Lonsbrook handicap for 2-year-olds, at Jamaica, N. Y., the Lonsbrook stakes, at Jamaica, N. Y., the stakes and, and won by a nose in a hard drive.

L. C. Ford, of Michigan, a tireless driver, was 5-day elected president of the Oxford University Athletic Club. Hall is a sculptor and quarter-miler. President of the athletic club correspondence equals of the track teams in American universities.

To make the horse as good as cash in a bet, and a dishonest owner distributes an any gift edge longer is the object of the men who are now directing the national horse show at New York. To cause the horse owners of the United States, particularly those who are willing to breed and raise the stock, to regard horse-breeding on the prospects as a safe investment, instead of considering all horses, except those of exceptional merit, as mere beasts of burden, is the text of the present discussion.

W. K. Vanderbilt captured two races at the Bois du Boulogne course at Paris. The Marmaris won the Prix des Champs Elysees, a sailing event at five and one-half furlongs. Miss Gallier Streak finished first for the Prix de Cadre, a stake of 14,000, for 3-year-olds, at eleven furlongs.

Henry Peter won the Marathon Derby at Seattle in 2:32:39, breaking the two-mile record of 3:46:10 3-5 made at the New York Marathon Derby. Harry McLean, the Hopi Indian from Phoenix, ran beautifully for the first fifteen miles, then began to lose and collapsed completely in the twenty-second mile.

JOHN S. KENNEDY IS DEAD

In the death of aged John S. Kennedy, multimillionaire, Monday of whooping cough, Wall street lost its "man with the cash." It is said there has not been a time in years when he could not commit from ninety to ten $17,000,000 "spot" cash. Russell Sage held the title before him, and at his death had some $20,000,000 cash on hand. But even when Sage was the "ready money" man Kennedy was active and had the greater cash balance. For years he has been known to Wall street insiders as the man who carried the biggest bank balances in America. Time and again it has seemed him well in times of financial emergencies. He did not lend it out at enormous rates and in spectacular fashion and for that reason the public saw as little about him as it did of his enormous charities. He had several nephews and nieces, all of whom were on the best of terms with him. It is believed the bulk of the fortune, upwards of $100,000,000, will go to relatives.

$14,000 GONE; CASHIER SLUGGED

By the very modesty of their work, two highwaymen got away with a package containing $14,165 from the Canadian Express Company's office in the Union Stock Yards at Toronto, Ont., at 5 o'clock Thursday morning. The men knew they dare not leave unable to obtain the slightest relief from the office. As William Hodgson, cashier in the office, was engaged in doing up a package containing the money stolen, a stranger made inquiry about a package. Dobson could not make out the name, as the boxes did not enunciate clearly. Dobson asked the name a second time, and, still believing the man to be a clerk, stooped down to the counter to get the receipt book. The stranger struck Hodgson a terrible blow over the head with a piece of pipe. The cashier sank to the floor and the stranger called leisurely out with the package of money.

WIDOW FREED IN MURDER CASE.

St. Paul Jury Decides Woman Did Not Kill Wealthy Husband.

Mrs. Ella Arbeiter, who for two weeks has been on trial in the District Court in St. Paul on a charge of having murdered her husband, Louis Arbeiter, a wealthy butcher, on the night of Jan. 1 last, was acquitted by the jury which heard the testimony. Louis Arbeiter was murdered while asleep in bed about 4 o'clock in the morning. His head was literally shot to pieces and the bed was soaked with gasoline and set on fire. Mrs. Arbeiter was in the house at the time and was in the hospital for many weeks on that account. Her mother, the oldest of four daughters, is under indictment on the same charge. Mrs. Arbeiter's mother and her sister, as it was the big sensational trial of the year, the prosecution had brought into the case the sensational charge of the murder of Mrs. Arbeiter's husband, Louis Arbeiter, a wealthy butcher, on the night of Jan. 1 last, by having murdered her husband. Formative Period of the Order When Our Present Subordinate Granges Were Called "Temples of Industry" Perfecting the Ritual.

The following letter was discovered some time ago by the editor of the Comity Gleaner in clearing out a long forgotten package of papers:

Fallow Grange, Fallowtown, Fallow, Aug. 1st, 1867.

Dear Brother: Yours of the 28th ult. received, and in reply would say that I am well pleased with the prospect of a good working Grange in your place. I have been in the habit of visiting Fallow Grange for some time, and I feel that I can do no better than to tell you how we do our work. We have a Temple 30 by 50 feet, which we have had dedicated to the purpose. We have 32 officers, and we work the Master, Overseer, Lecturer, Steward, Assistant Steward, Chaplain, Treasurer, Secretary, Gatekeeper, Ceres, Pomona, Flora, Lady Assistant Steward, and the degrees of Ploughman, Mower, Reaper, Sower, Feeder, Thresher, Husbandman, Husbandmen, Husbandwoman, Husbandwomen, Husbandwoman and Husbandmen. We open in the first degree, and work through the degrees to the Husbandmen, when we open in the fifth degree and work through the degrees to the Husbandwomen, when we open in the sixth degree and work through the degrees to the Husbandmen and Husbandwomen, when we open in the seventh degree and work through the degrees to the Husbandmen, when we open in the first degree and close the Grange. We have a Grange Store, and we have a Grange Agent, who is also a member of the Grange. We have a Grange Library, and we have a Grange Lecturer, who lectures every Saturday evening. We have a Grange Quartette, and we have a Grange Choir. We have a Grange Cemetery, and we have a Grange Hearse. We have a Grange Dispensary, and we have a Grange Physician. We have a Grange Dispensary, and we have a Grange Physician. We have a Grange Dispensary, and we have a Grange Physician

With a subtle instinct he divined that both of them trained away. Each, read in the others face consciousness of the impossibility of discussing these experiences in terms of the body but came to be what they were. Such men guard the real history of their lives and the real emotions of their hearts as jealously as the combinations of their cards. The old, leathery smile lighted up Mantel's features, and he said:

"We seem to have a violent antipathy to this ice. Here, and state away from it as soon as we can. Come up to a little beauty spot I know."

"Yes," said his friend, shrugging his shoulders, "it is not pleasant to fall through the crust at intervals. There is a cold shower bath in every life a too ice is a substitute for the warm and sudden plunge into which we must come at last. I wish I had all better to keep on the surface. I am frank enough to say that the man who can know almost my point, the better I shall be satisfied."

"I wish that I could keep my own self from trying to get under the ice. Why is it I can keep others out, but I cannot keep myself out? Well, I suppose I must let the dead past bury its dead." It seems a reasonable demand."

"He is a poor scoundrel—this old man, the Dutch. I watched him at his work, and he is impertinent to dig his own grave, and yet I suppose he is as unknowing as a bulldog."

"The Dutch are as helpless as the Dane. I wonder if the future will bring enough even under the ice to hide them from view?"

"Let us leave the past and let it wave bury the sea," answered David, differently.

Mantel drained his eyes in silence. For the first time since David had known him, had the face gave some genuine revelation of the emotions that swept through it. Great tears stood in his eyes, and his lips trembled. In a moment, he cried, took his hat, laid his hand gently upon the arm of his friend, and said, "David, I know how; we are starting on that this ice way. We shall fall through if we are not careful, and get that cold, you were thinking about. Let's go back to take a walk. Life is too deep for either you or me to fathom. I gave it up as a bad job long ago. Come, let us go. We need this air."

They went down into the streets and had themselves in the busy crowd of cars—unnoticed men. Suddenly Mantel was startled by an abrupt change in the manner of his companion, who passed and stood as if rooted to the pavement, saw his great blue eyes opened beyond their natural width and his face alight.

Following the direction of their gaze, Mantel saw that they were fixed on a blind beggar who sat on a stool at the side of the sidewalk, where no motionless like an old stump on the bank of a river, the expressionless of human life forever flowing by. His head was bare, his chin outstretched, hand he held a the cap which Hapland and Hope, the two companions, travelers dropped him a coin; by his side, holding a cup, was a little, ragged, unresponsive eyes, was a little terrier, by nature's mistake, a guide in a world of perpetual night.

The face of the beggar was a remarkable one, judged by almost any standard. It was from a Roman coin, in its outline, and although he was a beggar, it spoke of a consciousness of power, of independence and resolution like that of a possible fisherman. But the feature which first arrested and longer held attention was the enormous mouth, mouth, it could not have been less than from ear to ear. Its lips, was carefully trimmed and trained, and although the face itself was still comparatively young, was white, as snow. Underneath, the set lips rose in a bone and with teeth hands twisted the ends into heavy points.

It was a strikingly fine and exalted from every observer more than a passing look, but remarkable as it was Mantel could not discover any reason for the astonished and terrible interest of his companion, who stood staring as one who has seen a unthinkable way, that he was in danger of himself attracting the attention of the observing crowd.

Seeing this, Mantel took him by the arm. "What is the matter?" he asked.

"It is he!" said David, drawing his hand over his eyes like a man awakening from a dream. "It is he!"

"It is who? Are you mad? Come away. People are observing you. If there is anything wrong, we must leave or get into trouble."

"Let me alone!" David replied, shaking off his hand. "I would rather die than lose sight of that man."

"Then come into this doorway where you can watch him unobserved, for you are making a spectacle of yourself. Come, or I shall drag you."

With the eyes still fixed on that strange countenance, David yielded to the pressure of his friend's hand and they retired to a hallway whence he could watch the beggar unobserved. His whole frame was quivering with excitement and he kept murmuring to himself: "It is he. It is he! I cannot be mistaken! Nature never made his double! Has time he has changed. How old and white he is! It cannot be his ghost, can it? If it were alive I might think so, but it is broad daylight! The man is living flesh and blood and my hand is not, after all, the hand of a murderer."

"Hush!" cried Mantel; "you are talking aloud."

"Yes, I am talking aloud," he answered, "and I mean to talk louder yet! I want you to hear that I am not a murderer, murderer! Do you understand? I am going to rush over in the crowd to cry out at the top of my voice—I am not a murderer!"

Terrified at his excitement, Mantel pushed him farther back into the doorway but he spoke out again as if his very life depended upon the sight of the gross white face.

"He quiet!" Mantel cried, seizing his arm with an iron grip.

"Look at this hand, Mantel! I have not touched it it myself for more than three years without seeing spots of blood on it! And now it lows before its sins now to me!"

"You are in danger of being overheard, and if you are not careful, in a moment more we shall be in the hands of the police."

"No matter if I am," cried David, almost beside himself, and rapturously entering his friend. "Nothing could give me more pleasure than a trial for my crime, for my victim would be my witness! He is out there! He is out there in the street. Mantel, you don't know what happened to me! You don't know how sweet it is to be alive! A mountain has been taken from my shoulders. I no longer have any secret! I will tell you the whole story of my life, now."

"Not now; but later on, when we are alone."

"Hold! I have grown more quiet, and they stared patiently waiting for me to come where the hand of God would brave his past and relive to his life. Let me tell it! It will be a search for such a place as I want to be alone with you. We will get free from crowds; but when we meet to-night we will have much to talk about. I will tell you the whole of this long and sad story. I am no longer a Mantel. You can't understand! I have something to be free! I have felt the burden I could not see. The building was his that. CHAPTER XVII.

The next few weeks were passed in devoted efforts to make the little room comfortable and happy. David sought and found a place to work, and after recovering enough of his wages to supply the few necessities of the little life, fortunate the rest of the purchase of comforts for the poor lavishly.

Mantel acted as his almoner, and by his delicate tact and gentle manners persuaded the proud and revengeful man to accept the mysterious charity. The moment the strain of unpaid legacy was taken from him, the physical ruin which the terrible time of the alone, the subsequent illness, and the ensuing poverty and wretchedness had wrought, became manifest. He experienced a sudden relapse, and began to sink into a continuous decline.

Even had he not known the secret of his sorrow, it would have soon become clear to his mind and conscience. Nurses that some hidden trouble was gnawing at his heart, for he was pale, a, abstracted and sometimes morose. He manifested no curiosity to know his benefactor upon whose charity he was living, but received the aims he sent, with that unknown hand unsolicited, unsymptomized and unacknowledged. He was conscious of the conversion of his uplifting charity, and would lie for the greater part of his time, would sink back by a sort of treasure house of memory, and live in the past. There, in the impenetrable gloom of his soul, he brooded over his wrongs and counted his prospects of righting them, as a miser reckons his coffers.

The blow struck by David has stunned the Justice, but he did not feel it. He lay in the road until a slave, passing that way, picked him up and carried him to a neighboring plantation, where he fell into the hands of people who in the truest sense of the word were good samaritans. Their hospitality was tested to the utmost, for he lay for weeks in a stupor, and when he recovered consciousness his reason had undergone a strange eclipse. For a long time he could not recall a single event in his history and when at last some of the more prominent began to re-present themselves to his view it was vaguely and slowly, as mountain peaks and hilltops break through a morning fog. This was not the slow growth of the one which his mind had struck him it had left him totally blind.

Not until many weeks had passed did Mantel succeed in really engaging his patient in anything like a connected action, and even after he had begun to thaw a little under those tenderness of love, whenever the past was even hinted at the old recluse relapsed instantly into silence.

Mantel might have been discouraged had he not determined at all hazards to enter into the secrets of this life, and to pave the way for the forgiveness of his friend. He therefore persisted in his efforts, and one bright day when the invalid was resting unusually strong ventured to press home his injunction.

"I cannot help thinking," he said, "that you could soon be reasonably well again if you did not brood so much. I fear there is some trouble gnawing at your heart."

"There is," he was answered, lefty.

"Have you wronged some one, then, and is your trouble which you you feelings of remorse and guilt?"

"Wronged some one!" the sick man fairly roared, gripping the arms of his chair and gazing for breath in the excitement which the question brought on. "Not I! I have been wronged! No one has ever lo-been wronged as I have. I have nourished vipers in my bo-bosom and been stung by them. I have worn low and reaped hate. I have been robbed, deceived and betrayed! My life is gone! My health is gone! My sight is gone! He has made me like a sheep! My heart has turned to a hammer which knocks at my ribs and cries revenge! It chokes me!"

He panted, grew purple in the face and clutched at his collar as if about to strangle. Alarm at the sight performed swear, and Mantel determined once more to try and remove this longer buried.

FLOWERS OR BUTTONS.

The Simple African Belle Preferred Hire was Means of Adornment.

Buttons have been so much in request this season for decorative as well as merely useful purposes that tailors factories have been taxed to the utmost to meet the demand. Paris has monopolized the use of buttons, and the fashionable world has hastened to comply.

Nevertheless, its response has been anticipated by unsophisticated Africa, in the belles of the West Coast, as Robert H. Milligan has recently described them in his "Jungle Folk of Africa." "Do you know where we get our buttons?" he asked. "I was astonished that I didn't notice our source at all!

"Yes," Mantel answered. "I have noticed every tree of the wood."

"Would you find the place again?"

"Without the slightest difficulty."

"Be sure, for if you wish to help me, I think you may find it worth while to come often. I have made my plans in the 'o-ommoods in which I have been standing here, and am determined to devote my life, if need be, to this one purpose which I have so wrought. I cannot let slip a single thing lest it should be the cheerful place. I will atone for the past if I can! Atone! Atone! I will be free! I will! With stunning force its meaning dawned upon him. Atone! Free! Free! I have heard and utered it without comprehension. This word was to be in it a revelation of the secreted possibility of life! I am a chained man! I will make atonement! Come, let us go. I am anxious to find the place, I must proceed with caution. How do I know that life is be permanent and may be only lasting for the night, and when you come tomorrow, he may be gone! Go in, Mantel, and make sure that we shall find him. Two more days—Go, and while you find out all about the place, I will begin to search for such a place as I want to be alone with you. We will get free from crowds; but when we meet to-night we will have much to talk about. I will tell you the whole of this long and sad story. I am no longer a Mantel. You can't understand! THE POPULAR PULPIT

COMMERCE AND CHARACTER.

By Henry F. Cope.

"Ever follow that which is good." 1. Thess. 5: 15.

Almost all who think about the matter are agreed that religion ought to extend itself through all one's life, and that it is a matter for the gods of work as well as for the day of rest. But the difficulty usually is to see just precisely how religion may function in the affairs of every day life, in business, and social life.

That the services of the church are religious acts is evident. Or at least they are designed as such. But how can you make bookkeeping, selling goods, trading stocks, making bricks, handling tools, building houses, caring for human—all that makes up the life of business and all that constitutes our social living—how can these become religious acts?

The answer is really simpler by just thinking back to the same qualities which make religious the services of the church and which are the same in character to the acts we call religious. There is just one element which makes sacred any act, whether it be preaching a sermon, singing a hymn, or mending an old shoe. Is it not this that it shall be an expression of one's search and endeavor for the best he conceives, for God's highest ideals.

There is nothing religious about a church service unless it is the soul's aspiration after the highest, a reaching after Divinity, a search for God and goodness, unless here men and women are consecrating to God all their hearts, to look upon the visions that inspire and to yield themselves to the influence of the holy things.

There is true religion in business and commerce, in the work of the office, wherever the day's toil is made possible by the spirit of ideals and aspirations, where men serve, not as slaves or serfs, bound either to task masters or to their own evil lusts and base ambition, but where they have before them the vision of a better and higher life and they are laying his part to make other lives richer and fuller.

Religion, service for noble ends, the burning of a light within that illumines every heart, the consciousness of the greatness and glory of having a share in the world's work, into it is that redeems our business life and makes of our commerce a school of character, this steadily sets the work and the worker before wages or profits or any other results save the ideal of manhood.

When the light of this ideal is in a man's heart, he finds God in his work. It is the character formation. He becomes quick, keen in his perceptions to judge the moral and spiritual values of experience. The temptation to defraud, for example, is seen in a new light in the light of its profits and possible punishments, but in the light of its effects on the lives of others.

There is a new standard for business. Men have new standards are entering into our business and commercial life, when we are prompted to do our business not by the profit in goods and the pennies in dollars, but by the effects on the lives of the workers and by the value of the product to society as a whole. In other words, we are really setting up religious tests in business.

There is a new consciousness in commercial affairs. The banking house and the factory become stern instructors in the ethics of business, and the law is rigorous, but because we are compelled to realize that there can be no excuse that is permanent, nor profit that is worth while, but business is not for profit and we accept and are dominated by spiritual ideals, except as we set character and consciousness before any other considerations.

A man expresses his religion in his business when he makes business living the expression of his best thoughts and aspirations, when he refused to be governed by greed, ambition, and obeys the vision of the ideal in his business life. His enthusiasm is daily toil becomes aspiration and the hum of industry becomes the music of a base selfishness rises as an anthem to heaven.

Men may learn to pray by their occupations and to test the vitality of our religion by its power to give noble aim and worthy motives to business while we test the virtues of our commercial life by its fruitage in character and life.

GOD IS OUR FATHER.

By Rev. William Watson.

Prayer is both our duty and our privilege. To be in conscious contact with God our Father is our highest blessedness. None of us can do without this. Our weakness needs His strength, our evil His forgiveness, our fears His assurance, our hopes His fulfilments. He seeks to draw nearer to Himself, and the forces of the soul, love and hope and faith, work their strongest when we pray.

In his last picture Raphael represents our Lord at the Judgment Seat, and there in his "Jungle Folk of Africa," a devout lunatic in the asylum of the incident, represents our Lord as having ascended a little distance from the crowd, and as pleading with the pleading of this; it is a stroke of imagination; but it contains a great truth. Our Equation took place during prayer, and the painter's gloss lesson for us is that prayer raises us above the cares and anxieties and sins of the world. "Wait on the Lord, and He shall strengthen thine heart. They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint." We need this spiritual elevation. "The world is too much with us."

We may not always be able to speak, "Lord is there anything wrong?" but we can always be able to speak, "Lord, I have sinned against Thee." When we confide in Him He will honor our faith.

Pray, therefore, what you feel, what you think, what you need, and let your prayer end when it ceases to be the real expression of your needs or thought and feeling. Pray with Christ's spirit of God within, but believe that He is your Father; that no law can limit Him, for law is merely the manner of His working; that His unwillingness to give is never the cause why you do not receive; that the purpose of His holy love is granting or denying your wishes is to make you perfect; that it is impossible so wise and loving a Father will ever be bribed or cajoled by prayer and be mistaken when He gives what we ask. The measure in which you trust Christ is the measure in which He helps you, and your trust in Christ will give tone and spirit to your prayer. He will trust you with His blessing as you trust Him for it.

The important thing is not the judgment, but the will, with which we pray. That will assert itself in quiet seeking in earnest and prolonged seeking, in vigorous knocking, when the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force; but in whatever way you are obliged to pray, let your will be unconditionally surrendered to God. If you do, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall you Father who is in heaven give good things to them that ask Him."

HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS

BATTLE HYMN OF REPUBLIC.

By Julia Ward Howe.

(Julia Ward Howe (New York, May 27 1819; died, Oct. 17, 1910, Newport, Rhode Island) was a poet, author of books, essays, lectures and sermons, philanthropist, but she will always be known to the greatest number as the author of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Mrs. Howe was born of Boston, of a family of wealth and culture. Her father was a banker, and her mother was a descendant from Samuel Ward, who was a member of the Continental Congress from Rhode Island. Her husband was Samuel Gridley Howe, a famous philanthropist, who was the friend of the American people. It is interesting to note that the prayer of a chaste conscription when they are advised or forced to go to the battle field, to the glorious victory of their fathers sons on the field.)

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightening of his terrible swift sword:
His truth is marching on.

Chorus—
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
His truth is marching on.

They have builded him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps;
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel:
"As ye deal with my contemners so with you my grace shall deal;
Let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on."

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat.
O, be swift, my soul, to answer him! Be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me.
As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

Paul a prisoner.—In Rome.—Acts 28:11-31.

Golden text: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Rom. 1:16.

Having escaped the shipwreck and having been cast upon a desert island, Paul and his friends, the Jailer and all his company, who take care of them, sheltering them from the cold. They remain on the island of Melita, on which they had been wrecked, for three months. The centurion then finds a ship and they embark for Italy and land at Puteoli. Here they find some Christians who cordially greet them. Wherever he goes now he finds some of the faithful. This shows how widely the gospel was now spreading. When they arrived at Appii forum some of the brethren who lived at Rome came out to meet him. When Paul saw them he thanked God and took courage. How different his coming to Rome was from what he had expected. He had written that he intended to visit them some day, but he had no idea that he would come as a prisoner. He had no thought of being met by a company of loving brethren and pity his traveling expenses; but so it was. Paul, as great as he was, was not ashamed to show feeling the kindness of his friends and loving companionship, and he thanked God and takes courage as he sees these brethren from Rome.

The Christian tribune delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard; this captain was relieved by the Emperor. "Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier." How mysterious! Paul was brought to Rome by the power of God and not permitted to be imprisoned in Jerusalem or Caesarea, but he was placed in a house. He had no thought of being bound by the Romans people. It is interesting to note that the prisoner of a church conscription when they are advised or forced to go to the battle field, to the glorious victory of their fathers sons on the field.)

good health, with its blessings, must understand, quite clearly, that is involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to living aright. Then the use of medicines may be dispensed with to advantage, but under ordinary conditions in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time and the California Fig Syrup Co. holds that it also important to present the subject truthfully and to supply the one perfect laxative to those desiring it.

A Typical Tale of Sufferings from Kidney Disease.

Mrs. L. C. Frieley, 1034 N. Main St., Dalphos, Ohio, says: "Five or six years ago I began to suffer with kidney trouble and grew steadily worse until my health was all broken down. For weeks I was in bed and could not turn from side to side without being helped. My back was stiff and painful. I was tired and languid. I was able to get around I could not do my work. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills helped me so much that I kept on using them until rid of every symptom of kidney trouble. During the past three years I have enjoyed excellent health."

THE FALCON

Capt. James Reid and His Tug Ottawa at Work on the Stranded Steamer.

At the time of our going to press last week full particulars of the stranding of the steamer Falcon on the southeast end of South Fox Island were not obtainable.

The boat left Escanaba Sunday and was bound for East Jordan with a cargo of iron ore, and during the evening a fog arose that was so dense that the wheelman was unable to see where he was going and when they neared the Fox Islands no lights were visible, and no fog horn was sounding and before the crew were aware that they were near land the boat struck the shore.

The crew stayed on board until the high wind and increasing sea warned them that it was time to make their escape, and taking the small boat they managed to get on the island where they stayed all night, and Tuesday they were taken to Northport on a tug.

On Wednesday afternoon the Reid Wrecking Co.'s tug Ottawa, of Sarnia, arrived with Capt. James Reid and a Cleveland insurance man on board. On Thursday they succeeded in getting three pumps on board the wreck, but before any effective work was done, the sea increased and the wind was abandoned. Again Friday and Saturday trials were made with the same result.

The condition of the boat Saturday was about as follows: Aft was a large hole in her port bow under the water line, and is "stumped" amidships some. At that time Capt. Reid thought the boat could be saved with twenty four hours good weather.

The northwest gale of yesterday has probably broken up the boat and there is now very little chance of saving her.

Football.

East Jordan failed in their expectation of adding to their record a victory over Charlevoix, neither side being able to score in Saturday's game. Score 0 to 0.

The East Jordan team outweighed the local boys, but could not carry the ball over the goal line.

The foul ball began by East Jordan kicking off to Charlevoix, the ball being carried back a short distance. The extra weight of East Jordan's line prevented any gains from being made through the line. Charlevoix had the ball on downs. Gary punting on third down to the fifty yard line. East Jordan carried the ball in several scrimmages nearly to the goal when the local boys showed the grit of which they were made by holding for downs, but being unable to make the necessary ten yards were forced to punt. Two unsuccessful punts were luckily received by the locals, giving them a first down. Gary was again forced to punt and succeeded in getting the ball to the middle of the field where it was kept until the end of the first half.

The fact that the ball was kept in Charlevoix's territory most of the first half put the boys on their metal and they determined that during the second half "things would happen."

On account of an injury to his ankle, Dugan was obliged to leave the game early in the second half, very much crippling the team both in defensive and offensive work.

Of the local boys Carey did good work with his boot, several times saving the team from a touchdown which would mean defeat. Wallace showed much improvement in running back punts. Dugan played a good game at end, never letting his man get around him, and was able to spill one or two forward passes.

The second team won from East Jordan's second team by a score of 42 to 0.

The Charlevoix boys play Traverse City on the home grounds Saturday, Nov. 20. They are working hard and will not be easily defeated. The boys feel that with proper support they can win from Traverse giving them a very good title to the championship of northern Michigan. This is the last game of the season. The word for the week is "Come Out Charlevoix, Come Out!"

—The opening exercises at the high school Monday Morning were given a patriotic hearing, by the story of Capt. John Beatty, of this city. The captain is 82 years old, and one of the very few surviving veterans of the civil war. So far as he knows, he is the only survivor of a member of his regiment. He served the heights of Chapultepeck, was in the battles at Monterey, Buena Vista and the City Mexico, besides several other engagements. His talk was a vivid portrayal of events that occurred more than forty years ago, and was not only interesting but substantial, as coming from one who knows that stirring period of our country's history with today.

Boyne Journal: W. S. Shaw has closed a contract for 3000 barrels of Elk Cement of the Elk Cement & Lime Co. of Elk Rapids. He had previously purchased 2000 barrels of them. The cement is to be shipped to Weiss, Delta county, for use in the erection of the big tanning plant which is being built by the Michigan Extracting Co. This plant is for the purpose of extracting the tannin from hemlock bark which will be shipped to Mr. Shaw's tanneries instead of shipping the bark. The plant is something new in this line as we understand that it is the first of its kind to be built.

Traverse City Special: At a mass meeting of the "days" this afternoon it was unanimously decided to proceed with the circulation of a petition to the supervisors for the submission of local option to the voters next spring. This was decided on despite the claim that such action by the supervisors would be illegal. It appears that the "wets" forces worked a little scheme at last meeting. It was supposed that the January meeting would be adjourned sweeting from the regular session of October, and it would legal for the board to take action on the matter. By the interpolation of the words "sine die" in the motion of adjournment, it is alleged that the January session, if one is held, must be made on special call, and at this, under the state law, the question of local option may not be submitted. It is the intention of the local option forces here to test the matter.

Bellaire Spinbil: After coaxing his wife to go for a visit to Elk Rapids, George Bargy, of Torch Lake, took their two little children aged 2 and 3 respectively, and disappeared, leaving a note for his wife, telling her that he had gone and had taken the bolaks and she would never see them again. They lived several miles from the railroad station and Central Lake was the nearest station. He secured a neighbor to drive him and the children to Ellsworth, several miles farther on. He told the neighbor that he was going to Petoskey to work and that his wife would join him there. Considerable indignation is expressed throughout the community at Bargy's conduct. He left absolutely nothing to console the wife and mother for the great loss of her husband and children, even rifling the album of their baby pictures. There had been no trouble in the family and no one is able to explain the man's conduct. Bargy has a daughter living in Florida and a sister in Detroit and it is thought he may have gone to one of them.

YOU'LL do well to learn something about paint; what it is, what it ought to be, what it does. Then you're not at the mercy of everybody's "advice."

Devoe Lead-and-Zinc paint is carbonate of lead; oxide of zinc, to help the lead to wear; ground fine by machinery in pure linseed oil; with turpentine dryer, and any color you want.

Takes fewer gallons than thin lead and oil alone; and requires less labor in painting.

Lazy Demons.

An Austrian naturalist, Dr. Rechtiner, attempted some time ago to make a collection of Blmoon flakes. He found it almost impossible to persuade the natives, who are so lazy that they seldom go fishing, to sell him any. An offer of gold induced them no more than silver; they had caught their fish to eat them, and eat them they did.

Child Prodigy.

Marjorie Fleming, the playmate and friend of Sir Walter Scott, has legitimate claims to consideration as a prodigy. When she was a small child she presented to Tom Constance's parents in Kirk Cudbright, Scotland, a pet lamb, and it is believed that the money will be forthcoming.

Belgian Horse Fairs.

Horse fairs, held almost continuously, have helped to make Belgium, the greatest horse-breeding country of its size in the world. The fairs are largely attended by foreign buyers, especially Germans, who purchase 25,000 horses a year at these exhibitions. It is estimated that there are now 300,000 horses in Belgium, a country not quite as large as the state of Maryland, which has just about half that number of horses.

Ingratitude.

A Missouri farmer was nearly kicked to death by a mule that he had rescued from a burning barn. A mule may be as ungrateful as a thoughtless son.

This is by far the best clubbing offer we have ever made. See ad. in another column.

—The Traverse City high school foot ball team cause here Saturday with good natured blood in their eyes, with figurative tomahawks and scalping knives whetted to keen edges, determined to return home with the trophies won from the thinly settled portions of the southern part of the state. Fifty ninety per cent of these will be making their first trip into the country to the north of Grand Rapids. They will be explorers into what is to them a new country, they will be "seeing things up," especially from an agricultural point of view. That they may get favorable impressions the 100 substitute gangers in the ten counties in this corner of Michigan."

—Many questions, grave and gay, but thoroughly pertinent and opportune, relating to ambitious woman's attitude toward modern society, are asked in Earl Burgess' superb production of "The World and a Woman," by Joseph Byron Totten, which is considered by many critics in New York as the best play dealing with the vital concerns and social conditions of contemporary life presented within a decade. Still these questions by no means are permitted by the skilfull playwright to resolve themselves into a solemn or sombre sermon. So cleverly and subtly has Mr. Totten wrought that the queries he propounds seem as but trifling details of his masterly plot, until later on when the spectator comes to digest all the remarkable episodes and incidents which have been presented to his notice. "The World and a Woman" will be seen at the Charlevoix Theatre Tuesday, Nov. 30.

—For the first time in the history of the local fish hatchery that plant will go into commission this week and work all winter on local eggs. Mr. A. T. Steward, who has had charge of the spawn harvest, will remain here in charge.

—During the calendar year of 1908 there were 10,052 births registered in western Michigan and during the same period there were but 6578 deaths recorded. This is an excess of births over deaths of 3,475. This means a gain in population of about every 10 years from births alone. Western Michigan has a low death rate because of the favored climatic conditions, because of its good drainage by means of the many rivers that cross the territory, and because of the intelligence of its inhabitants.

—East Jordan Herald: The Herald is in receipt of a letter Prof. J. H. Allen at Trenton, Ga., in which he says—"Well I find myself again in the "Sunny South," where the weather at present is like our summer weather in Michigan, and politics are nearly all Taft as being a better man than Bryan and more of a true old fashioned democrat. As fast as the south engage in manufacturing just so fast they want "Protection." A member of the state legislature residing in this place says the near future will find the south more "White Republican" than New England.

—Capt. William Hulme returned here from New York Friday. He disposed of his half interest in the schooner Oliver Mitchell to New York parties. Capt. Hulme can lay claim to being a salt-water sailor, as he took the vessel from Charlevoix to New York, and had no mishaps after he left the canals. The Mitchell will run in the coast trade, and was already loaded with sand for Boston when Capt. Hulme left New York. While in New York Capt. Hulme ran across Capt. Ira Morehouse, who is part owner and master of the schooner Abel C. Buckley, carrying lumber from Bangor, Maine, to New York.

—Mrs. Charles Harper, head of the philanthropic work of Cadillac, who has carte blanche from one of the wealthy businessmen of that city to do in the circle for all sorts she needs to alleviate the distress in the city caused by poverty, says that there is nothing doing in her line, that she is having no calls for assistance and that the customary contributions taken at Thanksgiving time for poor families will not be taken this year, as there is actually no need of it. Asked why conditions are so good she replied that no saloons there makes the helping of poor families unnecessary.

—The meeting of the state gangers at Traverse City, to begin Tuesday morning, Dec. 14, and continue up to and including Friday night, Dec. 17, promises to be one of the most notable gatherings in the history of Northern Michigan. The Traverse City Record remarks that "the majority of the delegates will be from the thinly settled portions of the southern part of the state. Fully ninety per cent of these will be making their first trip into the country to the north of Grand Rapids. They will be explorers into what is to them a new country, they will be "seeing things up," especially from an agricultural point of view. That they may get favorable impressions the 100 substitute gangers in the ten counties in this corner of Michigan."

Trustworthy Toilet Preparations

Don't make the fatal mistake of using strange toilet requisites, without any guarantee as to their quality. If you do you're taking big chances of ruining your complexion. Bad toilet goods are worse than none, for they not only do no good, but often contain ingredients that are actually injurious to the skin.

We can recommend all the toilet helps we sell as being pure, high and excellent, containing only elements of high nutritive value to the skin.

Death of Mrs. Maple Choloupka.

Mrs. Choloupka was born in Saxony, Austria, Feb. 16, 1846. She was married at the home of her childhood in 1862 to Charles Choloupka, who died in this city several years ago. In 1867 they came to America, locating at Traverse City, where they lived sixteen years. In 1883 they removed to Charlevoix.

To Mr. and Mrs. Choloupka there were born ten children, six of whom are living; Frank and Ed, of Charlevoix; A. G., of Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Antoinette, of Chesterett; Mrs. W. H. Steward, of Minneapolis, and Emma, of Portland, Oregon. All were present at the funeral, two of the sons coming across the continent in the wake hope of reaching the bedside of the beloved mother before the spark of life went out.

While the writer knew her many years, his acquaintance with her was not sufficient to know of many other pioneers and neighbors whose words of warm regard for the good lady we have often very often heard spoken. Mrs. Choloupka was endowed to a remarkable degree with those essential characteristics which combine to make her home a joyous domestic retreat for all who surrounded her board, whether of kin or not, and her hospitality was only equalled by her skill in serving those domestic delicacies which so strongly commend the home to the lodging place of the weary.

But the crowning glory of her life was her unfaltering devotion to her family. At eventide and at dawn her chief thought and solicitude were for her loved ones, a mother's loving loyalty that never failed to be met by a ready response to her every desire. Never was the loss of a mother more sincerely mourned than by this family group, to whom the sympathy of the entire community goes out in unstinted measure.

The funeral was from the Congregational church Wednesday afternoon and was largely attended. A touching tribute of love was the presence of the four sons as pall bearers.

Thanksgiving Day.

Agreeable to custom Thursday, Nov. 25th, has been set apart as a day of Thanksgiving.

There is no day in the calendar that more strongly appeals to the home loving instincts of the American heart than Thanksgiving Day. It is more distinctively a "home-coming" day than Christmas, although blending into that festival by by reason of being at the threshold of the winter solstice.

Troubles concern all in the course of life's years, and at times clouds hang low and black, but they are not always without a silver lining. The crucible refines; the cross is a symbol of redemption.

The days are crowned with many blessings. The cornucopia of nature has poured its garden bounties fully upon us. Prosperity prevails, and the sky is clear.

For what we have received and offer what we are about to receive" let us be truly thankful, remembering the poor, who are always with us.

Man Killed on Schooner Aldrich.

The sailor was standing at the hatch assisting in raising the bags from the hold. Above him was a tramway upon which the loader trucks were run to the mill. A bag, which had just been raised to the truck slipped off, striking him in the back and knocking him into the hold. He struck on his head, breaking his neck. He died almost immediately after the accident.

Hermon was about sixty years of age and unmarried. He shipped from Milwaukee, and had been on the lakes all the summer. Capt. Krause, of the Aldrich does not know of any relatives.

Kills Her For 20 Years.

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. Joanna Duncan, of Haymesville, Me., was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating of drinking and could scarcely sleep. After many remedies had failed and several doctors gave me up, I tried Electric Bitters, which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything. I am 70 years old and am overjoyed to get my health and strength back again." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Kidney Trouble, Liver Trouble, Female Complaints, its unequaled. Only 50c at F. G. Boy City Matters.

Fred H. Brown, manager of Bay City, and Attorney R. W. Kane, went to Cheboygan Monday, and on Tuesday they closed a deal with Drayton Saltonstal, whereby the Bay City corporation becomes the owner in fee simple of the Pine Lake property.

This, however, is but a small part of what has been going on the past two months involving the future of Bay City, the details of which we have not been permitted to make public.

We will take the responsibility of saying, however, that a condition of certainty has been reached in the affairs of this important enterprise; that "The National Bay City" is now a permanent establishment, standing upon a safe and enduring financial foundation, and that the summer of 1910 will find the juvenile municipality better and far more populous than before.

The Brownsons are all right. We congratulate them upon the possession of what certain individuals have been pleased to call "nerve" in a sense that was not always intended to be complimentary. The nerve displayed has been of the right sort—a consciousness of personal rectitude, and an unshaken confidence in the successful outcome of the difficulties that beset them.

At the close of last summer's work they certainly faced serious financial problems, which would, with most men, have resulted in failure; but they kept their own counsels and "sawed wood" all the time. They are emerging from the morass of discouragement, and are squarely on their feet.

Details will be given later.

County Normal Notes.

The class accepted the invitation to the reception given by the W. C. T. U. at the home of Mrs. R. W. Paddock. The eighth grade pupils had prepared essays on, Effects of Alcohol and Tobacco upon the Human System. Some of these essays were read and were greatly enjoyed.

Isabel Knight took charge of Miss Sherman's room Wednesday morning, Nov. 17.

Mrs. Wilbur Cline, of Charlevoix, and Mrs. Hiram Hinsburg, of Ironton, visited the normal Monday afternoon, Nov. 15.

The class listened to a speech given by J. S. Crandell, of Detroit, in the assembly room of the high school Monday morning, Nov. 22.

The reception that was to be given for the teachers Friday evening, Nov. 26, was postponed on account of the death of Miss Carley's father.

Song, Sweet Home—Class.
Current Events—Mary Berg.
Debate—Resolved, That there should be a drop scene in every connection between Chicago and the trade of Mexico. Affirmative Tom Scroggie, negative Jane Stafford.
Songs, Mississippi, Oh, Beloved!—Zoe Barnett, Georgia Scroggie.
Quotations from the Merchant of Venice—Arbutus Nordrum.
Reading, Exploring the Black Canyon—Margaret Durance.
Song, Annie Laurie—Class.

The county house at East Jordan has received the official "O K" from the State Board in a letter to the poor superintendents: "At a meeting of the State Board of Correction and Charities held on the 14th inst., a report of the visit made to your infirmary by a representative of this board was submitted, and I was instructed to express to you the appreciation of this Board for the general good conditions of your infirmary. With the improvements made during the past year and a completion of those already provided for by the Board at Superviseors, you will certainly be entitled to great credit for the provision made for care and maintenance of the inmates in your county. It is a source of great satisfaction to these conditions in your county, and you may be assured the conditions are fully appreciated by the members of this Board."

To his own unbounded astonishment this young man who had long ago abandoned his faith in Christianity, abandoned his faith in spirits, found himself beginning to feel an appetite for the miraculous of an exotic and fundamental character.

"By Christ," he said, with a new fervor, "if this is the sort of a Christ that you present yourself to the Judge of all the earth with, I believe that this is your heart!"

In the momentary rest the beggar had recovered strength enough to reply: "It is terrible. I was on the threshold of mortal sin!! I didn't know I was so hardened! I didn't know what I do now. There must be. Would it be decent, would it be right, would it be one that would cover my life to a great extent, if I should do anything? They are young years to me here, but if eternity is as long as it is, I'm lost! Oh, I'll find D-D-Dave Corson if it kills me! I'll find him! I'll find him! I'll—I'll—I'll—

WILLARD A. SMITH EDIT. IN.

What One Friend Fletcher is Doing in California.

Santa Barbara, (Calif.,) Daily News: A transaction of considerable importance and one which will interest a great many more people was consummated today with the result that we have an addition to our city's population of two first-class families and a transfer of the Crane & Fairbanks Drug Store to what will be incorporated as the Star Drug Co.

Now this will be news to a whole lot of people; news that in some senses will delight us and in others senses will cause us sorrow, for a whole lot of our people love the old business houses and it causes a real pang to see new people replace the sterling men we have learned to respect, and, more then probably love.

It is so in the present instance.

The firm of J. T. Crane Co. was a very much respected concern. Mr. Crane had an exceeding long list of personal and business friends, gained by integrity and all the nice attributes that make men popular.

J. T. Crane & Co. was successful by Crane & Fairbanks, the addition of Charlie Fairbanks proving an element of decided strength. This firm was very successful and occupied the best corner in the city from a business sense. Its store was exceedingly attractive and every patron was a personal friend.

Then came the death of Mr. Crane with the consequent necessity for a reorganization which was effected by Mr. Fairbanks, the junior partner succeeding to the whole business. It was too much of a load. The absence of the kindly partner was felt all the time—yet the business was in no wise affected.

Mr. Fairbanks was sounded at to his willingness to sell, negotiations followed and resulted in the deal being consummated today with the new proprietors in full possession at this writing.

Mr. Fairbanks' affairs are not yet fully decided. Probably he may reside here, perhaps permanently. He probably will be in no hurry to make his decision. It is devoutly hoped he will remain with us.

The new firm is made up of two men from Michigan, who come with their families and will at once enter into the life of our city.

Mr. A. B. Fleischer is from Charlevoix, Michigan. He is a very accomplished druggist and chemist and will have the complete supervision of that part of the business. He retains the proprietorship of a large drug store in his home town.

Mr. H. A. Starr is a banker by profession and was until very recently an important official in the most important bank in his city—about the size of Santa Barbara—Ludington, Michigan. Mr. Starr will be the finance man of the new firm, look after the commercial end and generally make himself useful.

We congratulate these newly-arrived gentlemen on becoming possessors of a very fine location. We wish them all sorts of success. We are very glad to greet them and hope they will never find cause of regretting their coming to our city.

Traverse City Boys. The steamer Illinois arrived in port last Tuesday night, and left early this morning. On the last trip of the Illinois the crew of the boat rescued three men from probable death. About eight miles out of Chicago one of the crew heard calls for help, but could not distinguish anything out of the ordinary because of the thick weather. In the fog the big steamer passed a small boat lost so when the captain came on deck he ordered the vessel turned around, and then in spite of the heavy sea the smaller boat was towed into safety. It was found that in the crushing launch, which was fifty feet long, and has just been launched, that there was three feet of water in the bottom and that the engine had stopped and the small sail used only in emergency had blown away. In the boat were three men, one of whom was nearly dead from exposure, and the others so tired that they could hardly move. The men were cared for and the boat towed into Chicago.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Petoskey News: Twenty deer were transferred from the Grand Rapids & Indiana morning train to the Pere Marquette today. Cars going north were filled with returning hunters who have left the woods mostly on account of the bad weather in the north.

Fred Wright is another example of what a hustler can do on an Antrim county farm. Mr. Wright marketed at Alden this week 672 bushels of navy beans which were grown on 33 acres of land. His farm is located six miles north of Alden. Mr. Wright received over a thousand dollars for his bean crop.

Traverse City Eagle: G. M. Dame of Northport, was in the city today and stated to an Eagle representative that through the advertising of the Western Michigan Development bureau five settlers have already been located in that region, and he has three more in prospect. Some have already started operations for fruit culture in the early spring and the others have every intention of doing so.

Boyne City Special: Mrs. Elizabeth Delacey, of this city, has just been notified by the administrators of her sister's estate in England that she is mentioned in the will as one of the heirs to an estate valued at several million dollars and that her share will be about $2,000,000. Mrs. Delacey, who is a resident of Charlevoix county for upwards of 20 years, has purchased her share of the early pioneer work of the county and the reward is well merited.

Petoskey News: The family of John Vincent of Beaver Island, who was an inmate of the Skville Sanitarium for more than last year, and who died several months ago in his city, have shown their appreciation of the courtesies received by presenting Mr. Saville with a beautifully made miniature model of a passenger steamer. The work was all done by hand, and its excellent detail has been admitted to form a perfect boat.

The state farm at Traverse City has made a good showing during the past four months, gathering between 16,000 and 18,000 bushels of roots, 2,800 bushels of fruit and 265 tons of various kinds of hay, beside many hundreds of bushels of tomatoes, cucumbers and potatoes, with thousands of heads of celery and cabbage. The herd of forty-nine cows has supplied the state asylum with an average of 275,570 pounds of milk, being about 5.5 pounds a day per cow. The total value of the products of the farm amount to about $16,929.64 for the four months ending with the first of November.

Traverse City Eagle: The Western Michigan Development bureau has received a request that the Publicity Bulletin be sent regularly to the county journal at Charlevoix, to be used in the class of elementary agriculture as a text book. The school will receive the bulletin. The bureau has received letters from things that was satisfied to that city instead of to the office here. The postoffice officials in the Windy City were familiar with the location of the bureau and forwarded the letter here at once. I am loaded down that was entered in the boys' corn growing contest for Wexford county have been shipped to Chicago, where it will be placed on exhibition at the exposition. It demonstrates that means of corn that will show up the possibilities of this section as a corn growing country to excellent advantage. The bureau is in daily receipt of letters from newspapers from all over western Michigan, requesting the bureau of cuts that will illustrate the advantages of this section, and the stories that go with them. The newspapers are making a great work in putting the facts before the people and their work is fully appreciated by those in charge of the bureau.

Forest Into Exile.

Wm. Upchurch of Glen Oak, Okla was an exile from home. Mountain air, he thought, would cure a frightful lingering cough that had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, death dogging his steps. "Then I hoped to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung diseases. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it dispels Hoarseness and Sore Throat quickly, heals Bronchitis, Hemorrhage, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough. Infallible for Lung Salve. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. Price 50c and $1.00, trial bottle free, guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

If painting costs two or three times as much as the paint and one paint goes two or three times as far as another, how much are those two paints worth?

The one paint is Dwar Lead and Zinc goes farther, takes fewer gallons, lasts longer than other paint; there are a lot of reasons.

THE LOAFER.

Tom Browne, the English Artist, and One of His Models.

Tom Browne, the English black and white artist, told the following story of one of his models: I used to have a model a long, rich youth who was a golf caddie on Blackheath. I made a water color study of him and put in a street corner background. Before sending it to the frame maker's I wrote on the back in pencil a suggestion for a possible future title, "A Loafer." The frame maker after framing the sketch put it in his window until such time as he could send it up to me, with a card on the picture bearing the title, "A Loafer—By Tom Browne."

One morning the caddie came to the side door and asked to speak to me. "There's a gentle of me in a shop window down in Greenwich."

"Really?"

"Yas, sir, all me pals 'ave seen it." (With a sudden fury.) "I ain't no loafer, sir, I ain't. I'm a respectable caddie. I been orf work to take a look at the window."

I assured him that I knew nothing of the matter and was very sorry.

"That 'ee blowed for a title," he muttered. "I'll make yer pye damagers for this. I've been to my solicitor, and 'e says 'e can make yer."

In the end I fixed it up by a little slip, an old coat and a drop of something. Of course I took the picture down out of the window. The caddie was not sent for his alibi.

THE NARCISSUS.

Old Legends About This Beautiful and Ancient Flower.

The beautiful narcissus is a very ancient flower, and poets of all times have sung about it. It bloomed even so long ago as when gods and goddesses were supposed to live on the earth. The old Greek legends say it was the flower the maiden Proserpine was gathering when Pluto took her away to his dark home under the ground.

Another legend tells about a beautiful youth named Narcissus. He father was a river god named Cephissus and his mother a nymph called Liriope. The wonderful beauty of the youth caused many to love him, but he was cold and indifferent to all.

A poor little nymph called Echo loved him so dearly that she pined away and died because he would not care for her. At last Nemesis, the goddess of retribution, decided to punish him for his hard heart.

She caused him to fall in love with his own image as he looked into a stream, and so he could never reach this beautiful reflection he gradually perished with hopeless love.

His body was changed into the beautiful flowers which have ever since borne his name.—Pearson's Weekly.

Laughing Disclosures.

Concerning the laughter of the Frenchmen, it should be noted that our neighbors have worked out a system of character reading by the vowels in which one laughs. Laugh in a true English "Ha, ha"s, and, according to Lavater, you reveal yourself as frank, insouciant and fond of noise and movement. Laughter in E (Hek, hek) would be the English rendering is for phlegmatic and inoffensive. Children and simple persons laugh in a French I (Hih, hih), showing themselves deceitful, but timid and irresolute, and it is observed that blonds laugh "He, he!" "He, he, he!" is not the laugh of an ogre, but of one who is generous in sentiment and bold in action, though of a woman who laughs like that one should beware. But men men and women who laugh in U should be shunned like the plague, since they have given fair warning that they are gulpers, brawlers or misanthropes.—London Chronicle.

To Rule a Husband.

To rule your husband, my dear lady, do exactly as you please, but always pretend that you do as he pleases. That is where your ability comes in. Men are ruled, as children are, by the prospect of a reward. The reward of your husband is your amiability, your sweetness, your devotion and your beauty, of which you should take a constant care. Love has to be fed constantly. Always for this purpose that it is for him that you wish to remain beautiful. The woman who believes that she is asserting her independence every time she puts on a hat particularly displeasing to her husband is as clever and as intelligent as the Irishman who buys a return ticket at a railroad office and on entering the car remarks to the passengers: "I have played a good joke on the company. I have bought a return ticket, but I don't mean to come back."—Max O'Rell in "Her Royal Highness, Woman."

GRANGE REORGANIZED.

Fair Association to Hold Exercises Hall Many fair associations are arranging for and effective programs for grange exhibits, which have in all instances added very materially to the interest and success of the fairs, but consider for the Putnam county (O.) fair management to lend the Patrons Hall to its opened publicly and effectively to grange exhibits.

It is a beautiful appearance remarks the Marietta Register, substantially built and appropriately arranged for the purpose of a grange hall. This appears to be a broad statement, but the hall, although more than 40 feet, from floor to top of the massive roof, based upon a wide and long Mansard roof, and the building has been well kept up. The hall, although more than half the overall, has come to partake of the appearance of a hall.

The state board of agriculture was represented by Hon. Eli Pomeroy, President; Hon. W. H. Ellis, Secretary; Treasurer, C. M. Freeman, Hon. Thomas Ewing, Lecturer, L. G. Pomeroy, Hon. Thomas Ewing, Jr., J. Fulton Pomeroy, Hon. Seth Ewing, S. E. Brooks, Cleveland county, and Mrs. Ferguson of the executive committee. After a fine dinner served by the "Little Mission band designed Sunday school class" of the Methodist church, a hearty welcome of welcome, in good grange manner was given the visitors and in making the occasion take the form of a fair. The state board had taken a part in the fair, and the exhibits were added to those of the county and the state board made a fine showing.

Speeches were made by several prominent men, representing and also by state grange officials.

He entered school for four years, after which his guardian died, and he was obliged to leave school and earn his own living. He was married August 2, 1892, to Sarah F. Hoag of Tiverton, R. I.

The only political office he has ever held was as a member of town council for two years and was re-elected for one year. He was a charter member of the grange and joined the grange at Island, member of executive committee, member grange 1899-1902, elected master in June, 1902, and has held the office for six fourth term. He was also secretary for two years of the Rhode Island State Grange and Good Roads Association for two years. HEROIC DOCTOR SAVES MANY

Fire Is Smothered and First Rescuers Afterward Sent Down Find No Bodies, Alive or Dead.

The most appalling mine disaster in the history of the United States occurred Saturday afternoon in the little town of Cherry, Bureau County, Ill. A fire that started in the main shaft of the St. Paul Coal Company's works choked out the lives of the men working there. Thirteen rescuers who went down into a blazing shaft were reached alive to a man. A few score of survivors, crazed by smoke and singed by flame, crawled from reeking crevices in the earth to tell an incoherent story of almost incomprehensible horrors in the corridors below. The rescuers there were 565 human beings in the mine when the fire broke out—per haps a few more or less.

Saturday night the exits of the mine, from which smoke and flame had belched since 1 in the afternoon, were fastened down. This heroic remedy was decided on as a last means of extinguishing the fire in the works beneath. Above a seething furnace, in which three-fourths of the male population of the community in Ingersland, the town adjoining, lay dead for the dawning of the morning. When day came the hatches were to be opened and the toll of death begun. The cry of the widow and the orphan rang dolefully on the air.

The fire broke out at about 1:20. Fortner John Dowley, who is in charge of the elevator running from the surface to the higher of the three veins in the mine, had descended with a load of six bales of hay. On the way down the hay was ignited by his torch. Realizing the level below him in deeper veins was filled with gas and attempted to hull them into the sump of the second shaft, at the bottom of which is a pool of water. Before he could do so both the first and second shafts were afire. A strong draft coming up to the surface turned the two shafts into red hot flues. At least before the danger could be realized the mine was ablaze everywhere, and the main avenues of escape cut off.

The Cherry disaster, like every great disaster in America, developed its men of the hour, its heroes. There is in Cherry one man who is hearing of all the glory that is highest personal bravery and self-sacrifice merit. He is Dr. H. H. Iles, the St. Paul Mining Company's physician. To him twenty-five of the rescued miners owe their lives. Keeping by a bright fire from a red hot iff in which twelve of his companions were resuscitated under an a griddle, he returned six times into the inferno, entering the shaft, and each time came to the surface with a group of men he had saved. He doubted from his efforts could not it had become apparent to every one that no one else in the shaft again would be certain death.

Exploration of the mine was begun anew. Volunteers, equipped with oxygen helmets, essayed to explore the shaft. Two of them in a bucket were lowered three times down the shaft. They found no bodies. Dying or dead. At a depth of 373 feet the immersion of the mine was found to be practically normal—all degrees—indicating that the fire had burned itself out.

OFFICIALS SHOT BY ROBBER.

President and Cashier at New Albany, Ind., Wounded.

Cashier Garrett Fassel of the Merchants' National bank at New Albany, Ind., was shot and fatally wounded, and President J. K. Woodward of the same institution was wounded severely, about 11:30 o'clock Thursday morning by a man who entered the bank and ordered them to hold up their hands. The man was captured a short time afterward and it is thought the booty he has taken pelous. The man had two confederates.

Fifth is Made in Tong War.

Wong Ock was shot to death in Oakland, Cal., by a Yee gan ruse, Jim Long Fook was the victim. He was just going to work in a Chinese gambling house on Harrison street, which is kept by Gee On, president of the On Yicks, when he was shot. On Yuen Gan was shot to death the previous night.

Indicted for Grafty Deed.

John H. Young, a commander indicted in connection with the graft investigation in Mahoning County, O., was found not guilty. This is the first of the cases which has been allowed to go to the jury.

Collision on Mill Road.

Nine persons, four women and five men, were injured in a collision of two elevated railroad trains in Chicago, directly due to a cloud of smoke belched up by a railroad locomotive standing under the "L" tracks.

CROWDS OF MOURNING RELATIVES GATHER AT THE SCENE OF THE CHERRY COAL MINE DISASTER.

HOW DEADLY FIRE DAMP WORKS

Fire damp or coal gas is the most insidious danger that the coal miner faces. It is an exceedingly light, colorless and odorless gas, generated by the decay of vegetable matter. It burns with a sonorous flame, and is only dangerous as an explosive when mixed with five times its volume of air.

Coal gas, escaping into a mine shaft from cracks in the coal vein, finds its way silently into the upper chambers of the mine, its small specific gravity carrying it up over the heavier air in the corridors. Having reached a point from which it can ascend no farther, the gas begins to gather along the roof of the corridor. Miners working beneath this cloud of gas may remain for hours without knowing the danger just above them.

After a while the gas begins to mix with the air, and to sag down toward the mine floor. Then a lighted match or an unprotected miner's lamp will suddenly ignite it, running an explosion that may fill over the mine what ever the gas is located.

The explosion, usually followed by heavy falls from the roofs of the corridors, the blocking of passageways and the suffocation of those in the explosion area. With escape cut off the works begin to burn. A strong draft coming up to the surface turned the two shafts into red hot flues. At least before the danger could be realized the mine was ablaze everywhere, and the main avenues of escape cut off.

ROBS BANK SECOND TIME.

Earl Hess Bullock, a boy of 18, who robbed the State bank of Eudora, Kan., Oct. 11, returned to the bank Friday with Willie McKay, aged 17, and attempted a second robbery. In the first robbery Bullock escaped with nearly $1,000, went to Lawrence, his home, and shot Policeman Pilands who attempted to arrest him, and escaped.

When Bullock entered the Eudora bank this afternoon with his partner he found the cashier present. E. L. Wilson, cashier of the bank; Fred Starr, cashier of the Eudora Valley Bank of the same place, and Wilson's son. Bullock commanded the trio to hold up their hands, then without a word of warning, shot Starr, who fell with a bullet through his jaw. The two Wilsons had their hands high in the air by this time, while Bullock's companion stood guard at the door with two revolvers. Bullock gathered up all the money on the counter, took the bag which Starr had, then looted the safe and the two boys fled through the back door.

They ran south to a small river on the edge of town and started up the river. A posse, led by the two Wilsons, followed them and about a half mile up the river overtook the boy bandits. A running fight took place in which Bullock "as shot through the head. The McKay boy gave himself up without firing a shot. He was immediately taken to Lawrence in an auto and placed in the county jail to avoid lynching. The money was all recovered and returned to the bank. In Bullock's own taken to Eudora to a dying condition. He was shot through the temple, the ball passing clear through his head, and was not conscious after the shooting. Bullock has been reading dime novels and his parents in Kansas City blame this fact for his crimes.

VILLAGE OF CHERRY.

Small Town Populated by Miners and Their Families.

Cherry, the scene of the disaster, is a small town in Bureau County on a spur track of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, three miles north of Depue and twelve miles northeast of Princeton. It has about 1,500 inhabitants, Until the railroad built an extension south about fifty miles from Davis Junction there was nothing but a cross roads hamlet of ten or twelve families.

After the building of the railroad, however, extensive coal deposits were uncovered there and the mine where the men were killed is the property of the Illinois Coal Company, a subsidiary organization of the St. Paul Railroad. It was opened about five years ago and employed nearly 500 miners. The families of these miners, with a few businesses who owe the stores and a few business enterprises, constitute the entire population of Cherry.

THE THANKSGIVING PUMPKIN.

Ah, on Thanksgiving Day, when from east and west
From north and from south come the pilgrim and the guest,
When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board
The old broken links of reflection restored,
When the care-worried man seeks his mother's home and hearth,
And the wearied matron smiles where the girl she smiled before,
And listens the lip, and brightens the eye
That sob back the past like the rich pumpkin pie!

O fruit loved of boyhood! the old days recalling;
When with cries we would race pursuing and browning
Where, with eyes wide and ears open, we would stand
Clarting out through the dark with a candle within your hand!
When we would watch the crickets, which, we were all in terror lest they bite us!
Our chief care to hollow out the pumpkin, our instrument the bench;
Telling tales of the fairy who traveled in a pumpkin-shell coach, with two rats for steeds!

Then, thanks for thy presence!—manners Ever modest from an area or circled a fire!
Fairer hands never wrought at a pastry
Brighter eyes never sparkled
Than those!
Then, when which my mouth is too full to express
Smells the odor that the shadow may never
That the days of thy lot may be lengthened
And the frame of thy work the pumpkin
And thy life be as sweet, and its fast sun
Golden-hued!
Ah, I could sing thee my own pumpkin ode!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

THE RED MAN'S THANKSGIVING

How Five Hundred Indians Enjoy the Day—A Pony Smoke Popular Interest. It Resembles Our Day but its observance is just as intense then days among the reservation Indians as in college towns where great football games are scheduled. The Indians have their festivities in the Southwest, where the Indians have had an opportunity to become thoroughly civilized of late years. The white people find the Indians taking up the day of universal cheer than do those among dusky people.

It is a day of feasting, playing and gaming, with a big dance at night. Such sport only comes once a year in these nowadays, when they have had to forsake the savage life and take up the civilized nature revolted at the idea of work, and if the men want to hold a pony race the government agents have made farmers out of the ponies, and the day of rest and amusement is considered good for their better nature, and the government authorities are willing that Thanksgiving day shall be spent in a festal time for the reservation wards of the nation.

The Sioux hold a big feast at Pawhuska, their capital city. All members of the tribe are invited to take part in the festivities. At the beginning and end of each meal, and during the meal, the aged missionary who lives among them is called upon to offer a prayer, thanking the Great Spirit for the good things which the aged has sent them. The food is cooked in the open air, and all that could be prepared in a much cleaner and more tasteful manner, the cooking is an improvement over that of a few years ago.

The Apaches and Cheyennes are in the habit of hunting on Thanksgiving, often the Osages indulge in this expensive feast. A herd of fifty or sixty ponies is killed, and the ponies and is especially appropriate for the occasion, the tribe giving the smoke is supposed to bear all the expenses, and the tribe, in ceremonies and vegetables in the market for the occasion, the tribe, in the first day's meeting they present a good pony to the head of each family, and the Indians, a tribe consists of from 300 to 500 families, it is seen that the Indians, the Osages, being the richest reservation Indians, can well afford to give the ponies away, and generally invite several hundred guests to the Pawnee, Nez Perce and Osage reservations.

Sweet Potato Stuffing.—With one quart mashed sweet potato mix one cupful bread crumbs, one-quarter cupful butter, one beaten egg, one teaspoonful salt, one-quarter teaspoonful pepper, one teaspoonful poultry seasoning, salt and pepper the inside of the turkey before stuffing. Garnish with sausage cakes and sprigs of celery.

Thanksgiving Salad.—Take one cupful of cold, stringless beans, one cupful of cold, stringless beans, one cupful of cold, stringless beans, one cupful of cold boiled potatoes, cut in squares; pour over a French dressing and toss up lightly with cold, chopped beets. Dress the plate with lettuce.

Pumpkin Fanchonettes.—A novel and pretty manner of serving the Thanksgiving pie is to serve a small pie to fanchonette, to each person. Pour into many lined small tins the following: filling and bake for twenty-five minutes; one tablespoonful of sugar, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful cinnamon and a pinch of salt.

Cranberry Pudding.—Sift three cupfuls of flour with a level teaspoonful of salt and add to a cupful of molasses, a small cupful of sour cream, two beaten eggs and half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little boiling water; last of all beat in a cupful and a half of halved cranberries thoroughly dredged with flour; turn into a floured mold and steam for at least two hours. Eat with a hard sauce.

A Thanksgiving Cake.—Cream half a cupful of butter and a cupful and a half of sugar together; add four cupfuls of flour; two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and the whites of eight eggs beaten to a froth; flavor with lemon and bake in jelly pans. For filling make icing of the whites of four eggs and three cupfuls of sugar; divide the icing into six or a teaspoonful of chopped almonds, in the same of chopped figs; spread alternately on the layers of cake; ice the top with plain, white icing, and put "Thanksgiving" in pink letters on it.

A THANKSGIVING IDYL.

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to make melodious in his name, O most High. To show forth thy loving kindness in the morning and thy faithfulness every night. * * * Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. Being enriched in everything to all bountifulness, which cometh through us thanksgiving to God. * * * O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever. I'm the ghost of the gobbler
Who died on N. Y. grief
They took my pose, neglected bones
And gave them as a gift
Header, shed a kindly tear
For the ghost of Tom

This is the common fate of all
Just the world over and They've got to leave a pile of bones—
Why shouldn't I feel bad?
Even when Napoleon died
He left his dominoes

We are merely purposts,
Set up for a season
Not knowing what we are IT,
The sky will fall—"leaving"
O, pizen, where is thy sting?
O death, where is thy sting?

Making the Proclamation.

There is a great deal of form and ceremony about the making of the Thanksgiving proclamation. It is composed by the President himself and is most industrious written out in his own hand. When this is done the document goes to the State Department, where it is carefully copied in ornamental writing that looks like engraving on the official blue paper of that department. The next thing needed is the document is the great seal of the government. This seal is kept by the clerk of secretary and comes out only on state occasions, and it is very carefully guarded under lock and key. Its keeper will not produce it without a special warrant signed by the President, and an impression of the seal is quite a ceremony in itself. When the proclamation has been thus duly signed and sealed many copies are made of it by clerks, and one is sent to the Governor of every State in the Union. It is also given out then to the press agents, who telegraph it all over the United States. Each Governor, as he receives it, issues one himself for his State.

Political Comment.

About the "Pork Barrel."

The President spoke well and to the point about all of us keeping our fingers out of "the pork barrel" in our dealings with the simoleon which the demand for a bond issue for deep water river improvement is sure to raise. He was right in his conclusion that enterprises of this character should be strong enough to stand alone. Admitting this, it must also be admitted that if the Mississippi Valley had made a better use of the pork barrel than it has for many years, navigation of Western waters would now be much easier than it is. The delays, dangers and costs of navigation might not have made it impossible for the rivers to compete with the railways. The West has never dipped its fat into the "pork barrel" always standing in a corner of the committee room of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors as that barrel has been dipped into by other sections.

The East has long been the biggest armed in dipping to the bottom. The South has also shown an aptitude in that way, while the Pacific Coast region has in late years been able to give the middle country pointers. The Great Lakes region has always been willing to swap votes with other sections to get what it has wanted, and swapping votes between sections is, of course what Mr. Taft meant in speaking of "the pork barrel." That term is used in Washington and congressional parlance, has long meant an exchange of the support of members of one House for one another's appropriation schemes before the Rivers and Harbors Committee. These dickers have followed sectional lines to a very large extent. Every other section has been now strongly represented in them than the Mississippi Valley. The result has been that the Mississippi Valley section has received less attention than any other.

It may not be necessary to knock a hand out of a pork barrel to get the work of making a ship channel from lake to gulf well started. On the other hand, it may easily be found that votes in some sections which are needed for the work can not be had if any other way than by arrangement. When Senator Brown of Utah, the President's personal and political friend, was chairman of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors, there was a pork barrel, with the hand knocked out of it, standing in a corner of the committee room most of the time while Congress was in session. If this had practice can be terminated at one session the country will rejoice. But if it can not be and the "pork barrel" is still found standing in a corner, and ready to give up its best joints to the best divers, we trust that the Mississippi Valley representatives will not play the old and waiting game of voting for the bills of other sections and getting nothing in their own.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Not a Matter of Choice.

"If I could have my way," says Jacob J. Hill, "I should build a complete warship a year less. Perhaps one would do. I would use that $2,000,000 or $6,000,000 and start at least one thousand agricultural schools in the United States at $2,000 a year each, in the shape of model farms.

If everyone could have his way he would, if he could, without injury to his country, throw the whole navy to the crap heap and melt up every rifle in the army. The appropriations could be used in scores of ways that would be better for the nation and humanity in general than maintaining forces of defense. But so long as other nations cast guns and assemble men of war, so long must we, for our own safety, do the same thing.

There has been a great deal of murmuring recently over what is considered dangerous meddling in Asia. One may feel sure that this government will never go to war to protect the rich concessions in China or anywhere else. Chances in China as they take them in business at home. Yet if Japanese aggression should be made in relations the Aleutes bring about on the Pacific coast it would be bearable, and if they continue to replace white men at work because they will serve for a dollar a day, the conflict is forecast with reasonable certainty. We have to have the warship, however much peace societies condemn war, however much everyone dislikes the idea of it.

Still, the model farm suggestion is a good use. It is possible that the federal treasury could spare the $2,000,000 or $6,000,000 a year without a strain. Indeed, these sums and more might be saved by putting a stop to pure waste, as for instance, the free distribution of the contents of an umbrella.—Toledo Blade.

Claiming Delusions.

The President and the secretary of commission disagree entirely upon the wisdom of issuing bonds for the improvement of waterways. When the dirt ceases flying the engineer corps will have a surplus, but he would be chosen the most efficient for the remaining portion of the job. It is doubtful if anyone is to and any congressman to get back to Washington.

The waterways commission, which recently returned from Europe, after visiting the canals and waterways of control, is dead set against the bond issue. The National Harbors and Rivers Congress, which is to hold its annual meeting in Washington in December, will probably get the cold shoulder from those who were in the inland waterways. So far, the banker has been very reticent about the recommendations they will make, and it is said that their report will be held up for a year though their observations were made in two months.

It will be a difficult matter for the country to decide whether Mr. Taft, or the waterways commission, is in the right.—Toledo Blade.

More than one million dollars of land have been reclaimed from the sea by Holland since the sixteenth century.

BEARERS OF FALSE WITNESS.

President Taft Refutes Calumniator of Republicanism.

Mr. Taft was very properly indignant at the effrontery of one of the talkers at the reception in Alluquerque, who said that "if the Republicans, in the convention of 1908, had refused to promise to admit New Mexico and Arizona to Statehood the Democrats and Population about would have forced itself into the Republican platform." He added, "Now that the Republicans have entered into a contract on the subject, possibly they may let the territories in." Mr. Taft's response was prompt and pointed: "Lest it may go on without contradiction I want to say right here that there never was any chance of the passage of what Mr. Conners requested in the Republican convention. The resolution that I wanted the convention to pass on the subject of injunctions was defeated, and a resolution milder in form was put in the platform. That is history, and I do not want history to be recorded other than as we understand it to be."

Every Republican in the country will applaud the President for his reply to this accusation. The time to expose a falsehood is at the moment when it is uttered. So far as we are aware, this was the first appearance of this particular piece of mendacity. When Mr. Conners said the Republican nominees appeared in the Chicago convention and attempted to frighten the Republicans into submitting their party and candidate to the class proposals which they had advocated in Washington, the same patriotic and public-spirited business men were there to combat them. And, at Washington, the advocates of class legislation were defeated. Mr. Taft had these facts in his mind when he refuted the calumniator at Alluquerque. As the President said, the resolution, which, of course, was of an entirely different character from that of Conners, was also defeated, and the convention adopted a milder expression. The question of the admission or the accommodation of Arizona and New Mexico did not enter into the discussion or the Conners anti-injunction and prosecutorial resolution. The proposition was defeated because they were monarchial and autocratic. In the Conners' native State, where the boycott was invented, it had a certain standing which has since lost its force and effect. The boycott is alien to the ideas of equality, and even had jurisdiction which is repugnant to the American statesmen, educators, clergy, lawyers and people in general have denounced it. In American country, State and nation, it has been called to the bar of public opinion. In the history that has gone the United States Supreme Court decided that the boycott against goods which entered into trade between the States comes under the penalties prescribed by the Sherman antitrust act against interference with interstate commerce. This decision is so recent that it is well remembered by the country. The party which was formed on the principle of equal privileges before the law for all men, poor and rich, low and high, black and white, could give no quarter to demands for the creation of a favored order of lawbreakers in the country. Mr. Conners was told in Chicago to make his first speech in Illinois. He did it. Denver gave it a hospitable welcome. It obtained a prominent place in the Democratic platform. The Denver candidate advocated it on the stump. If Bryan and a Democratic Four times in all. This was written before the shipwreck mentioned in the Chicago convention. The Republicans in 1908 gave the Republican party a commission to control control of the government a Republican and an American policy will continue to prevail. Mr. Taft is a good-tempered man, but his indignation at the New Mexico attempt to falsify his party will gratify every public-spirited American, Democrat as well as Republican.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HEROIC DOCTOR SAVES MANY

Fire Is Smothered and First Rescuers Attempted to Be Lowered Down Find No Bodies, Alive or Dead.

The most appalling mine disaster in the history of the United States occurred Saturday afternoon in the little town of Cherry, Bureau County, Ill. A fire that started in the main shaft of the St. Paul Coal Company's works choked out the lives of 400 men working there. Thirteen rescuers who went down into a blazing shaft were roasted alive in a mass. A few score of survivors, blackened by smoke and singed by flame, crawled from reeking crevices in the earth to tell an incoherent story of almost inconceivable horrors in the caverns below. The rest—the men who toiled in the mine when the fire broke out—perished in the flame-swept works.

Saturday night the exits of the mine, from which smoke and flame had belched since 1:30 in the afternoon, were battened down. This heroic remedy was devised on a last guessing of extinguishing the fire in the works beneath. Above a smelting furnace, in which three-fourths of the male population of the community is imprisoned, the town waited in silent dread for the dawning of the morning. When day comes the hatches were to be opened and the roll of death begun. The cry of the widow and the orphan rang dolefully on the air.

The fire broke out at about 1:30 Saturday afternoon, when, it is in charge of the elevator running from the surface to the bottom of the three veins in the mine, had descended with a load of six bales of hay. On the way down the hay was ignited by his lamp. The blaze was quickly extinguished, and the men, had descended with a load of six bales of hay. On the way down the hay was ignited by his lamp. The blaze was quickly extinguished, and the men, who had been ordered from the mine to hold up their hands. The man was captured a short time later. It is reported that he has taken poison. The man had two confederates.

HOW DEADLY FIRE DAMP WORKS

Fire damp or coal gas is the most insidious danger that the coal miner faces. It is an exceedingly light, colorless and odorless gas, generated by the decay of vegetable matter it buries with a nonluminous flame, and is only dangerous as an explosive when mixed with five times its volume of air.

Coal gas, escaping into a mine shaft from cracks in the coal vein, finds its way silently into the upper chambers of the mine, its small specific gravity carrying it up over the heavier air in the corridors. Having reached a point from which it can ascend no farther, the gas begins to gather along the roof of the corridor. Miners working beneath this cloud of gas may remain for hours without knowing the danger just above them.

After a while the gas begins to mix with the air, and to sag down toward the mine floor. Then a lighted match or an unprotected miner's lamp will suddenly ignite it, causing an explosion that rims all over the mine where the gas is located.

The explosions are usually followed by heavy falls from the roofs of the workings, the blocking of passageways and the imprisoning of those in the corridors beyond. With escape cut off the works take fire and the deadly afterdamp, a gas caused by the explosion, settles down to smother to death everything living within its reach.

ROBS BANK SECOND TIME.

Earl Ross Hullock, a boy of 18, who robbed the State bank of Kudora, Kan., Oct. 11, returned to the bank Friday with Willie McKay, aged 17, and attempted a second robbery. The first robbery Hullock escaped with about $1,000, went to Lawrence, his home, and shot Policeman Pringle, who attempted to arrest him, and escaped.

When Hullock entered the Kudora bank, this afternoon, with his partner there were three men present: E. E. Wilson, cashier of the bank; Fred Stauffer of the Kaw Valley Bank of the same place, and Wilson's son. Hullock commanded the trio to hold up their hands, then without a word of warning, shot Starr, who fell with a bullet through his jaw. The two Wilsons had their hands high in the air when the shot fired. Hullock's companion stood guard at the door with two revolvers. Hullock gathered up all the money on the counter, took the safe, which Starr had, then locked the vault and the two boys fled through the back door.

They ran south to a small river on the edge of town and started up the river. A posse, led by the two Wilsons, followed them and about a half mile up the river overtook the boy bandits. A running fight took place in which Hullock was shot through the left lung. The boy bandit gave himself up without firing a shot. He was immediately taken to Lawrence in an auto and placed in the county jail to avoid lynching. The money was all recovered and returned to the bank. While Hullock was taken to Kudora in a dying condition. He was shot through the temple, the ball passing clear through his head, and was not conscious after the shooting. Hullock has been reading dime novels and his parents in Kansas City blame this fact for his crimes.

CHICAGO.

The weekly review of Chicago trade by R. G. Dun & Co. says:

While trading definite show decrease in numbers the liquidation involved have not increased average and reflect pressure in November settlements. Solvent payments through the banks, however, continue at a high level, and the general demand for money tailifies to wider activities in both production and distribution. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 33, against 37 last week, 23 in 1908 and 26 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 11, against 10 last week, 10 in 1908 and 7 in 1907.

Weather conditions have favored an expanding distribution of store needs and retail trade here and at the interior makes gratifying progress, stocks of seasonable merchandise undergoing rapid depletion. The demand for holiday goods and heavy weight clothing is well maintained. Wholesale houses make large forwardings of these classes of goods, men's furnishings and boots and shoes.

Bank clearings, $276,103,17, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 6.2 per cent, and compare with $196,244,659 in 1907.

NEW YORK.

Continued mild weather is helpful to building and other construction work and facilitates fall plowing and wheat sowing. The latter is at the same time is a source of considerable comfort as to its effect on retail trade on heavy dry goods, clothing and heavy wearing apparel. In other merchandise lines, however, reports are still to a high degree favorable, holiday demand is especially active and spring business is being booked in good volume, except where, as in cotton goods, high prices and uncertainty as to future prices of raw material check selling operations. The general tone of affairs commercial is buoyant. In industry generally the effect is still one of well filled order books and of full time run.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Nov. 11 were 232, against 212 last week, 267 the last week in 1908, 224 in 1907, 222 in 1906, and 165 in 1905.

VILLAGE OF CHERRY.

Small Town Populated by Miners Lost Many Men.

Cherry, the scene of the disaster, is a small town in Bureau County on a spur road of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, three miles north of Lodi, twelve miles northeast of La Salle and nine miles south of Spring Valley. Hath the railroad built an extension south about fifty miles from Davis Junction Cherry was nothing but a cross roads hamlet of ten or twelve families.

After the building of the railroad, however, extensive coal deposits were uncovered there and the mine where the men were killed is the property of the St. Paul Coal Company, a subsidiary organization of the St. Paul Railroad. It was opened about five years ago and employed nearly 500 miners. The mining machinery was run by a few townspeople who own the stores and the 5 or 6 business enterprises constitute the entire population of Cherry.

TAFT PROCLAIMS THANKSGIVING

Nov. 25 Named by President as Day of National Observance.

Thursday, Nov. 25, has been officially proclaimed by President Taft as Thanksgiving day. The President's proclamation was issued, as usual, from the State Department, where it received the official seal of the United States. Following is the text of the proclamation:

"By the President of the United States of America.

"A proclamation:

"The season of the year has returned when, in accordance with the ever great custom established by our forefathers, the people of the United States are wont to meet in their usual places of worship on a day of thanksgiving appointed by the civil magistrate to return thanks to God for the great mercies and benefits which they have enjoyed.

"During this past year we have been highly blest. No great calamities of flood or tempest or epidemic or sickness have befallen us. We have lived in quietness, undisturbed by wars or rumors of wars. Peace and the plenty of bountiful crops and of great industrial production accounts a cheerful and resolute people in all the renewed energies of beneficent industry and material and moral progress. It is altogether fitting that we should humbly and gratefully acknowledge the divine source of these blessings.

"Therefore, I hereby appoint Thursday, the 25th day of November, as a day of general thanksgiving, and I call upon the people on that day, laying aside their usual vocations, to participate in their churches and unite in appropriate services of praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington this 15th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1909, and of the independence of the United States the 134th.

"WILLIAM H. TAFT.

"By the President: P. C. Knox, Secretary of State."

MME. STEINHEIL IS ACQUITTED.

Paris Jury Declares Her Innocent of Double Murder.

Mme. Marguerite Steinheil was acquitted by a jury in Paris of the murder of her husband, Adolph Steinheil, and her mother-in-law, Mme. Japy. The verdict was rendered after two and a half hours' deliberation, during which the jury thrice summoned the president of the court for explanations, time proving that the original question was for conviction.

Political Comment.

About the "Pork Barrel."

President Taft spoke well and to the point about all of us keeping our fingers out of "the pork barrel" in our dealings with the situation which the demand for a bond issue for deep-water river improvement is sure to raise. He was right in his conclusion that enterprises of this character should be strong enough to stand alone. Admitting this, it must also be admitted that if the Mississippi Valley had made a better use of the pork barrel than it has for many years navigation of Western waters would now be much easier than it is. The delays, dangers and costs of navigation might not have made it impossible for the rivers to compete with the railways. The West has never dipped far into the "pork barrel" always standing in a corner of the committee room of the House Commerce or Rivers and Harbors as that barrel has been dipped into by other sections.

The East has long been the biggest argnet in dipping to the bottom. The South has also shown an aptitude in that way, while the Pacific Coast region has in late years been able to give the middle country pointers. The Great Lakes region has always been willing to swap votes with other sections to get what it has wanted, and swapping votes between sections is, of course what Mr. Taft meant in speaking of "the pork barrel." That term, in Washington and congressional parlance, has long meant an exchange of the support of members of the House for one another's appropriation schemes before the Rivers and Harbors Committee. These dickers have followed sectional lines to a very large extent. Every other section has been more strongly represented in them than the Mississippi Valley. The result has been that the Mississippi Valley section has received less attention than any other.

It may not be necessary to knock a head out of a pork barrel to get the work of sinking a ship channel from inches to gulf well started. On the other hand, it may prove to be found that voces in some sections which are wanted for the work can not be had in any other way than by arrangement. When Senator Burton of Ohio, the President's personal and intimate friend, was chairman of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors there was a pork barrel, with the head knocked out of it, standing in a corner of the committee room most of the time while Congress was in session. It did not seem to have to be emptied at one session the country will rejoice. But it it can not be and the "pork barrel" is still found standing in a corner, and ready to give up its best joints to the best divers, we trust that the Mississippi Valley representatives will not stay the date and waiting game of voting for the bills of the sections and getting nothing for their own.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Not a Matter of Choice.

"If I could have my way," says Jackson J. Hill, "I should build a palace of warships a year less. Perhaps one would do. I would start with a budget of $4,000,000 and start at least one thousand agricultural schools in the United States at $5,000 a year each, in the shape of model farms."

If everyone must have his way he would. If he could, without injury to his country, throw the whole navy of it to the scrap heap and melt up every rifle in the army. The appropriation could be used in scores of ways that would be better for the nation and humanity in general than maintaining forces of defense. But so long as other nations coos guns and assumed mutual war, so long, and so far, we are safety, to the same thing.

There has been a good deal of murmuring recently over what is considered dangerous meddling in Asia. One may not agree with the Chicago journal will never go to war to protect the rich investors. These men are taking their chances in China as they take them in business at home. Yet if Japanese immigration becomes so large as to cross the Isthmus Bering about on the Pacific coast become less bearable, and if they continue to replace white men at work because they will serve for a lower wage, the time may be reached with reasonable certainty. We have to have the warships, however, more peace societies condemn war, however much everyone shrinks from the loss of it.

Still, the model farm suggestion is a good one. It is possible that the federal treasury could spare the $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 a year without a strain. Indeed, these sums and more might be saved by putting a stop to such practices as, for instance, the transportation of Texas jackets of rumber seed.—Toledo Blade.

Flashing Opinions.

The President and the waterways commission disagree entirely upon the wisdom of issuing bonds for the improvement of inland rivers. Mr. Taft favors the borrowing of money for the purpose, but the minority report strongly opposes the necessity of avoiding his parsimonious for the benefit of any one section or to aid any congressman to get back to Washington.

The waterways commission, which recently returned from Europe, after viewing the canals and studying their control, is dead set against the bond issue. The National Harbors and Rivers Congress, which is to hold its annual meeting in Washington in December, will probably get the cold shoulder from those who were in the minority party. So far, the interests have been very refined about the recommendations they will make, and it is said that their report will be held up for a year though their observations were made in two months.

It will be a difficult matter for the country to decide whether Mr. Taft, or the waterways commission, is in the right.—Toledo Blade.

BEARERS OF FALSE WITNESS.

President Taft Defines Calumniator of Republicans.

Mr. Taft was very properly indignant at the effrontery of one of the talkers at the reception in Albuquerque, who said that "if the Republicans in the convention of 1908, had refused to combine to admit New Mexico and Arizona to Statehood the timeserve anti-injunction plank would have forced itself into the Republican platform." He added, "Now that the Republicans have entered into a contract on the subject, possibly they may let the territories in." Mr. Taft's resentment was prompt and pointed: "Last it may go on without contradiction I want to say right here that there never was any chance of the passage of what Mr. Iromyers requested in the Republican convention. The resolution that I wanted the convention to pass on the subject of injunctions was defeated, and a resolution milder in form was put in the platform. That is history, and I don't want history to be recorded other than as we understand it to be."

Every Republican in the country will approval the President for his rebuke to this "averlarter. The time to expose a falsehood is at the moment it is uttered. So far as we are aware, this was the first appearance of this particular piece of mendacity. When Mr. Gompers and his Democratic associates appeared in the Chicago convention and attempted to frighten the Republicans into committing their party and candidates to the Gompers agenda which they had advocated in Washington, the same patriotic and public-spirited business men were there to combat them. And, as in Washington, the advocates of chase lies were defeated. Mr. Taft had these facts in his mind when he refuted the calumniator at Albuquerque. As the President said, his own resolution, which, of course, was of an entirely different character from that of Gompers, was also defeated, the convention adopted a milder expression.

The opposition of the admission of the consolidation of Arizona and New Mexico was defeated because they were unamalgamated and autocratic, in the opinion of Congress, where the Democrats were defeated because they were unamalgamated and autocratic, in the opinion of Congress, where the Democrats stand for the work can not be done in any other way than by arrangement. When Senator Burton of Ohio, the President's personal and intimate friend, was chairman of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors there was a pork barrel, with the head knocked out of it, standing in a corner of the committee room most of the time while Congress was in session. It did not seem to have to be emptied at one session the country will rejoice. But if it can not be and the "pork barrel" is still found standing in a corner, and ready to give up its best joints to the best divers, we trust that the Mississippi Valley representatives will not stay the date and waiting game of voting for the bills of the sections and getting nothing for their own.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Not a Matter of Choice.

"If I could have my way," says Jackson J. Hill, "I should build a palace of warships a year less. Perhaps one would do. I would start with a budget of $4,000,000 and start at least one thousand agricultural schools in the United States at $5,000 a year each, in the shape of model farms."

If everyone must have his way he would. If he could, without injury to his country, throw the whole navy of it to the scrap heap and melt up every rifle in the army. The appropriation could be used in scores of ways that would be better for the nation and humanity in general than maintaining forces of defense. But so long as other nations coos guns and assumed mutual war, so long, and so far, we are safety, to the same thing.

There has been a good deal of murmuring recently over what is considered dangerous meddling in Asia. One may not agree with the Chicago journal will never go to war to protect the rich investors. These men are taking their chances in China as they take them in business at home. Yet if Japanese immigration becomes so large as to cross the Isthmus Bering about on the Pacific coast become less bearable, and if they continue to replace white men at work because they will serve for a lower wage, the time may be reached with reasonable certainty. We have to have the warships, however, more peace societies condemn war, however much everyone shrinks from the loss of it.

Still, the model farm suggestion is a good one. It is possible that the federal treasury could spare the $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 a year without a strain. Indeed, these sums and more might be saved by putting a stop to such practices as, for instance, the transportation of Texas jackets of rumber seed.—Toledo Blade.

Flashing Opinions.

The President and the waterways commission disagree entirely upon the wisdom of issuing bonds for the improvement of inland rivers. Mr. Taft favors the borrowing of money for the purpose, but the minority report strongly opposes the necessity of avoiding his parsimonious for the benefit of any one section or to aid any congressman to get back to Washington.

The waterways commission, which recently returned from Europe, after viewing the canals and studying their control, is dead set against the bond issue. The National Harbors and Rivers Congress, which is to hold its annual meeting in Washington in December, will probably get the cold shoulder from those who were in the minority party. So far, the interests have been very refined about the recommendations they will make, and it is said that their report will be held up for a year though their observations were made in two months.

It will be a difficult matter for the country to decide whether Mr. Taft, or the waterways commission, is in the right.—Toledo Blade.

Sunday School LESSON

Subject for November 21, 1909.

Paul's story of his life. II. Cor. 11: 21; 12: 10.

Golden Text: "He said unto me, my grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (II. Cor. 12: 9.)

It is quite important for us to understand why Paul gives an account of himself here. It is a fact that the greatest and best men of the world have had the bitterest enemies and have been the most shamefully treated. This is the price of greatness and goodness has to pay for existence. St. Paul was no exception to this rule. Paul wrote the First Epistle to the Corinthians to correct some errors in that church. The letter had been well received. The errors had been corrected. But those who were seeking to bring the church back to Judaism (a small minority in Corinth) had been stirred up at a time by Gentiles. "Once was I stoned." At Lystra, (Acts 14: 19.) "Thrice was I beaten with rods." And twice in 1908 the writers before the shipwreck mentioned in Acts 27 and 28. "In the Asia (Acts 19: 1 and 20: 1 and 4). Twenty-four hours floating on some piece of wreckage.

26. "Perils among false brethren." This was the worst of all, and in his arguments in Corinth he evidently alludes.

29. "And I am not weak. The going out of Paul's strength was for others is a cause of great nervous depression. Paul's great heart of sympathy Paul had!

30. "If I must needs glory." If my strength is made perfect in my infirmities, I will glory in my infirmities only.

Ch. 12: 1. "Visions and revelations." Here he shows the superiority of his opponents. He was the standard of his enemies. They had received no divine revelations as he had.

2. "I knew a man." He refers to himself not modestly puts it in the third person. "I knew a man" instead of "I." There was a glory side to Paul's life which he relished the suffering side. There was a time for such people. "In * * * out of the body." Paul believed in the twofold idea of soul and body, and speaks here of living out of the body. "Third heaven." The Jews believed in a third heaven. The serial heavens, including the atmosphere, the starry heavens, the celestial, or starry firmament; 3. The habitation of God and His angels (Grotius.) Others say the Jews believed there were seven. "Meyer thinks the twofold idea of soul and body, and speaks here of living out of the body. "Third heaven." The Jews believed in a third heaven. 4. "Caught up into Paradise." This was another revelation separate from that of verse 2. Paradise is the place of departed spirits awaiting the judgment. Not in the third heaven, but in Paradise. "Unspeakable words." Inexpressible.

7. "Thorn in the flesh." This was a thorn, or stake, which apparently was physical infirmity—doubtless some difficulty with his eyes, caused by the blinding light at his conversion. At the time his spirit was caught up into Paradise.

CASUAL OBSERVATIONS

Political and Otherwise, Local and General, Just Gathered in Passing Along.

Mr. Gompers, the head of the Federation of Labor, was sentenced to jail for defying a court decree. He appealed to a higher court and the sentence was sustained. He will again appeal. Meanwhile labor leaders threaten to bring about a general strike of thirty days if Gompers goes to jail. We have not looked into the details of the case, nor do we care to. This proposition answers every question—all men are equal before the law. The president of the federation of labor or the president of a railroad stand on an equal footing with the bad carrier before the law. Mr. Gompers stands in contempt of court, and contempt for law breeds anarchy—it is anarchy. Incidents of this kind bring both labor and the law into disrepute. When labor through its representatives defies the law the law must be vindicated, or law is a farce.

Governor Warner is down in Mexico and that is ex officio the chief executive of the great peninsular state. Therefore Pat probably wrote the Thanksgiving proclamation, and wishing in the same breath equities to the Japanese commanding the steady spread of the Oatmen house, so dangerous to those of Pat and others. We hope the governor will return safely, so that Pat may continue to contribute to "the gaiety of nations."

We believe our correspondent of last week takes the city park matter too seriously. We hope the number of our citizens is small who would part with that splendid public domain for the matter of a dollar. The writer of this was president of Charlevoix when the property was purchased of the late Amos Fox, and signed the $500 of bonds voted for that purpose. It embraces about twenty acres along the shore of the outer bay, south of the river. It is unimproved, but can be made a beautiful place. It would be little short of lunacy to part with it to receive for any other purpose. It has been the envy of neighboring towns for many years, and will, ultimately be a source of pride to every citizen of Charlevoix. This much for argument. The fact is, the city could not give a satisfactory title to the park property or any part of it, for the reason that the deed from Mr. Fox stipulates that it is sold for park purposes. There is nothing secure in a title that the city park will not be sold to anybody.

We add something in these columns recently about the value of County Clerk D. S. Payton in this Development Bureau work. We doubt if the director of any county works in territory involved, all conditions being equal, can show up better results in the work of lining up backward people. He is possessed of persuasive powers that are almost hypnotic. He can make a porcupine shed its quills or a rooster its tail feathers and never touch them. He would be a lusty man on the official board of our church when it comes time to raise the pastor's salary.

We rise to observe what we have before remarked that there is not a town of its size in the state that can show up better industrial conditions than Charlevoix at this present writing. There has not been a necessarily idle man in the town since the year was ushered in and it will go out with the dinner pail still strongly in evidence. There have been more industry of the town been so many buildings in course of construction or reconstruction than now. And the beauty of the situation is that prospects are bright for a continuance of this activity. Another feature of the industrial situation is that the growth of the city is of a character that makes "Charlevoix the Beautiful" more beautiful still.

There was a time within our memory when the Salvation Army was looked upon with contempt by good church people and mobbed by the rabble. Under wise leadership and perfect organization it endures and works. Today it is recognized wherever the sun shines as a power for good. The church and society accept it as worthy of the best orthodox cooperation. Likewise, we remember the time, not long ago, when Christian Science was scoffed at and ridiculed. Even Mark Twain, the humorlauer, was cast sage of the House work against it. It was branded by the press as a "fad" and by the churches as false doctrine. Today its strength in membership and wealth makes the adult backs of Christendom sit up and take notice. The thoughtful element of all orthodox faiths are being gathered into its fold, and its spread is little less than marvelous. Its work speaks to have stood the test of analysis and investigation, and by what about we judge of the tree if not by its fruits.

JOSS PAPER.

The Way This Popular Chinese Material Is Manufactured.

The principal districts in the Yangtze valley in China in which the manufacture of joss paper is carried on, Soushing, Ningpo, Hangtschau and Futschau, lie to the south of Shanghai. Young bamboo trunks are placed in ditches in layers with a covering of lime between them. The ditches are sometimes as large as thirty feet wide and ninety feet long. Water is poured over the mass and the contents allowed to remain until the trunks have rotted, which sometimes takes as long as three months.

After the lime water has been drawn off the mass is placed in a ditch provided with stirrers, where it is washed. The reduction to fibers takes place in mills driven by buffaloes. After a second washing the material is ready for the mold of the papermaker. In China as well as in Japan the mold consists of fine bamboo sticks. For this reason the paper is always ribbed.

The product is squeezed in wedge presses, dried on a board and then covered with tin. The pulverized metal is strewn over the sheets and hammered between the fibers with hammers of soft wood. The chief difficulty lies in this hammering and in spite of the thinness of the paper the Chinese attain a shining surface of tin. The paper is packed in bales of 2,000 or 3,200 sheets.

QUEER JAPANESE FISH.

One That Uses Its Fin as a Sail—How the Dorado Is Caught.

One of the most interesting of fish of Japanese waters is the oriental sail fish (Histiophorus orientalis), the generic name, given by Dr. Gunther, means the sail-bearer and refers to the large dorsal fin possessed by this species.

The fin stands higher than the body above it and is used as a sail before the wind. It is large fish, two feet in length and weighing 100 pounds. They swim about usually in pairs in rough and windy weather, with the large fins above the water.

It is a favorite food fish, and the annual catch is nearly 2,000,000 pounds. The sail fish is caught by means of a harpoon.

Another food fish, known as a dolphin or dorado, is sometimes caught in a curious way. The fishes congregate under a decoy bush and raft made of bamboos and are then caught by hooks baited with squids, or the decoy bush is surrounded by a seine net, and the dolphins are driven by beating the surface of the water with sticks. This fish is eaten both fresh and salt and is as great a favorite in western Japan as the salmon is in the northeast.—Zoological.

Scotch Sabbath.

For traveling, trading and all the things one must not do on the Sabbath in Scotland, of course, must ever hold the pulse. Not in the seventeenth century alone, but through all the ages and even unto the present day the Scotch Sunday has a law unto itself. There is the experience of James Payn, for instance, in the Edinburgh of only the seventies. "In the street where I first resided," he wrote, "it struck me that to judge by the drawn down blinds the people spent a good deal of their time upon the seventh day in bed. On my second Sunday, however, I was undeceived, for my landlady came up and informed me that though she had not spoken of it last Sunday, she must now draw my attention to the fact that it was not in Edinburgh to draw up the window blinds on the Sabbath and that the neighbors had begun to remark upon the 'unhallowed appearance' of her establishment, which had heretofore been a 'sight fearing home.'"

A Justifiable Protest.

"What's that?" cried the convicted housebreaker, "Five years? Well, if you people ain't the worst I ever run up against! Here I goes out in the evening an' sets life to the tallest bullin' in town—sets fire to it so that in less 'n a minute the things is a sheetin' blaze a hundred feet up into the sky. The whole population in there couldn't sent, all of you skidded to death at the sight! For four an' five hours you stood there watchin' the fire—hours of solid enjoyment, too—yet it not costin' you a cent! Why, a circus or the finest or a scandal trial wouldn't have given you half as much fun, an' you know it! An' yet you sit there an' bring in a verdict giving me five years in the penitentiary—me that's shown you all a good time an' ought to be considered as a benefactor if there was any gratitude in the human bosom!"—Exchange.

Heat as a Healer.

Heat is one of the most important of stimulants to living cells. The hot bath is the commonest means of applying heat as a therapeutic agent and is useful in a great number of conditions, especially to plethoric individuals and in advanced tuberculosis. The usefulness of local applications of hot water is well known. The general hot douche is a remarkable means to bring blood to the surface of the body, to accelerate the circulation, etc.—Exchange.

The SENTINEL has arranged with The Grand Rapids Herald to give our readers the benefit of The Herald's remarkably attractive Bargain Day offer for 1909. This is a rare opportunity for the newspaper readers of this vicinity and The SENTINEL expects to see a splendid response.

For two weeks, from December 15 to January 1, by bringing or sending $3.50 we can give you one full year's subscription to The SENTINEL, The Grand Rapids Daily Herald, The Orange Judd Farmer, and Uncle Remus' Home Magazine. You can transact all the business right here in our office. We can secure the entire combination for you. I gives you your great home paper, The SENTINEL and these other great periodicals for the trivial cost of $3.50. It is a privilege not to be overlooked.

We will send you The Grand Rapids Daily Herald—the premier daily newspaper of Western Michigan whose price alone at any other time is a flat $2.50 for one full year. We will send you The Orange Judd Farmer—a weekly farm journal, which, since 1842, has been the premier farm weekly of the middle west—for one full year. We will send you Uncle Remus' Home Magazine—a great monthly magazine which is today the nation's popular favorite for one full year.

Remember these dates. Bring your money to the office of The SENTINEL. We will see that you secure the full value of the entire combination. Don't pass it up. It's a mighty big bargain.

HAD NO TIME TO BE AFRAID.

Italian in Deadly Peril Saved Himself by Fast Trap. Few Could Duplicate.

A little knowledge is a dangerous thing to the man who handles dynamite. Italian laborers who never read up on explosives and have no superstitions about them seldom are informed through any faulty handling of their own. If your dynamite freezes, thaw it out. If you drop an auger or it, on the ground all you have to do is to pick it up.

Some Italian laborers were digging a well. They put down about a dozen feet and struck rock. One foreman improvised a ladder, drilled a hole and inserted a half pound of dynamite. He lighted an ordinary fuse and scrambled up the ladder. Before he reached the surface his unkempt laborer broke and down he tumbled almost on top of the sputtering fuse. Many a better educated man would have realized his awful peril to the certainty of every other thought. The Italian foreman whipped out his pocket knife and clipped off the burning fuse. When he appeared at the surface, grinning, he exhibited the cartridge with a bare inch of fuse sticking in it.

Friends' Judgment Faulty.

Don't laugh because your friends predict great things for you that will settle the matter. Their affection for you and interest in you may overvalue your powers, and the further fact that they are not specialists in the line for which they declare you so splendidly adapted makes their judgment not only of doubtful value, but in most cases radically wrong.

—Navagation is by no means closed here, if it is December. The schooner Allen sailed for Chicago Tuesday with 16,000 bushels of potatoes and a deck load of slabs. The steamhauge Aztec and consort arrived yesterday and will take over a million feet of Boyne City lumber to a lower lake port. This is the same outfit that got "stuck" here in last season and laid up for the winter at Boyne City.

—We are told that a string of sand hills in southern Michigan near the lake shore that a few years ago were regarded as worthless are now producing crops of grapes valued at from two to three million dollars, which have made this land worth from $100 to $500 per acre. This statement may sound exaggerated, but it is known that in recent years this great sand dune district has become one of the great grape producing regions of the world.

—Jackson Patriot: Jackson, after five months of the no-license system, has found it so much to its liking that there is every indication it will be the settled policy for years to come. Its hundreds of saloons have disappeared, but it has gained in every other way. It has more factories, more workingmen, infinitely more reverence for law, more good people, more comfortable homes. Its business even has prospering more than in years, and with the same quantity shipped of its office ship is steadily progressing in wealth and improving in moral tone.

—Most of the past week we have been favored with moderate, pleasant autumn weather and a clear sky.

—Wonder if the Grand Rapids Press has yet discovered that Charlevoix county is in the Michigan fruit belt!

—J. A. Timmer has bought the interest of Art VanAlsburg in the meat market business of J. A. Timmer & Co., and Mr. Timmer is now sole proprietor.

—Harry Assen, who was so badly scalded on the steamer Sumac a month ago, returned to his ship Monday in shape for duty, having been in the Chicago marine hospital under treatment.

—The family of the late Mrs. Chabojska ask the SENTINEL to convey their grateful thanks to the many Charlevoix friends who were so thoughtfully kind to them during their recent affliction.

—Mrs. P. O. Plank is still a guest at Baker's inn. Mr. Plank is still on South Fox Island digging his potatoes, but is expected to join his wife here early this month and proceed to their Chicago home. Mr. Plank, who owns the greater part of South Fox, has great plans for the development of the Island, which includes the planting of a large orchard.

—A dispatch from Jackson to the daily papers says: "Never going by the average number of inmates in the jail of this county was 45. Now it is only three." We presume the district court conditions at Ionia by the jail records. Jackson has always had the reputation of being a tough city, being a prison city where convicts whose terms of sentence have expired are turned loose daily.

—The sugar factory is running out sugar and everything working smoothly. Beets are coming in rapidly and will continue to come for a week yet. The best feature of the campaign is that the farmers are all pleased with results. The average price realized per ton is six dollars, and the opinion is freely expressed that beets are the most profitable crop raised in this section. There is no question about a large increase of acreage next year.

—We shall ask the next legislature to pass an act providing that all school districts which have a surplus of primary money on hand at the close of the year, shall not share in the next apportionment," said L. L. Wright, state superintendent of public instruction. "We do not want to see any of the primary school fund diverted to any other purpose than paying teachers' salaries, but there must be some way to check this annual piling up of money which cannot be used for any purpose, in districts which draw more than they can expend."

—We address just a few kind words to those two Park avenue citizens who are now sojourning in Florida. When we, who remain at home are shoveling snow and thawing out water pipes this winter don't write me to us that you are sitting under a magnolia tree and fanning yourself. Don't rub our soul into a sick turnsoil by telling about blossoming oleanders and ripening pineapples. Don't unload yourself of a lot of gush about the balmy southern sun and the frisky alligators. Don't send us any flower, perfumed spatter about the hammock on the porch. There is a limit to our long range vocabulary. The snows will melt and summer will come again. Then we shall meet these two Park avenue citizens on the street some dark night, when caught but the moon and the stars shall be witnesses. Come to think of it, the moon and stars do not shine on dark nights. Carpenter and Stockman must cut out "invidious comparisons" for this winter or we shall have revenge.

BOYVILLE

The Boy City idea is spreading throughout the country, and a, as a consequence, Charlevoix, as the national headquarters with the actual Boy City in operation, is likely to be well known.

The plan of boys being self governing, as applied to towns and cities, is called "Boyville," so there will be no confusion with the parent institution of Boy City at Charlevoix.

Recently Boyville have been organized in Jackson, Mich., and Hammond, Ind., with marvelous success. These have a full complement of officers, and enclosed the boys of these cities from 10 to 17 years of age. These two very successful Boyville are a direct result of the experiences of the Hammond and Jackson boys in Boy City last summer.

Yonkers, N. Y., a city of 100,000 inhabitants; Providence, R. I., with its quarter of a million people; Dover, N. H., the great textile manufacturing city, and Berlin, N. H., are inaugurating Boyville.

It is easy to see what this far reaching movement means to the National Boy City here. The success of Judge Brown's work in the east are very flattering. He is giving a lecture on "The Boy of Boys" and so great has been the interest aroused that in every place where he has appeared an influential citizen has been desired, so that the Judge will return wherever they desire to inaugurate a Boyville.

Edward E. Webb, the traveling representative of Boy City, has been working in Michigan, and finds great interest awakened, and a month's tour in Michigan, Missouri, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois is being arranged for Judge Brown and Mr. Hahn. Mr. Hahn is now conducting the Hammond Boyville.

—Judge Willis Brown, of the National Boy City, who is filling Ipsonum bureau lecture engagements, was in the city yesterday for a short time.

—The deer hunters are all back home again, with the average number of deer. Luckily, none of the hunters returned with bullet holes in their hides.

—Anthony Malloy, of St. James, was advised yesterday of the death of his son Dan, at Tacoma, Wash., of typhoid fever. He was about 22 years of age and went west but a little more than a year ago.

—There is no man in Charlevoix in a better position to make estimates along the line of building improvements than Harry Nicholls, of the Charlevoix Lumber Co. "From Sept. 1st, 1909, to the close of September, 1910, there will be expended $75,000 in new buildings in Charlevoix, which means buildings now being erected, in process of erection and those for which architects are now preparing plans. Inferior wood cannot be used if the figures would reach $100,000," is what Mr. Nicholls says, and he added, where is the town in Northern Michigan with better prospects?"

—John O'Neill last week sold the log hillside Warren to Sturgeon Bay (Wis.) parties, and she left for that port Friday in charge of her new owners. This little tug has a history. She was built in Buffalo in 1889, for Geo. W. Esterly & Co., (now the Charlevoix Lumber Co.) She came up the lakes in tow of a steamer of the Western Transportation Co. then woodling here. There was not water enough at the mouth of the river to float even this small craft, and she was taken over the bar by the aid of a powerful lever-stump-puller borrowed from Jeetter & Joslyn, of Elk Rapids. She was used by the local lumber company for towing logs down the lake, and for several years was "commanded" by Captain Eli Tonlonse, who died in Manistee a number of years ago. Her engineer was Robert Price, now a prosperous farmer of the Sveline peninsula. She was sold many years ago to John O'Neill, and has been used as a fishing tug. Although her hull has been rebuilt, her machinery is the same as when Eli rang the bells. A good story is told of Eli. For a time in those early days the Minnie had an engineer who was very deaf. Wishing to test the engineer's ability to recognize the signals, he sent 2 ft and asked: "Say, did you hear dem bells?" "Yes," answered the engineer. "You lie; I didn't ring!"

REFORESTRATION

What O. H. Day is Doing Over in Lenawee County in That Line.

Reforestration has been advocated by theorists and enthusiasts, for many years, but D. H. Day, of Glen Haven, says the Traverse City Record, is one of the few practical timber manufacturers in this state who has in operation an detailed plan of this character. Forty years ago, before coal was commonly used by the lake boats, they used to tie up at this port, on their way to the foot of the lakes, and by a supply of wood. As a result, the land in this neighborhood was long ago stripped of its timber, but much of it has since been replaced by a thrifty second growth.

Mr. Day, who owns many years' cut of virgin timber in the back country, recognized the future value of this second growth timber and acquired a large tract of it. He then invited Samuel J. Record, one of the government's experts, and had him examine the tract and lay out a working plan for his preservation and growth. After a very thorough examination, Mr. Record pronounced this, even at that time, one of the finest reforestration propositions he had ever seen.

Lying between beautiful Glen lake and Lake Michigan, its greatest width is about a mile, and its length two miles, its total area 1,400 acres. The growth was composed of sugar maple, beech, red oak, blackcherry, white ash, aspen and paper birch, in hardwoods. White pine, Norway pine and hemlock, in small pure stands comprised the conifers. This is an exceptional variety of woods to grow within so small a compass. Many of these trees were already eight to 11 inches in diameter.

The government forester found the growth in many places too thick, and recommended its thinning so also the cutting out of occasional old trees which had for some reason been left when the timber was first cut.

Further he laid out lines for the establishment of fire lanes and instructed Mr. Day in the methods and practing to secure the greatest amount of valuable saw material growth, and of estimating the stand from time to time, and determining the rate of such growth.

All of these instructions, Mr. Day has faithfully followed, with the result that where he had five years ago, what was thinner than a supparasse than a tract of brush land, he now has a beautiful young tract of valuable timber traversed by many lines, and kept up like a park. More than this, the care which has been exercised has resulted in almost doubling the amount of timber standing on the tract, so that from a commercial standpoint, Mr. Day is convinced that forest conservation pays, and he is now looking forward to the time when he can start to lumber his timber and send out to be used in the manufacture of furniture and other articles of commerce.

Mr. Day will not lumber this under the old wasteful methods, but will constantly make selections of the most mature timber, protecting always the smaller growth from injury, so that he may continue a source of income for himself and his heirs.

An All Star Team.

The Traverse City Record sporting editor wants to know how an "All Northern Michigan" foot-ball team would strike you. The proposition is indeed "fruit with flavor." Evidently the development Harbor miracle has found lodgment in the Record office.

The Record reviews the roster of the various northern Michigan teams and picks out the following as the "all star" aggregation, capable of winning state laurels.

Circuit Court.

The circuit court this week the Brock and Russell liquor law cases were put over to next term, as also was the Collins bribe case. Attorney Sheahan appearing for the latter.

Chairman and Hall, charged with stealing nets, entered a plea of guilty. Sentence deferred.

SUMAC'S FINE WORK

A recent issue of the Sturgeon Bay Advocate publishes a graphic account of the stranding of the steamhargo Louis Pahlow, at that port. The Pahlow was towing the Consort Delta, both lumber laden. A southeast gale was blowing and a tremendous sea running. The Pahlow was seeking shelter, but a snow storm came on just as she squared away for the harbor. Not daring to take a chance, the master of the Pahlow headed her lakeward.

Clearing away somewhat, the Pahlow was headed shoreward again, but again an intermittent snow-squall shut out the land. Then he was forced to cut more his tow, which later made port under sail. Then the Pahlow's rudder chain parted, and she was at the mercy of the gale. The Delta having reached port, the master gave the alarm. The gasoline boat of the life savers started out, but the engine failed and before it could be fixed the boat was five miles from the wreck. Meanwhile, the crew tonle a raft off the wreck and by the aid of the yawl and in the effort, one man was drowned.

In the meantime word had been sent to the government lighthouse boat Sumac, Capt. Chas. Hubbard, which was lying at the Goodrich dock. No time was lost by Mr. Hubbard in rushing to the aid of the distressed mariners. Notwithstanding the seas were rolling over the pier in a solid mass of water Capt. Hubbard shoved his good ship at top speed into it to the rescue of the ship imperiled. To get the men off the boat in the big sea, required skill and a high standard of seamanship in handling so large a craft as the Sumac, out Capt. Hubbard proved himself equal to the occasion. Coming down on the wreck head on the Sumac got as close as she could without a collision. A heaving line was then thrown aboard the Pahlow and the men were packed away. The line was made fast around the body of wheelman Anderson and he leaped overboard and was dragged to the Sumac. This maneuver was repeated until each of the three men were rescued, Mate Williams being second and Capt. Higgie last to leave the ship. The rescue was a fine piece of work and in plain sight of the coast.

But what the brave and modest Capt. Hubbard prizes most of all, is that which the soldier prizes next to the Victoria Cross—"honorable mention" in the dispatches.

The rescue work in the Pahlow disaster was reported to the lighthouse board by the inspector, Commander Edgar, U. S. Navy, and while the boat was here last week, Capt. Hubbard received a letter from the chairman of that body commending the prompt and heroic action, and stating that it would be made a part of the records of the board, and written into the official history of the service of the Sumac.

The SENTINEL congratulates. We have heard Hubbard spoken of as "the life saver of the lakes," so great that there is considerable of the "Gallagher Jim" about Hubbard; and did you ever notice that jaw—not particularly massive, but cast in a mould that destiny's master workman has labeled "finness." Above the jaw there is a forehead. Did you ever notice that? It has brains in it, and that big bunch of cerebral tissue acts with the precision and force of an electric motor when a hurry up call gets inside its walls. Once in action it goes down the line without making any noise about it.

County Normal Notes.

A very interesting letter was received by Miss Himes from Miss Annie Metcalf, class of '08, who is visiting in Washington, D. C.

The normal class visited the high school Monday morning, Nov. 22, and listened to a very interesting talk given by Hon. J. S. Crandall, of Detroit.

The following from entertained the normal class Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 24. A very pleasing program was given by the pupils, which was enjoyed by all.

A Thanksgiving program was arranged by the children of the training room. The 5th grade pupils were dressed as Pilgrims and told why they came to America and why they celebrated Thanksgiving day. Each pupil told something about the Pilgrims and Pilgrim days. Candy and apples were served.

"Well, I don't know that I should have minded be an incident for which the lecturer was usually inappropriate. The speaker who had been exhorting his audience to the cultivation of proper and meet repentance now appealed to his own personal experience.

"Look at me!" he said, laying his great hand on his broad chest. "I was once as hopeless and desperate a man as any of you, and I had sinned as. See this face!" he added, indicting on the odd column—"my left cheek is shaved about as I round it in a big child's when cut in the cheek by blade of ice, then had listened. Some one was talking in about the way, but somewhere in which I have spoken to you. I was drifting down the stream of life, down the depths of the forest, I lay down at the edge of the river and I slept for a time. In my left I made a phrase in my mind to present to the throne of God. I knew not how long I lay there, but I was awakened by the pangs of my conscientiousness I remained in the cabin. It was cold, I was hungry. I was in the dark. I found this book."

"Great heavens!" exclaimed a voice.

"Hush!" said the chairman, for the hearers that at this unexpected and terminated the exclamation. Turned and the men made a wide path for the lady who had thus spoken, and they looked out toward the platform. The speaker paused and held the book upon the page where he had recently read from.

"Put up a hymn, Sam," said a strong voice down the aisle at a certain chapter."

"It is," replied the lumberman.

"Then sing it, for God's sake!" exclaimed David, reaching out his trembling hands.

"What for?"

"Because it is alive! I am the man who preached the hole faith, and God forgive me, abandoned it even as you received it!"

The astonished lumberman handed him the Bible, and he covered it with kisses and hugged it to his breast, the crowd, carried by the spontaneity of the moment, joined in the chorus, "Jesus, the Lover of my soul." Then the speaker, reaching down, took hold of the arm and helped him to the platform.

"Be quiet, my friends," he said, with a gesture of commanding. "And now this practical lesson regarding his language we will sing the hymn, 'Jesus, the Lover of my soul.' Brother Sam, you lead the hymn."

"Why, I don't know the words," said the lumberman, good-naturedly, "how mature loves to exclude a single."

"I shall never be ashamed. I have gone to the bottom of my life and prayed for a clean glass of water." Mark, you ever heard how Boyd and he spent hours boxing against the walls of the Kaskia and praying, Lord, if I love in what manner that prayer would have me above there, I would—she! Ha! I have prayed that prayer with all that sweet, but in me, the universe is dark as hell!"

"There is light enough. It is yours we need!" said the evangelist.

"Light! Who has it? Many think they have, but it is mere fancy. They mistake the shining of rotten wood for fire!"

"And sometimes men have walked in the light without seeing it, as the ants in the sun and butterflies in the air, might say, 'Where is the sun? Where is the air?'"

"But what comfort is it, if there is light, and I cannot see it? Thousands will be well in the light of all!"

"The faith never known it has which comes to those who, in the midst of darkness, for our eyes, but for looking out of them. We are of a little child that it has to 'find the face.' Some even have to hold their eyes."

"It is so, sir, then, to me? Can you honest that somewhere and somehow I are?"

"Yes, it must be required by each man for himself. We can only tell of our faith. We say, 'I am by faith.'"

"And what is faith?"

"Ask God, my friend."

"Do—there's been done already."

"Think of your mother!"

"Mated, you are carrying this too far. A man is something more than the mere chanced product of his ancestor's blood and brains! Every one has a new and original endowment of his own. He must live and act for himself."

"I cannot bear to leave you, Mated. Join with Sam Sutton in the chorus while attic so so deeply to-night do not cause his other. It must be dangerous to reason them. I suppose there is a practical and simple application to the soul all the time, but these to me are the final of the day."

"Yes," said Mated, "the Nile flows through Egypt every day, but does it over it only once a year."

"Mated, it is time to sow the seed, isn't it?"

"So, they say. But you must remember that you feel this more deeply than I do, Dave. I am so—so I have a desire to do better, but I haven't the power. I am like a shadow in a stream trying to dance a seven-foot jig."

"Don't make light of it, Mated!"

"I don't mean to, but I should be overestimate the impressions made on me. I am not as good as you right."

"I wish you had the courage to be as good as you are."

"Dave, I am—I am trying to be what I am—that is, I should start off with you—I should never be able to follow you. My old self would get the victory. In the race I run, a man will be himself. Nature is often lightning in a short time, overcome—adding, rather guilelessly."

"What a mood you are in, Mated! It makes me shiver to hear you talk so. Here I am, full of hope and purpose; my heart on fire, believing in life, confident of the outcome and you, a better man by nature than I am, sitting down, and as a friend of yours, and the helm of despair! I ought to take ... do something! Never so life is so sun-bright. I feel that I could lay it down to save you."

"Dear fellow," said Mated, grasping his hands and choking with emotion, "you don't know how that moves me. It can't seem half as strange to you as it does to me, but I must be true to myself. If I told you I would take this step I should not be honest. 'Not in—this!' Sometimes, perhaps, I haven't much faith in life but I swear I don't believe, bad man as I am, that God would ever go clear to the bottom, without being rescued by a love like that! I'll never forget it, Dave; never! It will save me sometime; but you must not talk any more, you are tired out. Go to bed, friend brother, the only one I ever really had and loved. You will need your sleep. I have one alone, and I will sit the night out and chew the bitter cud."

"It was not until Daybreak that David and his acquaintance had by down to settle a moment's rest. When he awoke, he sprang up suddenly and saw Mated still sitting before the open door, where he felt him, pondering the great problem. They parted, one to look through the mellow and orange, and the other—

"To Australia, when drought drives the rabbits southward, the ranchmen, excited at their approach, have only to erect a woven wire fence on the north side of their farms to be perfectly safe, for the poor things in their terror will not dare to attempt to leap or creep over it. We are of a little child that it has to 'find the face.' Some even have to hold their eyes."

"It is so, sir, then, to me? Can you honest that somewhere and somehow I are?"

"Yes, it must be required by each man for himself. We can only tell of our faith. We say, 'I am by faith.'"

THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE MASTER'S CALL.

By Rev. Geo. L. Smith.

"The Master is come and calleth for thee."—John 11:28.

What joy must have thrilled the heart of Mary when this announcement was made to her by her sister Martha.

The sisters were in deep sorrow. Their brother, Lazarus, whom they fondly loved, was dead. This they knew was probably greatly intensified, too, by the absence of their friend, Jesus, and become very dear to them, and so near and dear to their departed brother, Jesus, as we believe, had been a very frequent and a very welcome guest at their Bethany home, but when their brother had been stricken down by a severe sickness, he was not there. They had sent for Him while he was still living, but He had not come. And now their brother was dead. Lazarus was no more. There must have been feelings of very great sorrow in their hearts. Jesus had been their friend, their brother, and yet, it is evident to every one of them now and then who has permitted to find the green fields on the southward side—no matter what it costs!

"Weak and bad as he had been, Dave, yet he took the first path which he saw leading up to the light.

IDIOTS CANNOT BLUSH.

Blushing Denotes Intellect and Is Caused by Desire to Please.

An eminent English medical psychologist has recently declared that it requires brains to blush; that the idiot is a stranger to the sense of moral alertness and that blushing is an achievement of which every one should be proud, for it is a positive sign of an active brain.

Blushes ramble black and neither can animals, says Pearson's Weekly. Similarly infants do not blush, although they have to do so at an early age, just as soon, in fact, as the brain begins to exercise its higher functions. Moreover, the blush cannot be caused by any ... real means; it is the mind which must be affected.

Aside from the fact that blushing has its origin in the mind, its most striking peculiarity is that it is, with rare exceptions, confined to the face, arms and neck.

While the whole body may tingle with heat, there are few known cases where the actual reddening of the skin extended further than the collar bones or the shoulder blades.

According to Darwin and Sir James Paget, our personal appearance and our moral conduct is the fundamental element in blushing. It all starts with the wish to be admired, in the more thinking of what other people thought of us.

In the early stages of civilization people were judged more for their physical beauty than for their moral attributes, and the habit of blushing arose from the fear of blame or disapproval on that account.

Then, as the race progressed and moral and intellectual qualities became more and more to be valued, the fear of blame or disapproval became, in our minds, transferred to the other and slighter fear; and cause to express itself, by mental association in the same way.

As our ideals become more complex and we kept adding to our reasons for blushing, we were not able to change our physical make-up, and continued to blush in the same old way for all the new causes.

This brings us to the difference between the bush of anger and the true blush. As anger is a mental state inflicted from without, as the mental condition which shows itself in the blush originates within.

We have seen how blushing originated in an anxiety about our personal appearance. Now, our chief concern in this regard has always been the fear, the natural sent of personal attractiveness.

Therefore, the first thought upon meeting those whom we desire to please was of our faces; and if for any reason we suspected that our faces did not please, our minds were naturally concentrated upon the defect there.

Shyness, modesty, shame—all have their foundation in the primitive love of admiration; and the blush of a girl who meets her lover is, after all, only a sublime sort of personal vanity, questioning its owner's power to please.

Sunday School LESSON

Paul on self-denial. Rom. 14:10-21.

To understand this lesson one should read the previous chapter, the whole chapter. The church at Rome was having trouble on the questions of vegetarianism and the keeping of the Sabbath. There were two classes—the over-scrupulous and the less scrupulous. One class thought it right to eat any kind of food. The other thought that all food was wicked except herbs. One class called all days alike holy. The other called the Sabbath above all other days. As has been the case ever since, and is as true today as then, each was trying to bind the conscience of the other and require him to come up to the light.

Verse 10. "Why dost thou judge thy brother?" He is here taking to the brother of weak faith and asking why he judges the one of lesser scruples. "Why dost thou also set at naught?" He is talking here to the less scrupulous brother and asking why he uses scrupulousness of his weak brother as foolishness, and hence, decided him. Judging others is one of the most common sins of Christians. As Dr. Weldon said, "Each brother is doubtful that the other was a Christian, but wanted him to be like himself in his views." Why not judge himself and let others alone?

Verse 13. "Let us therefore judge one another no more." Let us cease to unnecessarily make people misinterpret you. "It takes a bigger mind that most of us have to be able always to know what to do. So we need heavenly wisdom, which may be had by asking upon God."

17. "Righteousness." Our condition of heart. "Peace" towards man and God. "Joy." Joy is not salvation, but the fruit of it.

18. "In these things." The right spirit, love and peace of verse 17, "is acceptable to God and approved of men."

20. "Destroy not." Do not destroy the work of God in your brother's way for the sake of indulgence even in that which is in itself innocent. He now asks we must not, for the sake of such self-indulgence, inflict pain upon weak souls. These three conditions constitute the three-fold limitation which love puts upon liberty. We must not so use our liberty as to tempt our brother into what seems wrong for him, not afford an occasion for stumbling into sin, nor inflict needless pain upon him. (Abbot.)

"Destroy not." To be grieved broth-er might be induced through disgust to leave the Christian communion, and so be lost. It was the responsible dignity if possible to retain him within the Christian circle, even for the very purpose of bringing him with a great firmer grounding in Christian faith and morality. This passage implies that large class of professed Christians who show that a Christian may totally misunderstand the faith, and so be finally lost, by warning against that result as a confessedly and practically possible reality. Such texts require us to fear such a catastrophe, as we do to avoid any injury, for we ought we know has often happened. The conscience reply to this is that these warnings are the means to prevent that catastrophe, and God's grace will take care that this shall always be successful. Has it God has determined that as Christian souls shall be the very means to prevent the fall are falsehoods. God's predetermination, eternally ordained, is worthy of our faithful. But here the warning is not given to the Christian "not to scatter" but to the Christian the destroyer: "It warns him not to make another person miserable, and strives to make to remember that result arises from a certain course of his own, and so unto such people feel that result to be, so practically inevitable, that he is ready in that case to act on it." (Dr. Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Cor. 8:13.)" (Wheaton.)

16. "Your good be evil spoken of." Take in the matter of drinking strong drinks. Do not let your right to drink be evil spoken of. Endeavor as far as possible to not only do right, but to do it in such a manner as not to unnecessarily make people misinterpret you. "It takes a bigger mind that most of us have to be able always to know what to do. So we need heavenly wisdom, which may be had by asking upon God."

NICARAGUAN TYRANT WHO EXECUTED TWO AMERICANS.

JOSE SANTOS ZELAYA.

By a too hasty execution of two Americans who were alleged to be fighting with revolutionists, President Zelaya, who has ruled Nicaragua as a tyrant the last fourteen years, has greatly aided the cause of those fighting against him. The State Department at Washington took action which practically recognizes the belligerency of the Nicaraguan insurgents, and President Taft sent word to the new Nicaraguan minister at Washington which amounted to a notification that he is not welcome.

Crop Report Shows One Extra Bushel Potatoes Per Capita Over Last Year.

CORN YIELD IS NEAR RECORD

The crop reporting board of the Department of Agriculture in a preliminary report gives the indicated total production of corn for 1909 as 2,567,000,000 bushels, against 2,668,651,000 finally estimated last year, with the quality 84.2 per cent, against 86.5 last year.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of corn is 25.4 bushels, against 26.2 finally estimated last year. About 2 per cent (75,779,000 bushels) of the crop of 1908 is estimated to have been in farmers' hands on November 1, against 2.7 per cent (71,124,000 bushels) of the 1907 crop in farmers' hands at this time last year. By states the total production (thousands omitted) for 1909 and total production for 1908 are as follows:

THE BUREAU AT CHICAGO

County clerk, Charlevoix county director fa the West Michigan Development Bureau, returned Friday from Chicago, where for ten days he assisted in showing up Western Michigan products in the big U. S Land and Irrigation Exhibit.

Mr. Payton is enthusiastic and eloquent in his description of the West Michigan exhibit, which he says, was the envy of all other exhibitors. "Michigan has them all beat," was an expression heard often.

"Fruit with Flavor," was the legend that stood forth in large letters at the Michigan fruit section, and people were given an opportunity to test the flavor when the statement was questioned. The results and valuable benefits derived from the work of the Bureau in Chicago were plainly apparent every day.

The western Michigan exhibit consisted of products from the following counties: Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim, Leelanau, Kalkaska, Grand Traverse, Benzie, Wexford, Manistee, Mason, Lake, Oceana, Newaygo, Muskegon and Kent. The railroads and boat lines entering the territory are included in the bureau.

The Chicago Tribune, under whose auspices the United States Land and Irrigation exhibition is being held, in commenting on the show says: "Seeds at show generally are put up in small jars. The Western Michigan Development bureau has brought in an innovation. Their seeds, some of which are worth $50 a bushel, are in bushel boxes, with an expert in charge of them to tell visiting farmers what they will do. There are too bushels of seeds, a record-breaking quantity, in the exhibit."

And this is the smaller part of the exhibit. More than five hundred bushels of apples are displayed. Large pillars contain 300 bushels, in each pillar the word "Michigan" being worked with green apples, surrounded with red ones; over two hundred bushels of choicest specimens are exhibited in fancy basket boxes. Fifty bushels of grapes are used in decoration purposes. In extra large sized exhibition jars are shown preserved specimens of fruit on the limb and in natural colors.

Full appreciation of the merit of the Michigan exhibit is brought home to all who visit the display by emphasis of the fact that while the fruit exhibits of the western states are products of expert growers whose time is devoted exclusively to the growing of fruit for exhibition purposes, the Michigan exhibit is the regular product of growers for market.

The Big Chicago Land Show.

A Chicago special says: "I guess Michigan is on the map, looks as if they had something to show over there."

"It's one of the finest exhibits of the whole show."

These and similar expressions were heard on all sides at the opening of the big Land Exposition in the Coliseum. It is a fact that the Michigan exhibit is one of the finest if not the very finest of the whole show. There are apples from everywhere, and some from nowhere, but they haven't anything over Michigan in looks, and they have to admit our superiority in flavor.

We believe this is one of the biggest things ever given in Chicago, and without waiting for the close of the exposition it can now be said, it is a huge success, and already there is talk of continuing it as an annual feature

A dispatch to the Detroit News says the Anti-saloon League would make application to Judge Shepherd in the Mackinaw circuit court early this week, for a mandamus to compel the Mackinaw county board of supervisors to reconvene and provide for submitting the local option question to the electors next April. Tuesday & March state attorneys for the league were preparing the papers.

Western Michigan nurserymen report an unprecedented sale of young apple trees and indications point to the fact that the immediate future will witness a large and steady development of commercial apple raising in the famous fruit belt, extending through several counties.

Central Lake Torch: Albert Harwood, of Banks, was in town the other day, and in conversation told the Torch man that he sold this year from his five-acre orchard $552.99. Beside this he fed to his hogs a large quantity, and gave away several wagon loads. The fact that he was unable to secure help in picking lost him considerable but quality fruit which was blown off the trees, and which he was unable to sort and clean into marketable shape without help. The orchard was sprayed three times. The total expenditure for help in picking was only $1. Mr. Harwood estimates his total crop at about 1,600 bushels.

Manistee Herald: Two cases of smallpox are quarantined in this village in the persons of O. A. Thompson and Ed Black at the home of the former. Dr. Beaver, the township health officer, examined both cases last Tuesday and declared the disease to be smallpox and ordered the sum houses up. Since then Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hoell of Elmira, have come down with the disease and have been quarantined. It is supposed that the disease was brought here by Mrs. J. L. Thompson, who recently returned from a trip west. She had a rash and is reported having stopped on her way home for a diagnose of her case by a physician at St. Paul. All the people who have come down with the disease lived at the Thompson house or visited there. Charlevoix Lake is standing guard at camp 26 to keep the woodmen in the camp. Two more men there have fallen victims to smallpox and been taken to the pest house at Alba.

Traverse City Record: The apple crop of Western Michigan is now disposed of and the growers have had time to sit back and "take stock." The array of figures presented in connection with Western Michigan's apple industry is a wonderful one, and shows what an important part the apple crop plays in the economics of this section of the state. We have much to say concerning the orchards of Grand Traverse but apple growing is not confined to the northern part of the western half of the state by any means. Pennville orchards this year netted their owners nearly $200,000 and produced a crop of apples variously estimated from 75,000 to 100,000 barrels. Most of the crop sold on the trees. Orchards which formerly sold for a song are now valued at fabulous prices, and are yielding their owners in many instances $500 per acre and upwards. It is reported on good authority that one orchard of 40 acres in Allegan county was recently sold for $75,000 and the purchaser expects to double his money within the next five years. Western Michigan nurserymen report an unprecedented sale of young apple trees and indications point to the fact that the immediate future will witness a large and steady development of commercial apple raising in the famous fruit belt, extending through several counties.

Traverse City Special: "I only did what I should," said Henry Gauchier this morning as he tossed about in pain, his handsome features swathed in bandages, as were also his hands and arms and the whole upper part of his body. Gauchier was almost cooked in a fire last night, but by risking his own life he saved two little sons of Joseph Lavassar, his employer. The Lavassars live in Leelanau county near Provemont and had up to yesterday, one of the largest barns in the county. In the barn besides the stock there was enough hay to last well into spring, a large quantity of grain and every farm implement used on the place. Lavassar's four year-old son took matches and with his little brother, went into the barn to play, choosing an open space between two big mows bulging with hay. In a moment the hay had caught fire. When he saw it the barn was burning, the older boy became so frightened that he lost his reason and instead of running outside, crawled upon the hay to the high peak of the mow. When Gaucher arrived on the scene the whole place was a sheet of flame, but he burst through and found the younger boy petrified by terror, while high above was the other brother. Gaucher threw the sobbing two year-old in safety and then tried to induce the other boy to jump. His efforts failing, he climbed up on one side of the mow through the fire until he grasped the youngster. Then he slid down through the flames and ran for the open air. The two year-old was unhurt, but the four year-old boy was seriously burned. Gaucher will recover. Gaucher is a fine looking young man and is very popular in the neighborhood. He probably will be badly scarred about the face, but he doesn't seem to worry. The livestock was saved. The loss is heavy, with no insurance.

THE GRANGE

A LIVE INSTITUTION.

Center County Pomona Grange of Pennsylvania Does Things.

It Has a Fire Insurance Company, Has Organized Its Own Fair Association and Operates a Patrons' Rural Telephone Company With Fourteen Branch Organizations and Is Now Talking About a Grange Bank.

Thirty-four years ago Center county Pomona grange of Pennsylvania was organized. During those years it has established several business enterprises such as those named in the heading of this article. First the Grange Fire Insurance company was organized in the spring of 1876, with an insurance of $236,000, and was incorporated by the state under the laws governing insurance companies. The plans for its government were drawn by its own membership, so that there is not a rule or law that has not been devised and perfected by the county grange.

Its sole purpose is to insure the most humble as well as the most affluent member who has a home that the order has pledged itself to protect. The company has now been in active operation for thirty-three years and carries a business of $12,570,262 at an average cost of 21 cents per $100 of actual insurance for thirty-three years, which is 12 cents less per $100 than the average cost of all mutual companies doing business in Pennsylvania for the same period and from 2 to 7 cents less per $100 than the average cost to all other companies doing business in Center county for the same length of time. The average cost in all mutual companies doing business in Pennsylvania for the last year was 49 cents per $100 of insurance.

"Our company," says the grange editor of the Northern Stockman, "has paid to dishonest Patrons who lost their homes by fire since its organization in 1876 $126,445.23. It is doubtful whether any other fraternal organization has contributed a larger amount for relief of its distressed membership during the same period of time."

A Big Grange Fair.

In 1891 the county grange purchased twenty-eight acres of land at Center Hall, which were converted into a park and now has one of the finest fair grounds in Pennsylvania. This association has no debt and pays all its fair premiums in cash. The county grange has also helped to organize and capitalize other business enterprises in the interests of the Order, leading holding stock in national banks that are worth to the market $100 per share and ten shares in building and loan associations that are now worth $75 per share. It also holds shares of stock in fourteen branch telephone companies.

Patrons' Rural Telephone Company.

Then the county grange took up another enterprise which has been carried forward with marked success. In 1905 it organized the Patrons' Rural Telephone company, which has now under its management fourteen branch companies, with an authorized paid up capital of $6,000 under an incorporated company with an authorized capital of $30,000, and has upward of 250 phones in use on its lines, giving service to its members at from $5 to $7 less per instrument than that given by the old line companies, all brought about in the short period of three years by the united and loyal support of the sovereignty of the Order.

Early Mastery of Languages.

The mastery of many languages and the ability to read and write at almost incredibly early ages is not a modern evolution. In the sixteenth century history tells us of one Charles Benet, known as the "man child of Manchester," of whom it was said in the literal words of the old English: "At 2 years of age he doth speak Latine, Greek and Hebrew, though never taught these languages."

Coquetry of Golf.

Golf is the coquette of games. It always lures you on and always evades you. Ten years ago I thought I had nearly got it. I think so to-day, and ten years hence I may still have the same delusion; but say yourling cards will show, I fear, that the coquette has not yet been caught. Her Lesson In Loving

It Was a Severe One, but It Brought Her Happiness

By LOUISE OLNEY

Copyright, 1907, by Associated Literary Press.

After a good night so restless that her mother sighed at the change in her daughter, Anne Marlow went to her room and locked the door. Throwing aside her hat, cloak, she turned on all the lights and sat and gazed in her clinging yellow gown, studied herself in the mirror.

Richard Thinder had not asked for a single dance, but had devoted himself to Melita Porter. Anne knew to her sorrow that this had been the order of things for some time. Morris Trevor also had not come near. And only a year ago, before she had broken her engagement with Richard, these two had been shown enough to satisfy her conceit. Surely at twenty-seven a woman has not lost the power to attract? Was she becoming a wallflower?

The mirror was reassuring. Her fine brown eyes were bright and clear, her hearty dark hair perfectly arranged, her face fair and pleasing, not fatally disheartened. She smiled rueful, and a dimple developed in her cheek. That when her face fell to repose she looked critically that she looked a little discouraged, that there were two or three months dropped and two crows feet had appeared in her clear skin.

Anne knew to take stock of herself. Twenty she had accepted her age and threw it with the rest of the women. Seven the fact that her friends were becoming gray, that her dolly had overtaken her, invited her less often to share their pleasures. "The girls" no longer dropped in to gossip of clothes and men; gradually she had fallen out of the family things had changed. Her brother, always boring, was now positively dull with the friendship of fourteen, remarried, when she was forgiven with him, that she was beginning a cross old maid. Jean assumed condescending, pompous airs at her. She was quite aware that it was Richard's attentions to Melita Porter, Jean's pose to make the first move to reconcile Richard and herself, that indulged to herself that the fault had been partly hers, that she was a fool and cried herself to sleep. But she had never cried before, and it was good that, as she lay thinking, it came to her that her tears for months had really come for Morris. Morris was a fool she decided as she rose, bathed her face, dressed and dressed for the street. She had scarcely finished when the clang bell rang.

She stood nervously adjusting her collar in the mirror a little sensitive about going down into the presence of the family adds resumed on her unwonted grievance, when she noted that she looked positively cross. In under her seven old, she flashed a trade herself smile, and the dimple again showed her. Then she stared for the door just in time to encounter Richard. He was coming with an old gear to awaken her. Yesterday she would have exculpated to be another today she hoped as he accompanied back to life come to drive drawing. Unless she heard the breakfast bell she started slowly downstairs, and as Richard came to her side she slipped her own arms spoken for her mother in an envious pose. Involuntarily she pouted. Her father replied.

"Why, pretty, mother, this needs a lesson in loving. She will have to enter till the fools out that no woman in loved and cherished unless he is lag—brable. She will not be her old imperative self till she stops being bored and sarcastic and is pleased and interested in the people who love her. Instead of giving orders and nothing but thinking of others will do her any good."

"Hut, Fred," her mother's voice pouted. Richard never knew what had slight our Morris her injury Forever. Do you suppose they recent her treatment of Richard? And she is never about when our other friends call and never go in the morning. Have it occurred to you that Richard may have shown her he wanted to break with her? Up! Up! Or he may be out—to Molly Porter.

"Nonsense! Richard simply had a bad mark, a soft respect. She dissolved him for nothing, and I don't blame him for being sore. Anne is a high and proper. Perhaps he is getting in no such mistake. Anne's young friends are going to let the course of one disagreeable for him. He did cross and sour himself. Anne's fault, I repeat that he was all cut up about it, and I don't wonder. Anne's pride is high herself. She hasn't done so, Well, time is remedy this kiss. Kiss, another cup, dear, please." Anne fled to her room, her room, her cheeks and eyes ablaze. Richard in her heart. How dared they discuss her affairs and side with Richard? Then it came upon her that these two were only proud of the courage in her, and that she was a fool to be so much, lonely—her and had a right to say to each other what they thought about their own child.

And there were rebels—but was the result of it. What should she do? After a moment's hesitation she went quietly down and took her place at the table, telling them good morning in a voice so low that they stared at her. Then it came upon her that these two were only proud of the courage in her, and that she was a fool to be so much lonely—her and had a right to say to each other what they thought about their own child.

Leaving her father at his office, she drove to the Marlowe home by "date" on the links with her brother. She had no sense of pleasure in the bracing weather off by herself and thinks. At home she was greeted by her mother in the fearful about Richard's supposed change of heart. Melita Porter, indeed! Her poor child! Her poor child! Her terrible things had happened. She suddenly realized that she was sick and tired of her own life. She turned into a quiet street and drove slowly along. Suddenly seeing where she went, Anne she raised in horror at the sight of a girl who dared lift i this morning. Anne, I must say."

"Why, I put on three dances," she answered coolly. "Harry says I'm getting to be a cross old maid. Is that Harry, who was crossing with an old gear to awaken her. DANGER AHEAD IN THE COST OF LIVING. SAYS J. J. HILL.

After Visit to White House, Railway Builder Sounds Note of Warning and Predicts Disaster.

"History shows that the high cost of living is the beginning of every national decline," philosophized James J. Hill in Washington the other day, after he had talked with the President. "Of course it is better that men should be working for $2 a day while they are paying 20 cents a pound for meat than to be without work and have the price of food at the present level, but the future of the country would be more certainly secured if a reduction in the cost of living could be brought about."

Mr. Hill did not wish to go into an explanation of his views or formulate a panacea for the ill that he sees is threatening the country. Generally speaking, however, he thought that economy—the cutting down of useless expenditures—individual and governmental—would go further than anything else toward aiding in improvement of conditions.

Mr. Hill is serious in his view of the danger threatening the country in the constant increase in the cost of living. He has studied history, and he finds he can point to no wise effected. As Mr. Hill sees it, there must be deep and serious consideration and without unnecessary delay of the questions dealing with the cost of food and fuel of the people of the country. Prosperity is not the cure, he admits, although it is a help.

BIG APPLE YIELD.

Thirty-five million barrels, or 12,000,000 barrels more than in 1908, is the estimated apple crop of the United States and Canada this season, according to Ben H. Hite, secretary manager of the second national apple show in Spokane.

The international Apple Shippers' Association has issued a statement that the crop in the New England States is 20 per cent in excess of 1908, while the crop yield in the Central States is about 15 per cent below last year, and in the Middle Western States report a crop double that of last season, when the yield was slight.

Growers in the Southern States report a crop from 125 to 150 per cent larger than in 1908. The Pacific group will have a smaller crop than last year, but the decrease in Idaho, Washington and New Mexico are more than made up by the big yield in Oregon, so that the entire crop of the five fully as large as the previous season.

Losses are shown in reports from New York, New Hampshire, Kansas and Oklahoma. Insect pests, scabies and other States have gone. The Dominion of Canada, not including Nova Scotia, shows a gain of 75 per cent.

A Jewish hospital is about to be erected in Leeds, England.

The woman clerks in Louisworth, Kan., have formed an organization.

International Longshoremen have increased their membership in eleven years from 8,899 to 58,000.

The Illinois State Federation of Labor has adopted a decided stand in opposition to local option.

Steam Boiler Makers' Society of Great Britain has 12,000 members, with 1,000 in reserve fund.

The Chicago Federation of Labor is decidedly opposed to a measure to limit women's working time to ten hours a day.

Amalgamated Carpenters' Union reports a membership of 3,256, a net increase of 164 for the year, ending Oct. 31, the number of locals is forty-nine, a gain of three.

The long standing differences between the Stage Employes and International Theatrical State Employes' Unions have been adjusted to their mutual benefit.

The National Federation of Cotton Weavers, at its recent annual convention, adopted a resolution to change the name of their organization to National Federation of Cloth Weavers.

The executive committee, board of the Metal Polishers and Buffers' International Union has announced that it will start a fight in every State in the Union for the eight-hour day, and that it has set aside a large fund to carry on this campaign.

Upon recommendation of the labor organizations of Oklahoma, the State board of public affairs has adopted a rule that hereafter no contractor who is not willing to stipulate that only union labor shall be employed and union rates paid for such labor will be permitted to bid on State work.

The Federation of Labor of the State of New York has declared its belief in women suffrage as a necessary step towards the betterment of the industrial interests, not of women wage workers only, but of men as well.

An official inquiry has recently been made in St. Petersburg, Russia, with reference to the medical assistance furnished workmen by the different factories. One-third of the enterprises give no medical assistance at all, and forty-five also give no drugs. These regulations are likely to grow out of the strike.

A noticeable feature in recent child labor legislation in this country has been the increasing emphasis placed upon the proof of age requirements of children who desire to go to work.

At the request of the California State Federation of Labor the San Francisco Bar Association passed a resolution, at four to nace, with the federation in the matter of organizing supreme judges.

The official organ of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes of America, the Motorman and Conductor, shows a substantial growth, having in its last two years gold off a large deficit, and is now on a paying basis.

SOME RESCUED ALIVE FROM PIT AT CHERRY

Miners Thought Dead for Seven Days Are Snatched from Their Living Tomb.

WILD SCENE IN LITTLE TOWN

Twenty one men rose from the grave in Cherry, Ill., Saturday. Twenty-one men, pronounced dead days ago by all the mining experts in Illinois, came from the depths of the St. Paul mine where, with 259 others, they had been entombed for seven days, and when the people looked at them they were alive. Cherry saw a tragedy one Saturday. The next it witnessed a miracle.

But, just when the hopes of the waiting wives of the remaining entombed miners were at their highest, when the rescuers seemed likely to bring scores of other living men to the surface, the sickening news came that the mine was again on fire. At midnight a small fire broke out, cutting off the rescue work. Fire apparatus had to be lowered and a stream of water had again to be turned into the mine.

The news at the rescue of living men swept through the village like a telepathic wave. It transformed a community in which was growing the deepest pits of woe into a community delirious with joy, intoxicated with hope. When the one cage forth from the shaft they found the whole community gathered and cheering as one. When their eyes, accustomed for a week to the inky blackness of a sealed-up mine, were able to take in the sights around them one of the first things that met their gaze was the pitchup coffins in which, by all the laws of science and engineering, they were to

C. About fifty students were asleep in the dormitory over the library when the fire was discovered, but all escaped. The flames, which originated in the boiler room, consumed rare volumes worth at least $10,000.

TO SEIZE BLEACHED FLOUR.

Secretary Wilson Takes Drastic Action—Millers' Stocks Halted.

Upon refusal of millers of bleached flour to heed the government's warning to cease the manufacture of that article of food has led Secretary Wilson to take drastic action. An order has been issued by him to inspectors of the department of agriculture to seize all stocks of bleached flour in the city, and information has been received that a concerted movement has been signaled, including several hundred carloads, were taken in the west. It is argued that about 25,000,000 worth of bleached flour was manufactured in the United States in 1909 out of what remains of it is in the east, especially in and about New York.

DISSOLVE OIL TRUST IS COURT'S DECISION

Standard of New Jersey, Rockefeller's Head Company, Branded as an Illegal Monopoly.

GOVERNMENT IS THE VICTOR

Ruling of St. Paul Tribunal Regarded as Death Blow, but Corporation Plans Appeal.

The federal Circuit Court in St. Paul Saturday stamped the Standard Oil Company as an illegal corporation in restraint of trade, and a monopoly, and decreed its dissolution within thirty days. In its decision the court is believed to have dealt the Standard Oil Company what will prove to be its death blow. It has in fact placed a weapon in the hands of the government that will enable it to wipe out of existence all similar combinations. The company affected is the Standard of New Jersey, the king pin of all the Rockefeller oil concerns.

By the court's action in a sweeping victory over the oil trust, for there is nothing in the decision to soften the severity of the blow, I and I are tention made by the government during its three years' fight against the greatest of industrial trusts was sustained by the court.

The decision is based upon the Sherman antitrust act of 1890, the form and methods which it pursues in business being declared contrary to and in direct violation of the law. I and I are that act. Section 1 declares every contract or combination in the form of trust or trade and commerce to be illegal, while Section 2 prohibits any monopoly or attempted monopoly, or any combination or attempted combination, for the purpose of securing a monopoly of trade. The law, according to the court, is plain and explicit, and by inference it can readily be applied to nearly all of the great industrial combinations of the day.

The purpose of the government, should the Supreme Court upheld the decision, is declared to be that it will be speedily applied to all combinations and trusts which have so markedly changed industrial conditions in the United States during the past decade. What will be the ultimate effect of the decision of the county tomorrow, the Supreme Court of the United States, in which the case will go direct, remains in the view held by the Circuit Court, is the question that is being asked on all sides. The attorneys for the government are reported to say that it will revolutionize the industrial world of the country, and will immediately throw back into the hands of smaller corporations the business which the trust has taken from them. There will, it is claimed, be a return to the "industrial revivalism of forties or fifteen years ago, when the man or the corporation with comparatively limited capital could enter upon the sea of commerce with the assurance that he would get a fair run and that he would not be gobbled up by a greater and more powerful rival.

BOY'S CAPTOR IS KILLED.

Outlaw Shot After Refusing to Surrender at Tucson.

The unknown tramp who, for twenty-four hours, held Harry Garrett captive in an isolated cottage on the Garrett ranch house, near Boise, Idaho, threatening death to the lad, should an attempt to arrest him be made, was shot and killed in the house when he made a break after the boy escaped. Wounded by his long vigil, the outlaw fell from the house, and the boy immediately seized the opportunity to jump from a window and escape to the neighbors, and a moment later the boy rushed from the direction of the house. The men had surrounded the house, the men called on the desperado to surrender. He refused to do so, and a volley of shots were fired through the floor from the room below.

James Slattery Starves to Death.

Starvation, self-inflicted, was the death of a well-to-do Philadelphia man, who starved to death in a locked room in his home, the result of a long illness, according to the coroner in the attic of a livery stable, for almost a week. His experience, as time by the boy, was a terrible ordeal, and he was seen almost simultaneously by Patrolman Donnell and Detective Sergeant Gorman, who were captured and charged with Blumenthal. At that time American feeling was aroused and a number of United States vessels were ordered to Cuban waters. An immediate outbreak of war between the United States and Spain was averted only by the prompt action of Spain for the action of the Cuban captain general and by the payment of indemnity to families of the victims.

CHICAGO.

The weekly review of Chicago trade by R. G. Dun & Co. says: Trade developments remain kaleidoscopic views as to the future, and farther testimony to the progress made is furnished by the bank reports, which reflect gratifying expansion in both deposits and discounts. Credits generally are strengthened by the improved condition of collections throughout the western territory, although the trading demands yet show more than normal. Seasonable weather stimulated winter demand for necessities, and the leading branches of distribution exhibit increasing activity in current shipments and forward bookings. Retail trade here and at the interior equals the best expectations. Heavy absorption is noted of winter clothing, blankets, worsteds, footwear and food supplies, most stocks undergoing gratifying reductions. Supplementary orders are numerous in wholesale dry goods and other staples, many requiring immediate forwarding and indicating that consumption exceeds that for which provision was previously made by retailers. Industry declines Another rise in costs of cotton fabrics has also lessened urgent buying against future needs.

Prices of food products and other necessities continue to advance and cause enforced economies, but increased purchasing power in consumer on the score prospects for very encouraging results in Christmas trade.

Bank clearings, $877,816,907, exceed those of the corresponding week by 25.8 per cent and exceed those with $196,956,852 in 1907.

Political Comment.

Lynchers of the Law.

While at Savannah, Ga., President Taft said a few things on "the wisdom and necessity of following the law as it is" that deserve to be reprinted in every newspaper of this country.

They may savor of unjust criticism if the fanatics who lynch would not stop at "the ethical lynching of the law itself." But they will appeal to the common sense and patriotism of all other citizens. The President begins:

I know that sometimes in the zeal of enthusiasm of reform there is an impatience with legal limitations and statutes that seems to be directed against that reform, or to prevent its immediate accomplishment, such as to lead me to disregard it or to throw back on the people the responsibility of the executive officer that he has to fulfill the duties of his office. If the people want a great reform they must be patient and wait for the time when there must be a reduction of all taxes to a point where it is worth while to pay the taxes, and when there will be a reduction of all taxes to a point where it is worth while to pay the taxes, and when there will be a reduction of all taxes to a point where it is worth while to pay the taxes, and when there will be a reduction of all taxes to a

NEW STEEL STEAMER

Northern Michigan Transportation Company Proposes to Build New Vessel.

The proposed new palatial steamer for the Northern Michigan Transportation Company referred to a short time ago in these columns is attracting a great deal of interest at the present time because the construction of the craft practically depends upon the provision of adequate docking facilities in Chicago. The company has plans prepared for a steamer to cost near $ half million dollars and stands ready to let the contract for its construction as soon as assurance is forthcoming that a pier will be built at which such a boat can be tied up without danger of wrecking it. The boat will be in commission sixteen months after it is known that the steamer can be docked at Chicago. A slip or shipyard basin at least 500 feet long and 120 feet wide is needed to accommodate a steamer of the dimensions proposed. There is no such basin available near the Chicago river mouth, and the boat could not get up the river past the bridge.

Plans for a steel steamer 400 feet long and fifty feet wide to carry passengers exclusively have been prepared for the company by W. J. Wood, a Chicago naval designer. The boat will have a normal speed of twenty miles and a maximum speed of twenty-two miles an hour. It will have four passenger decks, and sleeping accommodations for 700 passengers. It is intended to have the new steamer make three trips a week between Chicago, Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Mackinac Island, supplementing the service of the Manitou. Every precaution to insure the comfort and safety of the passengers has been taken.

Steel construction as far as possible has been specified and the woodwork is to be made fireproof by chemical treatment. There will be thirty-two private suites with parlor and bath, and every room will have hot and cold running water. The main dining room is planned to seat 215 persons at one time. Twin screws driven by quadruple expansion engines of 3,000 horse power will propel the boat. Twenty tons of coal an hour will be burned under the boilers. Accommodations for a crew of 250 are provided. The steamer will cost about $500,000 if it is built. The company is anxious to give the order for its construction, but—"no dock, no boat," is the way E. W. Seymour, general manager for the company, expresses it.—Ludington Chronicle.

CLAWS OF BIRDS.

The Toes of Those That Perch and of Those That Run.

Let us note that the art of standing begins with birds. Frogs all, and, as far as I know, every reptile, lack its art, crocodile, alligator of tortoise, lays its tenty on the ground when not actually carrying it. And these have each four fat legs. Contrast the flamingo, which, having only two, and those like willow wands, rocks up one of them and sleeps perched high on the other, like a mitten on its stem.

Note also that one toe has been allotted discarded by birds as superfluous. The germ or bud must be there, for the duckling first has produced a fifth toe under some influence of the poultry yard, but no natural bird has more than four.

Except in swifts, which never perch, but cling to rocks and walls, one is turned backward, and by a cunning contrivance the act of bending the leg draws them all automatically together. So a hen closes its toes at every step it takes, as if it grasped something, and, of course, when it settles down on its roost they grasp that tight and hold it fast till morning.

But to birds that do not perch this mechanism is only an incumbrance, so many of them, like the plovers, abolish the hind toe entirely, and the prince of all two legged runners, the ostrich, has got rid of one of the front toes also, retaining only two.—London Strand Magazine.

BOGUS PICTURES.

Counterfeit Antiques Openly Manufactured in Italy.

Speaking of the manufacture of counterfeit paintings in Italy, a writer in the National Review says that some three genuine old pictures are easily discovered in peasants' houses, but rarely in good condition.

The peasants have a dreadfully way of painting pictures with smoke to clean them. By so doing they take off not only the varnish, but the precious patina and certain colors. In many cases leaving only the more gold background supposing the picture is of that date and the more deeply incised lines. Those wrecks are eagerly bought for a trifle by art dealers, who employ skilled experts to restore or rather to remake them on the basis of the original outlines.

Pictures of the early period with gold backgrounds and quaint drapery models are regularly manufactured, especially at Siena, where the panels can be seen openly drying before the shop doors. Their foundation is a panel properly worm eaten and chemically treated, painted on the gesso ground that was the basis for all pictures of that epoch and to which they owe their luminous qualities.

Such pictures are often made up out of a number of really old but ruined pictures and are an ingenious exercise that requires dexterity, taste and knowledge to construct.

No Time For Little Boys.

An Edinburgh gentleman died the other day, and a small boy, open eyed and silent, watched while the coffin was placed in the hearse.

"Have you said your prayers, Willie?" said his mother, after talking him into bed that night.

"No, mamma," said Willie.

"Well, say them now."

"I'm not going to say any prayers tonight," replied Willie, with the air of one who had fully made up his mind.

"But you must."

"No, not tonight," Willie persisted.

"Why not?" asked the mother in astonishment.

"It's no use," said Willie. "They will be so busy in heaven tonight unpacking Mr. Jones that they will have no time to listen to the prayers of little boys."—Edinburgh Dispatch.

Not Looking for Trouble.

"Do you ever go through your husband's pockets at night?" "Goodness, no. I've been married three times and have no desire to have to try it again."

At a meeting of local option sympathizers at Traverse City last week it was decided not to submit the petitions to the supervisors at the January meeting of the board, because of the uncertain legal status of that meeting, but to hold them until next October, which is a regular meeting. That means that Grand Traverse will be wet for another year at least.

The monthly report for October of the Michigan Asylum for the Insane, located at Kalamazoo, shows a small increase in the attendance over the previous month, which had 1,885 patients on the books as compared to 1,880. Many changes took place during the month, 37 new persons being admitted to that institution, 15 others readmitted for various causes, while 17 were dismissed on trial or probation, 9 were absent for other reasons and a total of 19 deaths took place during the month. At this institution at the end of October there were 954 males and 916 females confined.

Remarkable Offer to Readers of The Charlevoix Sentinel

The Biggest Bargain you Were Ever Permitted to Enjoy.

The SENTINEL has arranged with The Grand Rapids Herald to give our readers the benefit of The Herald's remarkably attractive Bargain Day offer for 1909. This is a rare opportunity for the newspaper readers of this vicinity and The SENTINEL expects to see a splendid response.

For two weeks, from December 15 to January 1, by bringing or sending $2.50 we can give you one full year's subscription to The SENTINEL. The Grand Rapids Daily Herald, The Orange Judd Farmer, and Uncle Remus' Home Magazine. You can transact all the business right here in our office. We can secure the entire combination for you. It gives you your great home paper, The SENTINEL and these other great periodicals for the trivial cost of $2.50. It is a privilege not to be overlooked.

We will send you The Grand Rapids Daily Herald—the premier daily newspaper of Western Michigan whose prise alone at any other time is a dollar for one full year. We will send you The Orange Judd Farmer—a weekly farm journal, which, since 1842, has been the premier farm weekly of the middle west—for one full year. We will send you Uncle Remus' Home Magazine—a great monthly magazine which is today the nation's popular favorite for one full year.

Remember these dates. Bring your money to the office of The SENTINEL. We will see that you secure the full value of the entire combination. Don't pass it up. It's a mighty big bargain.

—The Masonic lodge room is being overhauled and calcimined and a new carpet laid. This does not mean that building plans have been abandoned. These are under consideration for proceding with the construction of the proposed building on their Bridge street lot.

—Fifty Traverse City high school boys are to act as guides during the week of the 87th session of the state grange that none of the thousands who attend the meeting may lose their way. A public information bureau will be maintained in Traverse City during state grange week.

—It will be remembered that the St. Louis Exposition of 1904 awarded a bronze medal to Alfred Van Dusen, of Grand Rapids, for best individual display of fruit, and a silver medal to Charlevoix county for its fruit display. County Clerk Dalton received both medals yesterday, and they will be exhibited at the Traverse City grange meeting.

—Probably Charlevoix will have the pleasure of entertaining the Michigan lawyers at their mid summer meeting. At a meeting of the Charlevoix County Bar Association Monday M. J. Harris, of Boyne City, A. D. Nicholas, of East Jordan and H. W. Kane, of Charlevoix with Judge Mayne as an ex-officio member were appointed a committee to confer with Beulah lawyers and make arrangements for the entertainment and report at the next meeting of the association in February.

—Winter is here. It was discovered first on Tuesday morning by early risers. A mantle of snow covered the face of nature, and it was still coming. The snowed pretty much all day. Sleighing began with baby cutters and fluffy white robes, gradually developing into full grown winter vehicles and more sombre wraps, varying from the bear skin to the fuzzy blanket. Occasionally by the merry jingle of the sleigh bells fell upon the ear and that reminds us: —Did you know that there is a Mutual gas company that probably has invented a sleigh navigating the village streets without horses? It is just as much a phenomenon as it is to tell a skunk out of season. Well, winter is here. Now for the pork barrel and the coal bin.

—Mrs. O. A. Sears will leave next week to attend the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. Thomas.

—Mrs. Robert McDonald joined her husband at Racine on Monday, where they will spend the winter.

—The Baptist Ladies' Aid Society will serve a good and satisfying dinner at the church parlors next Wednesday noon, Dec. 15th. Fancy and useful articles will also be on sale then and during the afternoon.

—Last week William Sutton, of Norwood township, shipped to a Beaver Island farmer ten well bred chesapeake lambs for breeding purposes. An interesting feature of the transaction is the fact that they were five pairs of twins.

—The young people of the Baptist church are planning to give a first class lecture and entertainment course of six numbers during January, February and March. Some first class talent is promised the public at very moderate prices. Fuller announcement later.

—There is now no question but that the state grange that convenes in Traverse City on the morning of Tuesday, December 14, will be the largest and most successful that ever met since the order was organized in Michigan. The grange has a larger membership in Michigan than ever before and the number of delegates is much larger than has been the case in the past owing to a change in the state by-laws.

Don't make the fatal mistake of using strange toilet requisites, without any guarantee as to their quality. If you do you're taking big chances of ruining your complexion. Bad toilet goods are worse than none, for they not only do no good, but many contain ingredients that are actually injurious to the skin.

We can recommend all the toilet helps we sell as being pure, fresh and excellent, containing only elements of high nutritive value to the skin.

LAUNCH IS CAPSIZED

W. S. Stipp Has a Thrilling Experience in the West.

The Everett, Washington, Morning Tribune of November 19th, gives the following account of the capsizing of the launch Norene, near that city the day before. Among the passengers were W. S. Stipp, well known in Charlevoix, and his grandson.

"Nearly a score of lives were in peril for half an hour yesterday when the launch Norene capsized half way between Everett and Mukilteo.

"In the teeth of the most severe southeasterly gale of the season, the Norene, with Capt. W. E. Benderat the wheel, was making for the Merrill Blair landing. Captain Bender saw a fierce squall drive down from the bluff to the eastward and put the helm over to meet it head on. The veering squall struck the Norene broadside and heeled her over on her beam ends. Before she could right herself the curling seas filled her. She lifted a little and settled down while the passengers and crew scrambled for the weather bulwarks. Five of the passengers on the leeward side were thrown into the water. One of these was a child of five years and another his aged grandfather, W. S. Stipp. With much difficulty the people in the water were gotten aboard the capsized launch.

"In a letter to the Tribune, W. S. Stipp, one of the passengers on the Norene when she capsized Thursday, Mr. Stipp says: 'My grandson and I were never thrown into the water of the Norene. No effort was made by those on board to get us back more than to call after us to come back as they thought the would stick to deeper. The facts are: When the cabin became deluged we climbed out through the windows and took refuge by the railings on the elevated side of the boat, and had just time to adjust life preservers when she sank, leaving the rail about two feet below the water. There being no rescuing parties in sight from Everett or Mukilteo, I decided to swim ashore with my grandson, Raphael C. Kinsey, nephew of W. C. Stipp. After discussing the taking off of my storm coat I only substituted and used it as support. We then took to the water which was already up to my waist and made fine headway for the shore considering the hard breeze and receding tide. When a little over half way from the wreck to the shore two noble fellows came with a row boat and hurried us in.

The Fishermen.

Charlevoix always extends a hearty welcome to the strangers within its gates, whether it be the individual or the organized body of men or women.

Its welcome to the Fishermen's Association, in session here, is sincerely cordial. This is true because the industry which this association represents is one that has been more than forty years been linked with the commercial interests of the town and where it has grown from the operation of a few small sail-boats to the use of the most modern appliances, requiring the investment of fully one hundred men.

Charlevoix greets the fishermen because, also, it realizes that the industry is a greater one than most legitimate industries, is based on the one basal by laws that do not always dovetail into each other, and that are frequently enforced "not wisely but too well," and on the other hand by the battling elements of wind and wave that are a constant menace to life and property.

Charlevoix welcomes the fishermen by reason of an intelligent understanding of the physical and financial dangers that attach to their calling. They are a brave army of men, the fisherman, and they deserve fair treatment and profitable emoluments with the risks taken.

The SENTINEL hopes that the present convention will result in good to them personally as well as to the important industry which they represent.

Charlevoix welcomes the fishermen.

Charlevoix Boy Promoted.

D. H. Stacks, son of E. S. Stacks, of this city, and better known by his Charlevoix friends as Lou, and now with the Illinois Steel Company of Chicago, has just been promoted to the very responsible position as assistant engineer of that company. This position requires a very thorough knowledge of the manufacture of steel in all its branches and is an example of what close attention to details and hard work will accomplish.

SWIFT IN TROUBLE

The Beulah House Manager Arrested On Charge of Taking Indecent Liberties.

The shocking news is being published in the state papers that Herman L. Swift, manager of the Beulah House for Boys at Boyne City, was arrested Thursday on complaint of Elliott Fay, a thirteen year old in state of the Home, on the charge of taking improper liberties with him and several other boys.

Swift was arraigned the same day, and furnished bail in the sum of fifteen hundred dollars, W. H. White and S. C. Smith signing the bonds. Swift claims it is a conspiracy among a few boys who want to leave the Home. He protests his innocence, and is confident that the conspiracy will be exposed.

The Beulah House has, under the management of Mr. Swift, gained an enviable reputation all over Michigan as a model of its kind, and has received much financial aid from many Michigan cities. Mr. Swift has exhibited qualities that peculiar fit him for the work, and has at ways had a wonderful hold on the boys of his institution—ruling with kindness and rare judgment. We shall not believe these charges until they are proven beyond the shadow of a doubt. In a colony of boys of the nature of those at the Beulah Home it is not strange if there are some bad ones, capable of combining against the controlling power of the institution, however benevolently that power is exercised. In fact, while some of them are there solely because they are homeless, a large majority are waifs, and many others of an unruly and vicious nature who are sent there by parents.

We shall believe Mr Swift innocent until the evidence is overwhelming that he is guilty.

TUG OTTAWA BURNED

After towing the steamer Hoyt, valued at $300,000, from her perilous position on the Outer Island reef of the Apostles, the big wrecking tug Ottawa, valued with her equipment at $50,000, went up in a spectacular blaze, the glare of which lit up the sky for miles around off Red Cliff, Chequamegon bay, Lake Superior, Monday evening of last week. Spontaneous combustion of oil-soaked waste is thought to have caused the fire.

The crew of women fought desperately for two hours, but were unable to quench the flames until the boat had been burned to the water's edge. Capt. Cooper had just returned from a business trip ashore when the fire was discovered.

Capt. Reid, of the Reid Wrecking Co., Sarnia, Ont., owners of the Ottawa, says the vessel was insured for $35,000, but three complete diving outfits and much valuable machinery on board were burned or sunk, which makes the grand loss greater.

The Ottawa was a wooden boat, formerly the tug Boscobel, built in 1884. She had a length of 131 feet and a beam of 28 feet.

The Reid company will receive $15,000 for the work of releasing the Hoyt, which had been abandoned to the underwriters.

Local interest is given this marine disaster, owing to the fact that the Ottawa only left Charlevoix two weeks ago, having made this her headquarters in the effort to rescue the steamer Falcon stranded on South Fox Island. She was here most of the time for ten days, owing to bad weather.

While she was at a strong boat, she was old, and the opinion is freely expressed among marine people that she was well sold at $35,000.

FISHERMEN'S CONVENTION.

The Lake Michigan Fishermen's Association in Session Here.

The Lake Michigan Fishermen's Association, representing all coast bordering on Lake Michigan, began its session here Tuesday, and is still in session as we close these columns, (Wednesday noon.)

The attendance is not as large as was expected, owing to the inclemency of the weather. The Beaver Island delegation, especially, were prevented from attending, the steamer Beaver being detained there Tuesday night by the storm.

The object of the association is to discuss matters that pertain to the fisheries industries, and formulate such policies as shall tend to improve the business.

As this paper goes to its readers (Wednesday evening) the fishermen are being banqueted at Baker's Inn, and the crowd, as we write, promises to be an enjoyable affair.

The President of the Association is Herman Balow of St Joseph.

Boyne City Man Drowned.

Erastus Butler, a Boyne City boatsheeman, and one of the jury panel in attendance at circuit court here, was drowned by falling off Pegan's dock at about seven o'clock Sunday evening.

The steamboatmen Arthur and Conrad Meier had arrived down from Boyne City and were tying up at the dock owing to the severe gale, and the steamer, large river, just arrived from the lower lakes, was also lying at the dock.

As near as can be learned, Butler was trying to hand the Meier by a narrow plank. No one saw him fall, but the sailors on the barge heard a cry and a splash. The plank and a life preserver were thrown in, but the man had sunk for the last time. The body was recovered within a half hour, and taken to Soo Sunday morning.

Butler was 53 years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

SAILORS IN CONVENTION

The Great Lakes Seamen's Association, which was formed at a convention held in Chicago last August, will hold its second convention in Charlevoix next year, if the plans of the officers of the association are carried out. The convention will be held in the last week of August, and will be attended by delegates from all the Great Lakes ports.

The Great Lakes Seamen's Association is a strong organization, and has been very active in the interests of its members since its formation. It has been instrumental in securing the passage of a law by congress providing for the inspection of the boilers of all steamers on the Great Lakes, and has been active in the matter of the enforcement of the law requiring the employment of a certain number of men on each vessel.

Charlevoix is a good place for the convention to be held, and the city will be in good shape to entertain the delegates next August. The Charlevoix Commercial Club will be asked to co-operate with the committee in charge of the convention, and will undoubtedly do so.

The Redemption of David Corson

By CHARLES FREDERIC GOSS

CHAPTER XX.

The steamer with David Corson embarked after his overland journey from New York City in Pittsburg, had descended the Ohio almost as far as Cincinnati before Corson realized that those which were concerned with Perpetua and his spiritual development could awaken any interest in his mind. But as the boat approached Charles's home, the places, the persons and the incidents of his childhood began to present themselves to his consciousness in a new light. Life is a great teacher, sometimes upon the place of his birth and the friends of his youth took prominent place in his mind.

He found, on inquiry, that the boat was to remain at Cincinnati for several hours, and that there would be time enough for him to visit the town, say to his old home and look before she journeyed down the river. He decided to do so, and observed with satisfaction that those qualities of the boat upon the stopping stone across the Ohio, and of the town, had grown permanent and painted a feature of his memory, for he had given to the swift emotions of his youth. He saw his wife in the boat, and the thought made his footfalls rapidly and excited them forebrood. The discovery of this fact gave a new zest and hope to life.

In a few moments after he had landed at the familiar wharf he was crossing the Ohio River, rushing away over those beautiful rolling hills which fill the mind of the traveler with the dazzling delight in their variety, their fertility and their beauty. He noticed for the first time since he had left the farm that his mind had been for years, years from passion or pain to become its full attention upon the charms of Nature. He drawn on him now like a mere observer. The scenes of the houses, as long unfamiliar, so easy, so graceful, so suggestive of peace of life to key his spirits to his environment, for it is an unusual pleasure to be enjoyed to the middle and feel the thrill of power and rapid motion. The sights were brilliant, the skies glowed, the pulses leaped. He gathered up the beauty of the world around him in great showers of delicious and thrilling sensations. Long forgotten objects came sweeping across the hills, rich with the vivid memories of youth, and brought with them precious sensations of a life long forgotten in the past. The rich and varied colors of field and sky and forest fed his starved soul with one kind of beauty; and the sweet sounds of the outlying world the universal hum with another. The flow of cattle, the bleating of sheep, the crowing of chanticleers, the cackling of hens, the gaits of turkeys, the multitudinous noises of the birds combined him to a sort of musical symphony. For the first time, since his relationship to Perpetua had cut out of life a dream, and these few idiots, he measure the forces, purpose of a new and grander life. For, if the heart, the mind, the soul of a single creature be so and for many moments? So he said to himself, as he contemplated the great power and the unknown of his past energy and the unknown of his future. There is a quiet feeling in my heart about the future that grows with the passing days. God is good, and he will give us strength to meet whatever comes. We must live, and while we live we will hope for the best. Life is a gift, and it is our duty to enjoy it.

"Oh! it is good to hear you say that! It comforts me. I think it cannot be possible that we should not be able to escape from this darkness if we are willing to follow the divine light."

"I think so, too," he said.

His words were spoken with such assurance as to awaken a vague surprise that he had reasons which he had not told. She pressed his hands and brought him to explain.

"Oh! tell me," she said, eagerly; "is there anything new? Has anything happened?"

"It seems," he answered, slowly, "we have been strangely not blind, dear. It is not quite so bad as it seemed, for I did not kill him."

"You did not kill him! What do you mean?"

"No, it is a strange story! I thought I had killed him. I knew murder was my heart. It was so full of hatred that the blow was not fatal. I felt him in the road for dead. For, then, I had no did not life; he did not die."

"He did not die then? Have you seen him? Is he dead now? Tell me! Tell me!"

IT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

Plenty of Plagiarisms Quite as Bad as That of Kitchener.

Fifty-are telling a tale on Lord Kitchener and how his speech, when he made farewell to India, was practically a repetition of the address of Lord Lytton, on a similar occasion, two or three years ago, and what sounds which the Kitchener enthusiasts of the city consider the unfortunate part of the matter—the unfortunate part of the matter—the unfortunate part of the matter—

NORTHERN MICHIGAN CROPS

Charles Ward Sold His Northern Michigan Apple Crop on the Trees This Year, or $45,000.

Deputy State Land Commissioner Augustus G. Carton says that one trouble with farmers in Roscommon and Crawford counties, and others of the northern counties of the lower peninsula is that they have tried to grow only the same crops as farmers in the southern counties, and as a result have been left somewhat as a farmer in southern Michigan would be if he tried to raise Florida fruits and cotton and rice. But there are hardy fruits and crops which can be raised in the northern counties of Michigan with extraordinary results.

The hardiest apples are being grown successfully in the northern counties and perhaps one of the best proofs of this fact is the recent sale by Charles Ward, who sold this fall his crop of apples from about 2,000 acres for $45,000 without touching the crop!

Several years ago this same man started to plant an orchard of 20,000 acres of apples, no what was then thought to be land that would not raise white beans. In fact it will be remembered that this same man was later examined as to his sanity, several prominent men from the upper country making affidavit at the time that apples could not be grown there, and that a man who contemplated such an act was certainly insane. But the success with which Ward has met proves beyond a doubt "that he knew what he was doing. Ward's orchard which is near Frederic and which now comprises about 2,000 acres, is being added to each year, and in a short time it is expected that the full 20,000 acres will be set out to apple trees.

Carton further states that it is not profitable to raise the earlier varieties of apples in that country, but the late fall fruit that comes from that section is without a doubt the finest in Michigan and competes with the large varieties grown in the western states.

Michigan's Potato Crop.

Michigan once more comes to the front this year in the competition with other states, ranks first in the quality of her potatoes and second in quantity. New York state is first in production but has to give way to Michigan when it comes to quality. Mr. A. Pattarkeine vice president of the Pere Marquette railway has the following to say of Michigan potatoes: "Michigan's potato production this year is estimated at 34,500,000 bushels and how much money the crop will bring the farmers cannot be estimated, as there has been little movement over the railroads, most of the farmers are holding back for the later and tighter prices. Much of the big crop comes from the former pine barrens.

People go wild over California and Florida fruit lands, but they could do as well and in many cases better if they would grow potatoes and beans in Michigan. Michigan stands first in beans and all its products stands high in the east. Michigan eggs bring two cents a dozen over other eggs in the New York market. The most climate and abundant water account for Michigan's eminence in its own lines of production."

General Passenger Agent, Mosier of the Pere Marquette who attended the Chicago Tribune land exhibit in Chicago last week says that Michigan has a choice collection of exhibits and is the only state east of Chicago in the exhibit.

Alone in her Misery at Midnight

unmindful of sharp pains, drafts, storms on cold, Mr. J. Atkins worked in night watchman at Hanover Springs, Tenn. Such exposure gave him a severe cold that settled on his lungs. At last he had to give up work. He tried many remedies but all failed till he used Dr. King's New Discovery. "After using one bottle" he writes, "I went back to work as well as ever." Severe colds stubborn coughs, inflamed throats and sore lungs, hemorrhages, croup and whooping cough get quick relief and prompt cure from the glorious medicine. Sold by all druggists. Northern Michigan

The Michigan state grange will hold its annual session at Traverse City, commencing on the morning of December 14 and continuing for four days. This meeting of the state grange promises to be the largest and most important ever held in the history of the state; every county in both peninsulas will be represented by accredited delegates. The body will consist of nearly five hundred delegates, representing over nine hundred live, active granges in the state.

Cadillac Express: Warren Winnie entered the city clerk's office this morning and threw down on the floor a bunch of 1,113 sparrow's heads and claimed the bounty, two cents a head. In return he received from Clerk Johnston $22.26. He had been but a few days gathering the birds. Mr. Winnie uses a dope on wheat which he sprinkles under trees and on top of flat buildings where the birds very soon alight and get to the wheat. When they fly up to a tree they invariably fall dead to the ground. He does not give away his secret as he finds it an easy means of getting money. He went to Big Rapids today to carry on his work.

Traverse City Eagle: Ralph Smith and Wallace Olive returned today from the north woods, where they have been spending a few days hunting deer. From the report they make of conditions in the upper peninsula there must have been a slaughter of men greater than that of the deer footed animal, and far more than ever before known in the history of the state. Then men are said to have given out the information that on the train which brought them home there were five dead men, all of them having been shot in the woods while hunting, and only four deer. According to this proportion there must have been a large number of fatalities this season that have not been reported.

Traverse City Record. The fourth Methodist minister to arrive from England to take charge of a church in Grand Traverse district arrived this week, the Rev. Charles E. Tilies coming to take charge of the Methodist church at Northport. The Rev. Mr. Tilies is a young man of much ability, and no doubt will continue the good work done for the last two years by the Rev. W. D. Robinson. The other pastors who come from England are the Rev. Arthur Edwards, now located at Sherman, the Rev. Frank Harwood, at South Boardman, and the Rev. George W. Hews, who is in charge of the work at Harrietta. All three were sentired by the Rev. A. T. Ferguson, district superintendent, in September.

John Caldwell, who has been engaged in farming near Cadillac, Western Michigan, for a number of years credited with the following statement: "People that come into this country looking for homes are not taking any chances, for there are well improved farms in the midst and all around the unimproved stump lands. I can give you several farms which have obtained in net profit on potatoes from $20 to $100 per acre yearly, three years out of five. I have neighbors that leave of clearing above all expense $40 per acre on stump lands. Now I am satisfied that there is no better locality in the United States for a man of moderate means to make a home than right here in Northern Michigan for the reasons that we have a fine, healthy climate, pure water and never fail to grow good crops.

Hart Courier: W. E. Snyder and George A. Hawley returned yesterday afternoon from Detroit, where they had been closing up the purchase of what is probably the largest apple orchard in Michigan. The land, 192 acres in all, is located twenty miles north of Traverse City, on the peninsula which forms the western shore of Grand Traverse bay and was bought from the Ottawa Resort association. On the land is a splendid house, good barns and other farm buildings, windmill, spraying outfits, etc., but most important of all, it contains 70 acres of apple orchard, the trees ranging by actual count 2,040. This orchard is thirty years old and in its prime. The property is located close to the Ottawa resort hotel and contains many resort lots. Messrs. Snyder and Hawley intend engaging a manager from this section to take charge of the property and conduct it under their supervision. Several spraying outfits, tents, etc., will be added to the equipment secured with the place, and the business conducted in the best scientific manner. Their success in raising and handling fruit here is a guarantee that their new property will be made to pay dividends.

Traverse City Eagle: Quite often persons come up with a freak, but the latest one in this section is that of an animal that is on exhibition in the building at 215 Front street long. The peculiar part about this animal is that it is half cat and half rat, which is a most unheard of combination or freak of nature. The man exhibiting the curiosity says that he brought it from the vicinity of Beaconia, where it was born with several kittens some three or nine ago, from the very first creating more than a little curiosity because of its strange shape and lack of hair or fur such as that worn by other members of this family and other cat families. Later a portion of the body became covered with hair, but the head and body never really resembled a cat, while the rump of the animal is exactly like that of a large rat, even to the long tail and from the middle of the body the rear half is minus hair entirely. The little fellow is as tame and gentle as any other of the kitten kind and purrs as does any other feline, which fact makes the freak all the more noticeable. None of the many persons who have seen the animal recall ever seeing anything like it before.

Explains Case of "Swell Head."

A medical journal declares the belief that education increases brain cells and there is delusive. Certainly, enlarged cranium is no sign of brain and the error of mistaking a bald head for a high forehead is very common.
